SUMMER HEAT MADE LULL IN WASHINGTON SOCIAL AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—There is a decided lull in Washington's social affairs, so far as high official society goes. The intense heat of the summer made the usual round of garden parties and out of door teas practically impossible. Every one who can has gone over to the Virginia hills, or some nearby resort, and those who are free have made New England the trail they follow this month.

Vice President Curtis and sis sister-hostess Mrs. Gann, closed their apartment at the Mayflower as soon as congress adjourned, and opened the Gann house in the suburbs, where Mr. and Mrs. Gann have lived a number of years and which has been the winter home of the vice president ever since Mrs. Curtis died six years ago.

Mrs. Gann will receive next winter along the same line as in the past, which means that every Wednesday during the season her beautiful apartment will be crowded from 4 to 6 with women from the tip-top notch of Washington official life. Last year her Wednesdays at home were the most notable of all social events.

The Connecticut delegation did its part last season in creating pleasant affairs for the congressional set, Mrs. Bingham and Mrs. Fenn doing more than others in the social life. The Binghams' occupy a large apartment up in the finest residential section. It is so large that one feels they could put an ordinary suite of rooms right in the middle of their great music room, without taking up too much space. In that room is a grand piano, which is used for accompaniments for Mrs. Bingham, who is a fine violinist, and at one of the musicals given last winter by the Congressional club, was the soloist of the affair.

Senator and Mrs. Walcott occupy the Hoover house, where Mr. and Mrs. Hoover lived during his term as secretary of commerce, and to which they may return at the expiration of his term of service as president. Mrs. Wolcott had been an invalid for several years, but has regained her health, though is still a bit cautious about overdoing, and so did not entertain last winter, except in a small and informal way.

Mrs. Fenn carries off the palm as a society adept. She not only entertains much at the Fenn apartment, but is in demand at many dinners, teas and card parties given by members of the administration and congressional sets. The other women of the delegation specialize in home life, but do their part in carrying on as members of the official set, though to a less degree.

Mrs. Hoover has fully recovered from her fall of last April, and is now driving her own car back and forth from the Rapidan camp, and around the city. Her insistence that she drive, as in the days before Mr. Hoover became president, caused a storm of protests, but she let them all go unheeded. People thought it unsafe to have her on the lonely country roads without the safeguard of secret service men, or even a chauffeur, but Mrs. Hoover is a woman to whom fear or precautions are strangers, so as soon as she recovered, she took up her former custom of self-driving. Usually she takes along a group of women friends and all seem to enjoy it immensely.

Mrs. Hoover expects to entertain next season along the usual line of state receptions, so it is said, but of course no dates or details have yet been given out.

That the Hoovers will keep up informal dinners and luncheons for their personal friends is shown by the number of servants added to the white house staff, which now numbers 50 persons. The Hoovers either fill the cottages at Rapidan each Sunday, or give Sunday night suppers to which a dozen or twenty personal friends are bidden.

All eyes and ears of the cabinet and diplomatic circle are turned towards the president, to learn when he will take that long promised vacation. Until he does so, no one dares leave their post. Many of the women of foreign delegations went abroad this summer, but the men of the diplomatic corps, with few exceptions, stay at the capitol until the president leaves the city. And his cabinet and the under-secretaries are tied fast to their moorings at the capital, till he gives the word they can go. With the mercury ranging from 95 to 110 day after day and week after week, it's been a pretty tough proposition for some of them.

PICK FEMININE TYPE BEST FOR LEADERSHIP

Mrs Frank Dodson, who is urged by republican committee women to reconsider her resignation as director of the women's division of the party, is that sort.

She inclines to floating chiffons and wide-brimmed hats rather than severe garments.

She frowns upon the woman who uses her sex appeal to get ahead in politics. She believes women should win on their merit.

Yet her feminine characteristics, her gentle manner, her low voice and gracious smile, republican committee-women say, have helped make her a leader.

Even on a hot August day Mrs. Dodson looks cool and unruffled in blue chiffon and long strands of pearl beads as she sits at her desk.

She has little to say about her resignation or future plans.

She turns the conversation into safe channels about kitchens and clothes. She recently moved into a kitchenette apartment where she can have some of her own cooking and knows where one can find bargains in dresses.

Before September 1 she hopes to get away to her mountain home in Shickshinny, Pa., where it is quiet and cool.

LEAVES 11 CATS, 7 DOGS AT JAPANESE PALACE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—(AP)—Mrs. Charles Burnett, an American woman who organized the Japanese Humane society, left seven dogs and 11 cats at the imperial palace in Tokio when she returned to this country.

Knowing her love for animals the Japanese were constantly making Mrs. Burnett gifts of prize canines and tabbies.

It was through her friendship with Baroness Takeko Kujo, sister to the present Empress Dowager, that Mrs. Burnett was able to do so much rescue work for Japanese animals. The Baroness gave her support to the project.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Aug. 17—(AP)—Mrs. Emma B. Klingeman, of Lockhart, Texas, has been elected president of the Pecan Growers association, which has men members from Texas, Oklahoma, Georgia, Louisiana and Arkansas. Her experiments have greatly aided pecan producers.

Tulle and Taffeta for Debs.

PARIS, Aug. 17—(AP)—Tulle and taffeta ribbon combined make some of the crisp dance dresses debutantes will wear next winter if Paris has its way.

One such model has triple flounces banded diagonally with taffeta. The bodice and upper skirt are striped with black taffeta on tulle worn over a flesh satin foundation.

Net Dance Frocks for Debs

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—(AP)—Dance frocks of cool dotted net in various colors are being worn by Miss Caroline Hyde, daughter of the secretary of agriculture and other girls of the younger society set.

The dresses are made with full flared skirts, tight waists and short puff sleeves which are often finished off with small ribbon bows.

Red Lacquer Cane Matches Scarf

Though having been in the wilds of Indo-China for over a year Miss Douglass looks like London or Paris in her smart street attire when she visits the capital.

With the red accessories she wears a thin grey suit.

NORWICH TOWN

CAMP MEETING SINGER AT FIRST CONG. CHURCH

There was a congregation of about eighty at the First Congregational church Sunday morning when Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey preached on "Launch Out Into the Deep." Luke 5:4, "Now, when He had left speaking, He said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep and let down your nets for a draught." The fourth chapter of St. Mark was the Scripture lesson. A company of young people, mostly children, took the place of the regular choir, also sang the anthem. Herbert L. Yerrington, who has returned from his vacation, was at the organ, also played the accompaniments, when Curtis M. Saulsbury, tenor soloist from New Haven, gave to the great pleasure of the congregation the following spirituals: I Want To Be a Christian In My Heart, Were You There When They Crucified My Lord? (offertory solo), and Nobody Knows the Trouble I see. Mr. Saulsbury, who is one of the singers during camp meeting at Willimantic this week, was a valuable part of the morning worship, stated Rev. Mr. Bailey who suggested that a special collection be taken for him by two of the ushers who stood at the doors on either side as the congregation passed out. Mention was made that this special guest came to this town at his own expense, and for that reason appreciation for his fine singing was shown in this way.

The platform was decorated with hydrangeas, gladioli and dahlias and a decorative basket of gladioli were on a table. As the primary class marched out to attend Sunday school in the chapel, the hymn sung was I Love to Tell the Story.

The topic of the Young People's C. E. service Sunday evening was Is Education Worth What It Costs? Proverbs 3:13-18.

ANN BORODELL DENISON SOCIETY ORGANIZED AT MYSTIC SATURDAY

MYSTIC, Aug. 17—The Ann Borodell Denison society, Inc., was organized here Saturday when by-laws were accepted and officers elected. Horace Hatch of New York, was elected as the first president.

Family reunions are frequently held at the present time on a small scale. Many are living who remember the three-day celebration of the descendants of Walter Palmer held in Stonington borough near the railroad station in 1881. Crowds were there to watch the celebration, coming by train and the faithful horse while every kind of a four wheel vehicle furnished transportation. There were not enough hitching posts and trees to accommodate the horses and they were taken out of the wagon and hitched to it. They were gala days for the surrounding country folks. The historical set pieces of fireworks was the crowning event and never have been equaled there since. Walter Palmer was one of the first settlers of the town and his son Gershom, married Ann, daughter of Captain George Denison and wife Ann Borodell Denison, by whom he had ten children. And now half a century has passed and an eighth descendent of Captain George Denison, Ann Borodell Denison Gates (Mrs. N. Stanton Gates) was instrumental in having the Denison society incorporated under the date of January 11, 1930. In the last week of May she sent out notices bearing the picture of her home, the Denison Manor, and of the incorporation and later an invitation to meet at her home would be sent to the Denison descendants. The invitations dated July 10, 1930, gave the date of Saturday, August 16th, for the first annual meeting of the George and Ann Borodell Denison society as guests at her home. Mrs. Gates sent out 900 invitations and 700 were accepted.

GEORGE L. DENNISON
Treasurer Dennison Society

The Denison Manor is situated a little over a mile east of Mystic in Pequotsepos valley and to reach it automobiles were used entirely not one old Dobbin and buggy was seen, showing the change of method of travel. Every kind of automobile was seen from the well known Ford to the most luxurious make. In counting them parked on the grounds we counted at least 170 while many persons were brought and called for later.

Street Flags Displayed.

The visitors driving through Mystic quickly noticed the honor shown the Denison society in having the street flags out, same as on patriotic occasions.

The drought all over the country was ended, in this section at least, for Saturday morning the rain was coming down steadily and with frequent showers until after noon when the clouds began to lighten and the sun shone later in the afternoon.

Upon reaching the Denison Manor the visitor found a table in front of the house to register his name and address also cards for membership in the society. A choice was given of life, contributing and active membership. Chairs were placed in the garage to accommodate and protect guests from the rain. One hundred were admitted at a time by card to go through the house, Mrs. Gates, beautifully gowned in white, received with Mr. and Mrs. Horace Hatch, Miss Kariska S. Gates, Gurdon Gates, Mrs. George R. Woods, Mrs. Harry C. Cornwall, Miss Annie B. Greenman, Mrs. Frank L. Williams. After seeing the house and its priceless furnishings the guests assembled in the large tent in an adjacent lot, filled with hundreds of chairs, where luncheon was served by caterers, the menu consisting of chicken salad, sandwiches, rolls, ice cream, fancy cookies, iced coffee. At 3 p. m. Horace Hatch of New York called the meeting to order and read the articles of association and by-laws as follows:

Officers Elected

A motion was made and seconded and it was voted to adopt them. Mr. Hatch then read the list of officers elected at a meeting of the incorporators and trustees held at Mrs. Gates' home on Friday evening; President, Horace Hatch, New York; vice president, Mrs. Harry Whitney, New York; recording secretary, Miss Thankful Cornwall, Short Hills, N. J.; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Herman A. Myers, Stonington; treasurer, George L. Denison, Stonington; trustees, Mrs. N. Stanton Gates, Mystic; Charles D. Noyes, Norwich; Frank L. Williams, Ridgewood, N. J.

"Now that necessary formalities of organization have been completed it is just as well to say a few words regarding the object of this organization. Through the generosity of Mrs. Gates we are assured of headquarters in the future ideal on account of historical and family associations. As this association grows we expect to have available more data regarding the Denison family. In this connection would suggest that documents or relics be made available to this society by loan or gift.

"The response made by Denison descendants to Mrs. Gates' introductory letter shows how widespread is the interest and respect for the founders' family in this country and making a permanent foundation will give future generations a place to tie to."

After the address a rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. Gates for her hospitality in entertaining the Denison descendants. The meeting adjourned. A table near the tent was busy registering members of the society. Friends and strangers greeted each other and those who had not been through the house before the lunch and meeting were given an opportunity to do so and it was after 5 p. m. when the last were admitted. On every side one could hear approval of Mrs. Gates' generosity and foresight in eventually giving her home and founding the Denison society.

One Way Traffic

The systematic handling of the cars and parking them in a lot kept the street clear and the one way traffic for the day prevented confusion. It was interesting to note the different states represented with registration plates. Of the distant places, Cuba, California, Arizona, Florida, Iowa, Ohio, Nebraska, Missouri, were noticed while Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island had many.

GARDNER LAKE CONGREGATION HEARS CAMP CADAHO BOYS

Sunday afternoon at Gardner Lake Methodist Episcopal church, boys from Camp Cadaho sang Dvorak's "Massa Dear" under direction of Samuel Gillingham. The selection was well rendered and was a pleasing feature of the service. Prof. Charles H. Sword, organist at the church, gave the singers a chord and they sang without accompaniment. The soloist at the service was Mrs. Elizabeth Von Muller of the First Unitarian church, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mrs. Von Muller sang in most pleasing voice "Face to Face", accompanied by Prof. Sword at the organ. Mrs. Von Muller will sing next Sunday, at the closing service of the summer season. The pastor of the church, Rev. George Warren Potter, preached on "Wayside Temptations", psalm 140:4,5 "Keep me, O Lord from the wicked, they have set a trap by the wayside". The congregational singing was in charge of Samuel Gillingham, a counselor at Cadaho. Mr. Gillingham, song leader last summer, volunteered to help in the absence of the regular leader, Aldisi Freeman. Large groups of campers from the four camps, conducted by Milo Light, Adajuan, Jaunita, Tohaci and Cadaho attended the service, in charge of the senior Counselors, Norma Aleck and Wilbur McLane. The congregation not only filled the church, but a number of those attending were seated in the vestibule. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Carter of Norwich Town accompanied the pastor to the lake service.

LOSING WEIGHT?
MAYBE IT'S WORMS

MYSTERIOUS loss of weight may mean that your little one is harboring worms which are robbing her of nourishment. Worms are much more common than most mothers think.

Look also for the following symptoms: grinding of teeth, picking the nose, crossness, crying in sleep, offensive breath, loss of appetite, nausea or general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present.

Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. Even if worms are only suspected they give the child

has made the oven
a safer place for cakes

MAKE THIS TEST—See for yourself how Calumet Baking Powder acts twice to make your baking better. Put two level teaspoons of Calumet into a glass, add two teaspoons of water, stir rapidly five times and remove the spoon. The tiny, fine bubbles will rise slowly, half filling the glass. This is Calumet's first action—the action that takes place in your mixing bowl.

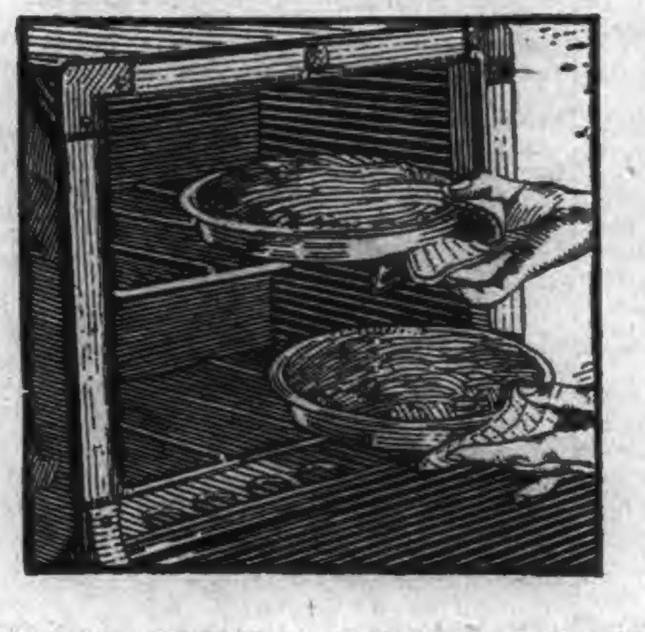
After the mixture has entirely stopped rising, stand the glass in a pan of hot water on the stove. In a moment, a second rising will start and continue until the mixture rises to the top of the glass. This is Calumet's second action—the action that takes place in your oven. Make this test today. See Calumet's Double-Action which protects your baking from failure.



CALUMET Baking Powder gives you the greatest possible help in preventing baking failures. For Calumet acts twice—and this double-action makes your cake come out successfully even though you may not be able to regulate your oven temperature accurately.

Calumet acts first in the mixing bowl. Then, when you put your cake into the oven, the second action occurs, lifts the batter right up and holds it until the cake is perfectly baked—fine-grained, fluffy, beautiful! Bake a Calumet cake and see why Calumet is the most popular baking powder in the world.

Only One Level Teaspoon of Calumet to a Cup of Sifted Flour!

That's the usual Calumet proportion. Be sure to follow it even though you may have been using nearly twice as much with other baking powders. You'll be delighted with this economy! And more than delighted with the results Calumet gives you. Perfect texture! Perfect flavor!

All baking powders are required by law to be made of pure, wholesome ingredients. But not all are alike in their action. Not all will give you equally fine results in your baking. Calumet is scientifically made of exactly the right ingredients, in exactly the right proportions to produce perfect leavening action—Double-Action.

REVELATION MADE IN FOOD PRICES PROBE IN NEW YORK

Testimony Given That the Utah Poultry Producers Were Picketed and Boycotted Because They Sold Direct to Retailers, Thus Passing the Jobbers' Profit Along to the Consumer—Truckman Told of Having His Tires Punctured With an Ice Pick While He Was Getting a Load of Utah Eggs—Police Protection Promised.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18—(AP)— State officials investigating rising food prices were told today that, because the "regular set-up" in the egg market was threatened when the Utah Poultry Producers association began selling to retailers, thus passing the jobber's profit along to the consumer, the Utah organization had been picketed and boycotted.

Benjamin Brown, director of markets for the Utah association, testified that after he contracted with the Jewish Grocers' association to furnish a carload of Utah eggs a day, representatives of a jobbers' association warned him that he was spoiling the "regular set-up" and jobbers' truckmen began picketing his place of business.

This picketing, it was said, took the form of threatening other truckmen, who wanted to deal with the Utah association. One truckman, Anthony Protano, told of having his tires punctured with an ice pick while he was getting a load of Utah eggs.

"A man came up to me," he testified, "and asked, 'Where did you get your eggs?' I told him from the Utah Poultry company, and he said, 'That's why you get your tires punctured.' So I cancelled orders for 130 dozen Utah eggs though there is a demand for them and I would like to be able to get them."

"You be at the Utah company's quarters tomorrow," said Deputy Attorney General William B. Groat, Jr., who is examining the witnesses, "and we will have police there to see that your tires are not cut again."

Brown said the action of the jobbers in refusing to buy Utah eggs and attempting to prevent others from doing so had cut the association's output about in half and eggs which ordinarily would find a ready market were being put in storage.

Samuel Horowitz, manager of the Jewish Grocers' association, testified drivers of the association's trucks were threatened by jobbers and their truckmen for buying direct instead of through the jobbers, though by buying direct the grocers saved from 5 to 20 cents a dozen for themselves and their customers.

During the morning session Groat sought to determine if a new "milk trust" had come into being to regulate the price of milk. Henry Plotka, president of the Jewish grocers, testified that until a week ago he had paid $3.20 for a 40-quart can but that the price was suddenly raised to $4.40 although this was considered a "flush" season and there was no shortage.

An assertion by Deputy Health Commissioner Edward F. Brown that the independent retailer is responsible for advancing food prices was attacked today in a letter from the Jewish Grocers association to Health Commissioner Dr. Shirley W. Wynne.

By giving specific prices of foodstuffs which, the letter said, Brown had misrepresented, the association sought to show his remark that the retailers were making from 300 to 700 per cent profit was "greatly exaggerated."

GANGSTER'S RECORDS BARRED BY STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

CHICAGO, Aug. 18—(AP)—The Jack Zuta "strong box" containing records of transactions between the slain gangster and persons prominent in Chicago politics, became tonight a thing of cards facing collapse beneath the statute of limitations.

"Most of the papers are dated 1927 or earlier," said State's Attorney Swanson tonight. "The statute of limitation in any of these cases is not more than three years, and that bars the grand jury from taking any action on evidence revealed in the box."

Former Judge Emanuel Eller, son of Morris (Boss) Eller, city sealer, appeared before the state's attorney and explained the $250 check drawn to him and found among the Zuta papers. The check, Eller said, was a campaign contribution when he was a candidate for municipal judge in 1922. The check was brought in by workers, he said, and he endorsed it without knowledge of its signer.

Zuta, who was a leader among the Moran-Aiello gangsters, was assassinated at Delafield, Wis., two weeks ago, less than a month after an unsuccessful attempt was made against his life in Chicago.

SECOND AUTOPSY ON BODY OF WILLIAM E. SWIFT

NEW YORK, Aug. 18—(AP)—A second autopsy was performed today on the body of William E. Swift, son of the Chicago packer, by Chief Medical Examiner Charles Norris, who announced that he would request Commissioner of Hospitals J. G. W. Greeff to hold an inquiry into the suicide tomorrow.

As soon as today's autopsy was completed Alden Swift, a brother, took the body back to Chicago for funeral services and burial tomorrow.

Swift killed himself Saturday night in a Park avenue sanitarium with an antiquated revolver. The gun had been in his possession and an attendant had been instructed to get it as soon as Swift went to sleep. As the attendant sat by the bed Swift suddenly pulled the revolver from a shoulder holster and shot himself through the head.

GLADYS O'DONNELL LEADS IN WOMEN'S AIR DERBY

PHOENIX, Ariz., Aug. 13—(AP)—Continuing their nip and tuck race for the lead in the national women's air derby, Gladys O'Donnell, Long Beach, Calif., and Margery Doig, Danbury, Conn., finished the third lap of the Long Beach to Chicago flight here today separtaed by less than five minutes elapsed time.

While Mrs. O'Donnell completed the lap, which began in Calexico, Calif., first, she was followed 10 seconds later by Miss Doig, who gained 40 seconds during the flight. Mrs. O'Donnell's time from Calexico was one hour, 24 minutes. The distance is approximately 180 miles.

INCREASE IN ASSETS OF BANK FOR INTERN'AL SETTLEMENTS

BASEL, Aug. 18—(AP)—An increase of one-fourth is shown in the assets of the Bank for International Settlements in its second monthly report, giving a balance sheet as of July 31, 1930.

Central banks of the various European countries increased heavily their deposits, both for themselves and for accounts they handle.

Cash and securities amounted to 1,303,653,650.25 Swiss francs (about $248,000,000), almost all of this being out at interest in other banks.

RESIGNATION OF HAITIAN CABINET NOT ACCEPTED

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, Aug. 18—(AP)—President Eugene Roy has not yet accepted the resignations of the cabinet, which resigned last Thursday in protest against the appointment of Carl Colvin as director of the service technique.

Some reports say that the president will await a move by Washington, since Colvin is an American and the job is filled under a treaty between Haiti and the United States.

EARNINGS OF ENDURANCE FLIERS WILL TOTAL $43,000

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 13—(AP) — Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, new holders of the world's airplane endurance record, tonight were preparing to cash in with a series of refueling demonstrations at state fairs.

The fliers landed at Lambert-St. Louis field yesterday after 647 hours, 28 minutes and 30 seconds aloft in their monoplane, Greater St. Louis, and thus exceeded by 93 hours and 47 minutes the record of 554 hours established by the Hunter brothers, who landed at Chicago, July 4.

Despite their complaints of a lack of financial interest in their achievements, indications pointed to a larger clean-up for Jackson and O'Brien this year than there was after their endurance flight last year which netted them $37,000 and an airplane.

William Pickens, the fliers' manager, announced he had closed contracts totalling $30,500 for five appearances at fairs, the first to be Jackson-O'Brine day at the Missouri fair at Sedalia, next Saturday.

This will be followed by appearances at Iowa, Minnesota, Ohio and Indiana fairs.

In addition, the fliers earned $8,800 while in the air and will have about $3,500 left from their public subscription flight fund, giving them total earnings of about $43,000.

BESSEMER CITY STRIKERS CHASE "REDS" OUT OF TOWN

BESSEMER CITY, N. C., Aug. 18—(AP)—Bessemer City's striking textile workers today chased out of this village three men whom they characterized as "reds."

Leaders of the 500 employes who walked out at the American mills' two plants here this morning declared, "We're running this ourselves. We don't want any reds or unions in here."

Other than this incident, the day passed off quietly.

Workers said their wage scale had been cut 20 to 30 per cent, but Frank Goldberg, president of the local mills and of four others at Gastonia, asserted the reduction was from five to 25 per cent, and in the case of the lowest paid employes, nothing at all.

Saying the wage cut was made necessary by conditions in the industry, Goldberg added:

"I'm just running the mills to keep the people alive. I'm perfectly satisfied to have them closed down."

He said the wage scale is from $10.80 to $18 a week, but spokesmen for the employes declared it ran from $4 to $10.

J. L. Hanme, Gastonia attorney, addressed a mass meeting of strikers tonight, defining for them their legal rights.

Steamer Tahiti Sinks In The South Pacific

British Ship Had Been in Distress Three Days—317 Occupants Safe.

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Aug. 18—(AP)—The British steamer Tahiti, which had been in distress three days, went down in the South Pacific today after 317 occupants—passengers and crew—were safely aboard, the American steamer Ventura.

The Ventura immediately headed for Pago Pago, the American naval base in Samoa, to discharge its island passengers. Then it will go to San Francisco, to land the Americans and Europeans.

After leaving Wellington for San Francisco, due there August 28, the Tahiti lost its starboard propellor and sprang a leak about 460 miles east of Rarotonga, Cook Islands, while the wireless crackled out calls for aid and ships in those waters raced to the position, the large vessel drifted about 60 miles before other ships came up.

The ship was listing badly but the 142 officers and men remained aboard, pumping desperately to keep her afloat. Eventually they were forced to launch boats and go to the Ventura.

The mails aboard the Tahiti suffered somewhat. Six bags of letters were lost during the transfer to the Ventura and all newspapers and parcels went down. About 50 other bags were water soaked but were saved.

Then the Tahiti called for assistance, ships over the south seas sped in her direction. The Penybryn was the first to arrive, and although the Tahiti's officers preferred to wait for the more commodious Ventura the freighter stood valiantly by all night. Among others which headed for the stricken ship was the Antinous of the United States shipping board.

Reports from the Tahiti early yesterday said that all aboard had taken to lifeboats before the arrival of either the Penybryn or Ventura, but later advices said an order to that effect had been countermanded. Wireless communication was difficult because of atmospheric interference.

SEARCHING FOR ALLEGED ASSAILANT OF A GIRL

STONY POINT, N. Y., Aug. 18—(AP)—State and Bear Mountain police, aided by bloodhounds, today were scouring Harriman Park for William Horrner, 24, of New York, who was alleged to have assaulted a girl encamped near here last night.

The manhunt began this morning after Horrner escaped from Bear Mountain police headquarters under explained circumstances. Police said they had captured Horrner as he was shoving off in a rowboat shortly after the alleged attack about midnight. He dove into the water but surrendered when a policeman threatened to shoot.

Three hundred West Point "plebes," on a march through the park, originally were reported engaged in the search. Academy officials later said however, the Cadets could not be put at such a task, except by orders of the secretary of war and that they were merely keeping watch for the fugitive while going about their ordinary routine.

FRENCH AVIATRIX MET BAD FYLING CONDITIONS

LE BOURGET, France, Aug. 18—(AP)—Bad flying conditions tonight forced Maryse Bastie, French aviatrix attempting to set a new women's duration record, to land here.

She remained aloft nearly 28 hours. The record, held by Lena Bernstein, is 35 hours, 46 minutes and 57 seconds.

Mlle. Bastie reported flying conditions were most unfavorable and when informed that Captain Dieudonne Coste had cancelled his tentative plans for departure on a TransAtlantic flight to New York tomorrow morning she said "Coste is very wise. The weather is bad."

SPEAKEASY FEARED MORE THAN THE SALOON WAS

LITCHFIELD, Aug. 18—(AP)—Mrs. John M. Cates, of New Haven, chairman of the speakers' committee of the Connecticut branch of the women's organization for national prohibition reform, told members of the Litchfield county branch tonight, that "women now fear the speakeasy more than they once feared the saloon." She said prohibition laws have injured the cause of true temperance.

"I think we should call ourselves the women's organization for prohibition reform and for the advancement of the cause of Christian temperance for I resent leaving to the W. C. T. U.'s the exclusive use of the words 'Christian' and 'temperance,'" Mrs. Cates said.

START OF AIR DERBY TO BE DEPENDENT ON WEATHER

CHICAGO, Aug. 18— (AP) —Modern aviation genuflected to the whims of weather today when executives of the tenth annual national air races announced that the non-stop air derby between Los Angeles and Chicago, scheduled for Aug. 27, may be flown on any except the first day of the races, which open at Curtiss airport Aug. 23.

The day of the race will depend entirely on the weather, with Dudley A. Steele, chairman of the derby, a government meteorologist and the five competing pilots constituting a jury to make the decision.

NEW JUNIOR CROSS-COUNTRY AIR RECORD

Political Plot In Florida Charged

By F[illegible] Eberhardt, Pub[illegible] of the Tallahassee [illegible]te News.

[illegible]CKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 18.—[illegible]— Charges and counter-charges reverberated today as an aftermath of the arrest of three men in connection with a reputed plot to assassinate Governor Doyle E. Carlton, of Florida.

Fred O. Eberhardt, publisher and editor of the Tallahassee State News; Frank Ralls, former political campaigner for Carlton, and Henry Halsema, Jacksonville real estate operator, were named in a warrant charging conspiracy to procure the assassination. They were arrested here Saturday night.

Before leaving his cell, after posting $500 bond on the charge, which is a misdemeanor in this state, Eberhardt declared the arrests "part of a political plot." The publisher, who has waged a continuous and bitter editorial campaign against the Carlton administration, termed the case "just a cheap bid for publicity."

Meanwhile, Sheriff W. B. Cahoon whose deputy, C. E. Hooks, swore to the warrant accusing the three men, remained silent about details of the alleged plot. The warrant charged that the "trio with divers other persons whose names are unknown," plotted to hire a gunman to kill the governor. While admitting that the investigation was going forward, the sheriff said he expected no more arrests immediately.

Justice of the Peace J. C. Madison, before whom the warrant was sworn, set the preliminary hearing for next Monday. He fixed the bonds at $500 each. Halsema and Eberhardt made bond immediately, but Ralls remained in jail.

The sheriff announced today that the state would be ready for the preliminary hearing next Monday. Before that time, he said, he will not divulge the evidence on which he based the conspiracy charges.

Governor Carlton was in Pensacola today to review the Florida National Guard unit at Fort Barrancas summer training quarters. He will return to Tallahassee tomorrow.

FIRESTONE SEES ERA OF GREAT PROSPERITY

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Aug. 18—(AP)—Harvey S. Firestone, tire manufacturer and good friend of Henry Ford and Thomas A. Edison, told the Cambridge Industrial association today, that the present slump in business will soon be succeeded by greater prosperity than American has known for ten years.

He took New England to task for a self satisfaction which resulted in the departure of many industries and resultant depression but added that this section of the country was again asserting itself and that it apparently had not suffered much.

Firestone discussed the recent Edison quiz and remarked that he had sat up one night until 1 a. m., correcting papers of the 48 candidates. As to the famous desert question, he said all the examiners disagreed and that he gave 100 per cent to the boy who would have saved the guide, his sweetheart, and himself.

SALOON PROPRIETOR SLAIN BY VAGRANT IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Aug. 18—(AP)—Hundreds of passers-by on busy West Madison street looked on today while a dozen policemen poured pistol and machine gun fire into a combination restaurant saloon in a futile effort to rout a vagrant who had slain the proprietor during an argument. Tear bombs finally brought out the slayer, who gave his name as George Hoffman, a Mexican. His victim was Isaac Protkin.

Witnesses said the men had argued and that Hoffman had suddenly drawn a pistol and shot Protkin through the head. The patrons fled and called police, while Hoffman barricaded himself in a rear room.

Officers found the rear door locked and, entering the front, were met by shots. They retreated and began systematic firing into the building, but Hoffman stood firm. The tear bombs then subdued him.

FED. GOVT. TO PROSECUTE PROVIDENCE BOMBERS

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 18—(AP)—A definite move on the part of the federal government to assume charge of prosecuting those involved in the Providence, Ky., airplane bombing was made today by Federal Judge Charles I. Dawson. He ordered District Attorney Thomas J. Sparks to begin an immediate investigation.

After receiving his instructions in court today, Sparks said he would ask the department of justice office at Cincinnati to assign a special investigator to the case. He called attention to a federal statute that forbids transportation of explosives from one state to another for unlawful purposes, providing a maximum punishment of $10,000 fine, ten years imprisonment, or both.

RAIN HAS TAKEN EDGE OFF THE DROUGHT EMERGENCY

Pastures in Many Sections Have Been Revived—Truck Crops and Gardens Aided—President Hoover May Perfect National Organization This Week—Southern Railroads Today Will Put Into Effect Emergency Rates For the Dry Areas.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18—(AP)—Recent rains in drought areas today led Secretary Hyde to say he believed the "corner" had been turned, and at the same time word came from the white house that President Hoover expects to name his national organization for relief this week.

The agriculture secretary also announced that southern railroads would put into effect emergency rates for the parched belts tomorrow. He said the western railroads were expected to take similar action in a few days. The rates, amounting to 50 per cent on livestock and feedstuffs, are already operating in the east.

Hyde was in a genial mood after a call at the white house. He jovially remarked that "the weather bureau had seen and done its duty." He said he believed the precipitation had taken the edge off the emergency.

President Hoover has been awaiting the shaping of state relief committees before designating the national organization but reports from the states have convinced him he can name its members before the week is out. The national committee will be composed of representatives of the federal farm board, the federal farm loan board, the American Railway association and the Red Cross together with members of the crop reporting board and the extension service of the department of agriculture.

The committee, under the organization outlined at the white house conference last week, will cooperate with state organizations in relief work.

The Virginia Drought Relief committee, the first state group to be named, conferred with government officials today and proposed that the estimated 75,000,000 bushels of wheat held by the Grain Stabilization corporation be made available to stricken farmers for livestock feed. The group was headed by Harry F. Byrd, former governor.

This, Byrd contended, would help toward increasing the price of wheat and would benefit farmers who need feedstuffs for stock.

The Virginia group also urged that temporary suspension of payments due farm loan banks be considered.

The weather bureau said rains had given "substantial relief" in many sections. Additional rains were forecast for tonight and tomorrow in the wide territory between the Mississippi river and the Rocky Mountains.

J. B. Kincer, agriculture meteorologist, said pastures in many sections were revived, truck crops and gardens aided, and late corn, particularly in the northern portions of the belt, benefited.

John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, told President Hoover today only a few appeals had been received from dry sections. He said, however, he believed an expenditure of $5,000,000 would be necessary later for relief.

Secretary Hyde today designated more than 150 additional counties in Arkansas, Virginia, Ohio, Illinois and Missouri, as eligible for the emergency freight rates on feed and livestock authorized by the interstate commerce commission. More than 300 counties were named last week.

Chairman Legge of the federal farm board said the Grain Stabilization corporation could grant advances to responsible wheat purchasing cooperatives but that it could not deal with individuals.

He also expressed the opinion that the corporation could make advances through county or community organizations set up for drought relief.

If any wheat is sold, he added, the corporation would probably replace it. Byrd's estimate of corporation holdings of 75,000,000 bushels of wheat were said by Legge to be a little too high, fixing it at between 60,000,000 and 65,000,000 bushels.

The farm board has recommended to livestock growers in central Montana, where feed is short, that they ship stock to eastern and southern parts of the state where it is more plentiful. It would be too expensive, Legge said, to ship feed to the stock. Legge said feed crops were good in northwestern Kansas, eastern Colorado and western Nebraska.

FOUR PERSONS DROWNED WHEN FERRY BOAT SANK

WESTMORELAND, N. H., Aug. 18—(AP)—Four persons, including a baby, drowned when a ferry plying the Connecticut river from East Putney, Vt., to Westmoreland upset and sank in midstream tonight. There were two automobiles on the ferry.

The drowned were: Mr. and Mrs. Ray Austin, a young couple, and their one year old baby and William Clark, 60, all of Putney, Vt.

The Austin family was trapped in their automobile as it slipped off the careening ferry. Clark was a foot passenger. Thomas Carpenter, another foot passenger and Harry Pierce, driver of the other car aboard, swam ashore.

The ferry, an old fashioned type propelled by a cable which was pulled by hand from the deck, showed decided list as it left the East Putney shore, due to the uneven balance caused by the automobiles being on one side. It tipped over in midstream.

ELOPEMENT MIGHT RESULT IN MANN ACT VIOLATION

Garstin, arrested by federal officers in a small hotel here is under $1,500 bond pending hearing on removal to Washington to face a Mann act charge.

Assistant United States Attorney W. J. McDermitt said a federal warrant issued in Washington charges that Garstin ran away from Pittsburgh with Miss Esther Hoeffer, his stenographer, and lived at a Washington hotel with her, as Mr. and Mrs. Garstin. It is alleged the real Mrs. Garstin lives with her son in Rockville, Md.

CHANGE THIS FALL IN FEMININE HAIR BOB

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—(AP)—The feminine hair bob this fall is a far cry from the bob of this spring and almost no relation of the hair-cut of last year. It has gone sophisticated, and contour bob will likely be its name.

That was the consensus today of experts attending the convention of the American Association of Cosmeticians and Hair Artists.

The smartly coiffeured woman this fall will wear her hair swept back from off her forehead in loose wide waves. The hair will be softly molded to her head. Its length is a compromise between the short hair cut and the long bob. And it won't end in curls. A fluffy crown of glory is simply out.

ALLEGED BANK BANDIT CAPTURED WITH LOOT

TORONTO, Aug. 13.— (AP) — Four hours after two gunmen robbed a branch of the Royal bank in Hamilton of more than $2,000 today, Toronto police arrested Jack Nevins and said they found $2,156 in his pockets.

They declared Nevins, with Norman Sherratt, who was arrested earlier in Hamilton with two loaded revolvers in his possession, will be charged with robbery. Police also said there is a possibility the two men may have been implicated in the recent bank holdup at King, near Toronto, in which $409 was stolen.

Nevins' arrest came after a tip from Toronto that he was to meet Sherratt here, detectives went to the rendezvous and when Nevins drove up in an automobile they subdued him after a struggle.

The arrests were the sequel to a bold hold-up which brought all the police of this section of the country into action in an organized hunt. Two men entered the bank with drawn revolvers, scooped up the money, then jumped into a stolen automobile and fled.

BISHOP ANDERSON PREACHER MONDAY AT WILLIMANTIC CAMP GROUND

WILLIMANTIC CAMP GROUND, Aug. 18.—The service Sunday evening with Dr. George Hugo Birney as the preacher left a good impression and the camp awoke Monday morning in foggy weather which the sun very soon dissipated and the program started with a clear sky.

The plan for the morning programs is that seven standard courses of religious instruction are being simultaneously offered by as many different specialists each forenoon. These are arranged at different places on the ground for two periods of 50 minutes, viz 8:15 to 9:05 and 10 to 10:50. This means the division of the people into groups according to their interest.

There is a joint period from 9:15 to 9:45 each day in a chapel service. The juniors meet at 8:45 under Mrs. J. M. Shaw of Baltic for a "Happy Hour of Music" and at 9:15 they march into the tabernacle to form the choir for the chapel service. At the service Monday this was done impressively as they sang "For the Beauty of the Hills." At this service Monday, Rev. J. S. Pennepacker presided and Rev. M. E. Genter was the speaker, his topic being "The Martyrdom of Stephen."

The address at 11 o'clock by Dr. Birney was on the topic "The Holy Spirit and the Divine Expediency," his text being John 16:7. The speaker urged that the Holy Spirit is a person and his work is personal. The address was an enlargement of the words of the text as to the testimony of the Holy Spirit to human consciousness, (1) as to sin; (2), as to righteousness, and (3), as to judgment, closing with a few tender words as to the helpful ministries of the Divine Comforter.

Bishop William F. Anderson was the preacher Monday afternoon. His text was Matt. 16:26, "For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" He said, among other things, that when he was young he heard many sermons on this text which stressed the danger of losing one's soul in eternity. This danger he regarded as a real one but he regarded it equally possible to lose one's own soul in the present world and he wished to emphasize this peril in the days in which were are now living. The bishop recognized the great value of caring was for the body but urged it of equal importance that we attend to the needs of the soul. He illustrated his points by some personal anecdotes interestingly told and closed with a telling appeal to his audience to find those virtues that can enrich the soul by a surrender to a life union with Christ. Justin Lawrie followed by singing very touchingly two selections which we are now living. The bishop message, viz, "I Shall Not Pass this Way Again" and "Into the Woods My Master Went." Rev. W. H. Bath, of East Providence, former district superintendent, offered the closing prayer and pronounced the benediction.

Martin, killed by a hit-and-run driver near his home in Hebron last Friday night. The police found blood on the car which they found parked outside a restaurant in East Hampton. Biondi, who was partaking of a night lunch, was arrested on the allegation that he was the driver of the car that struck and killed the Hebron minister as the latter was walking along the Hebron-Amston road in the village. COLCHESTER

DEMENTED STRANGER TAKEN TO NORWICH STATE HOSP.

A complaint was made to the local authorities Monday morning by residents of the North Westchester section of the town that an unknown man was wandering about the door-yards in that vicinity, apparently in a crazed condition. Constable Charles E. Lyman, on finding the man on the front steps of the Solomon & Shapiro store, took him in his car to the office of Medical Examiner Dr. Cyrus E. Pendleton here. As he was found to be mentally unbalanced, the man was transferred to the Norwich State hospital at Brewster's Neck. While in conversation with Constable Lyman, the man gave his name as Edward Wilson, at one time a resident of New Bedford, Mass and Hartford. No information coud be secured from him as to where he had been living recently, his occupation or who his relatives were and no papers to identify the man were found on his person. He claimed to have been a sergeant in the U. S. army at some time in the past, but little credence was placed in this story by the constable. When taken in charge by the officer, the man said he had just returned from picking huckleberries on Pearl street, Hartford and while so engaged six men chased after him armed with razors and knives. He was thought to be about thirty-five years old, wore blue trousers, tan shirt, cap and black shoes, had reddish-brown hair and his face was unshaven. He was rather thickset and about five feet, ten inches tall. Several of the borough residents noticed him walking about the center of the village, Sunday afternoon, and he is thought to have wandered along the Hartford road to the North Westchester section of town where he spent the night. Residents of that end of the town are breathing easier, now that he has been taken in charge.

STORRS HENS CONTINUE TO LAY FEWER EGGS

As to be expected, the hens in the Storrs laying contest continue to lay fewer eggs per week as the present contest approaches its end. The decrease for the week, however, was only 48 eggs less than last week and 174 eggs more than for the corresponding week a year ago.

The total production for the week was 8,770 eggs, making a grand total to date of 175,844, or a little over sixtenths of an egg per bird. The production for the week was 53.8 per cent.

Third honors were distributed among four pens of Leghorns. They are owned respectively by Alfred J. O'Donovan of Katonah, N. Y., Tom Barron of England, Peetoocee Poultry Plant of Telford, Pa., and William J. Boyle of North Norwich, N. Y. Each of these pens tied with 54 eggs. It doesn't seem possible for any pen to have a batting average so that it can stand out in any marked degree, like Babe Ruth in his home run hits, even for fourth place—three pens were tied with a lay of 53 eggs. They consist of a pen of Barred Rocks entered by Pratt Experimental Farm of Morton, Pa., a pen of Leghorns bred by Bourndale Farm of Millerton, N. Y., and another pen of Leghorns entered by Hollywood Poultry Farm of Woodinville, Wash.

The 380 White Leghorns had a slight margin over all other breeds so far as laying is concerned. Close on their heels, however, came the production for the 20 Australorps and Jersey Giants, the 140 Barred Rocks and the 280 Rhode Island Reds. The White Wyandottes followed next, with the 120 White Rocks being the poorest producers during the forty-first week of the contest.

DANIELSON

CAR OVERTURNS BUT FOUR PASSENGERS ESCAPE INJURY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Aug. 18. — A car owned and operated by Anson T. Perkins of Essex, Conn., skidded on the wet pavement and overturned this morning, directly opposite the state police barracks on North Main street. All of the occupants of this car escaped with shaking up and minor injuries. Riding with Mr. Perkins were Mrs. Annie Vars and Mrs. Hazel Monk and the latter's six-year-old daughter. Mrs. Monk sustained a cut on the right side of her face but was not seriously hurt.

Mr. Perkins said that the car skidded when he applied his brakes to escape hitting a car that cut in on him. The party was bound for Portland, Me., on a two weeks' vacation trip. State Officer Lionel Poirier checked the accident.

This afternoon at South Killingly, State Officer Lionel Poirier ordered Hector J. Brunell of Springfield to appear in the Killingly town court Wednesday morning to answer to operating an overloaded truck. The truck is owned by the Byrolly Co., of Waterbury, and had a load of copper tubing. The overload was 450 pounds.

Several hundred Grangers representing local granges in many parts of Connecticut east of the Connecticut river and various parts of Rhode Island assembled here this evening for an inter-state meeting with Killingly grange as the host.

Sixty state officers of the Connecticut state and Rhode Island state granges were entertained at dinner, prior to the meeting, at the home of Master Charles E. Haynes of Killingly grange and Mrs. Haynes.

The meeting was held in the town hall, opening in regular subordinate grange form, with Mr. Haynes presiding. Following the transaction of routine business addresses were made by members of the attending delegations, and at the close of the formal proceedings a collation was served. The meeting was highly successful from every viewpoint. Local committees had worked for several weeks to perfect the arrangements. Deputies, Pomona officers and other officials from various communities in Connecticut and in Rhode Island were in attendance.

Operating overloaded trucks proved costly today to Octave Morrill and Armand Harnois, both Norwich men, who were at the week end, ordered to appear in the Plainfield town court today. Morrill, whose truck was alleged to be overloaded by 940 pounds above its maximum allowed capacity, was fined $100 and costs. The Harnois truck was found to have a 1,400-pound overload. In this case a fine of $100 and costs was assessed, but $25 of the fine was remitted. Today the officers stationed at the state police barracks here were continuing their vigil for overloaded trucks, and had apprehended one at Plainfield early this afternoon.

Grangers from various parts of Windham county, including a number from Killingly and Highland granges of this town, will be at Mansfield Hollow Thursday for the annual field day and picnic of Quinebaug Pomona grange. W. Page of Brooklyn grange and the master and secretary of Quinebaug grange as members ex-officio.

There will be a program of sports in addition to the other events arranged for the day.

In the town court in Plainfield this morning Napoleon Pelletier of Water street, Danielson, was fined $100 and costs for operating a car while he was intoxicated. Pelletier was arrested near Wauregan last night by State Officer H. Theodore Strand after a report had been telephoned in from that section complaining of the manner in which Pelletier, who pleaded guilty today, was operating.

Moses Baker of the Flat Rock district of Plainfield and Andrew Wozniak of Jewett City were also in the Plainfield court today for committing a breach of the peace at the Baker place late Sunday afternoon. They were taken into custody by Danielson state officers. Baker was fined $10 and costs for breach of the peace. Wozniak drew a fine of $5 on a similar charge and a sentence of 30 days in jail.

Albert Olson, who has been staying in Canterbury, has flashed a new wrinkle in attempting to get around provisions of the fish and game laws. Representing himself as a resident of the state he procured a resident fishing license in the town of Canterbury. As a matter of fact, County Game Warden Thomas Daniels said today Olson lives at Astoria, on Long Island. Arraigned before Justice Gould Colt in Canterbury, Olson was fined $10 and costs, a total of $21.10. Olson, his residence considered, should have taken out the higher cost non-resident fishing license.

Another lot of 180 pheasants has been released within the limits of the town of Killingly by County Game Warden Thomas Daniels of Plainfield. This lot of birds averaged larger in size than those contained in another lot turned loose in this section of the county two or three weeks ago. The latest lot were quite equally divided between male and female, there being possibly a few more males. Releases were made where there is suitable cover and where the birds will find ample feed in addition to the grain that is usually left for them when they are let out of captivity.

PUTNAM

SCHOOL DAMAGED TO EXTENT OF $400 BY LIGHTNING

PUTNAM, Aug. 18—The terrific electrical storm of Saturday was an expensive one, it was revealed today. John H. Bulger, chairman of the building committee of the town school board said this morning that damage to the extent of $400 was caused by lightning striking the Israel Putnam school during the downpour at noon time Saturday. The bolt made a direct hit on the roof in the rear of the building, loosening slate shingles and tearing into the chimney. From the office of Wire Chief W. T. Jones of the telephone exchange, it was reported this afternoon that a total of 200 stations were disabled when a bolt of lightning connected with service lines in the Phoenixville and Eastford areas. These sections were practically isolated for several hours until the crews of linemen effected repairs. Although conditions were restored to normal this evening, the result of constant work since the clearing of the storm, the telephone company's records showed it to have been the worst upsetting by the elements experienced this season.

Santa Claus may be a myth to many who have lived and learned, but to 80 some youngsters, inmates of the county home, old St. Nick, the fat little fellow who brightens the lives of youngsters at Yule tide, made a preseason visit to this section today and provided a rollicking good time for every one of them. Rev. U. O. Bellerose, benevolent pastor of St. Mary's church and a true friend of children arranged for the outing which was held at the summer camp of St. Mary's Boy Scout organization at Laurel Pond on the North Woodstock road. Truly a merry time was had by all. At noon a picnic lunch was served and aside from the delightful programme of games which were packed with plenty of action, the boys and girls of the home enjoyed an afternoon in the roped off swimming pools of the pond.

Everyone was up at an early hour at the home this morning and when the merry throng left their routine at the county institution in the Sawyer district for a well deserved holiday, they were accompanied by Superintendent and Mrs. Provandi, who assisted in directing the programme for the day. Yes, it was really a "day off" for the kids, there being no signs of life around the home at all today, this being least among the worries of the contented lot of inmates.

Playing soldiers and frontiersmen is a lot of fun, but boys who delight in re-enacting the feats of famous generals of history and their armies, should not duplicate their many acts of ruthlessness. This is the opinion of Captain of Police Dubreuil and by this time, doubtlessly, the opinion of a group of small boys living in the Walnut street section of the city who marched "with Sherman to the sea."

When the boys of Walnut street for the want of something to do, declared the Civil war raging once again "General Sherman" organized his army once again and his march was across the open fields of Chassey street into the mystic chambers of "Devil's Den," for years the romantic playground of the boys of the east side of the city, where camp was pitched. History records that the intrepid Sherman and his men lived on the fat of the land. Accordingly the little band of imitators had to do likewise, or they wouldn't be playing fair.

It so happened that a garden containing patches of cucumbers and tomatoes, was along the line of march. An army must have rations, and so the "boys in blue" plundered, with all the characteristic finesse of General Sherman. The result was that a complaint found its way from the owner to Captain Dubreuil. The market gardener was plenty vexed, when Captain Dubreuil talked with him and viewed the work of Walnut street's little general. Hostilities ceased, when the commander learned that the police were called out and over the week-end Captain Dubreuil amused himself by gathering up the scattered remnents and bringing out the many tales of woe advanced by the general and his privates. War is at an end on Walnut street, the market gardener has been pacified and after parents looked into the matter, "General Sherman" came from his headquarters in the crevices of Devil's den and assured Captain Dubreuil that another march to the sea would never again be undertaken.

JEWETT CITY

ADDITIONAL ENTRIES FOR WATER CARNIVAL

Hal Chase and "Our Gang" were busy all day Monday repairing the diving boards on the big float and measuring out distances for the various races, to be held at the Ashland water carnival Friday.

Several more entries have been received and include Ed Gromko, Theodore Raill, Armand Gilbert and Ray W. Greene, Jr., who will make up the Ashland relay team that will swim against the Jewett City team captained by Roland Guillett.

This event appears to be one of the big numbers on the program but the juveniles are not to be outdone at this meet and a special relay race has been added to the list which will bring together "Our Gang" and the "Black Aces" and the "Jewett City Speed Boys", bitter rivals in the baseball activities during the present season. It is probable that another of the kid baseball teams will forget its baseball temporarily and get in the swim.

There will be some splashing in the special race for the members of this season's swimming class, both boys and girls. The entries for this event will be restricted to those of the children who are still under instruction, in order that they may not be forced to compete against those who progressed rapidly and who have been graduated, as it were. Some of this season's class have developed very rapidly and several of these will be found taking part in various events.

LIEUT. CAVANAUGH'S DEATH OF SPECIAL LOCAL INTEREST

The item in Saturday's A. P. dispatch in The Bulletin concerning the heroic death by drowning of Lieut. Allen Cavanaugh, recent graduate of the Cavalry school at Fort Riley, Kans., was of especial interest to Warden and Mrs. Edmund Jodoin's friends. Their daughter, Catherine, is at Mallett's Bay, at camp and the young man was her riding instructor. The entire camp of girls was starting on a three days' trip to Canada by water when the storm came upon them. Miss Jodoin, with five other girls, was in a boat, the motor of which was put out of commission by the high waves. They managed to reach land after a hard struggle and by what she termed "rowing backwards." They did not know of the tragedy until their return to camp, which was made by truck from the opposite shore in the middle of the night. Lieut. Cavanaugh lost his life in an effort to save the lives of his wife, a woman councillor, and seven girls in Lake Champlain, near Philipsburg, P. Q. Three of the girls swam to shore, while the rest clung to the overturned boat and were rescued, but the lieutenant was drowned.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

THE "SUNBURNED" LAWNS AND HOW TO PREVENT THEM

Science tells us that essential to plant growth are light, food, water and heat—that all three must be present in sufficient amounts to be of any value to plants. One without the other is of no value. That is, an abundance of water and heat is of no value to plants if there exists a deficiency of plant food.

When this fact is considered we do not wonder why lawns turn brown and die during the middle and latter part of summer. It is generally due to a deficiency of plant food. Water dissolves the plant food in the soil and forms what is known as the soil solution. In this solution, food and water are consumed by plants. Excessive watering will produce an abundant growth as long as the soil's store of plant food lasts; when it is exhausted, no amount of water will sustain plant growth.

A common practice, which is very detrimental to grass, is sprinkling the lawn lightly each day. In doing so the soil is usually saturated only to a depth of a half inch. This causes the grass roots to come to the surface for moisture and results in a very shallow root system which will often burn out quickly under the rays of midsummer's sun. Then too, shallow roots offer little resistance to the heaving action of the soil during winter, and "winter-killing" results.

Properly fed lawns develop strong, extensive roots which go deep for moisture and food. They do not require frequent watering. A thorough soaking once each week is ordinarily sufficient. They also get the full benefit of rains—the roots reach down to the depth saturated by rain. Shallow rooted lawns do not.

Modern science has made plant feeding a simple matter. You can purchase a complete scientifically balanced plant food from your dealer in lawn and garden supplies which can be applied right on the surface as you would sow grass seed and soaked into the soil.

Give your lawn a light feeding now and another in about six weeks and it will stay green and thriving. And when winter comes, it will have the stamina to combat winter conditions.

CARELESSNESS ATTRACTS THE ENGLISH SPARROW

If English sparrows are overabundant it may be the result of carelessness. The sparrows are canny foragers and flock to a locality offering abundant feed. There they multiply at an alarming rate. Carelessness in feeding poultry, a knothole in the granary floor, open doors and windows in farm buildings, or openings at the eaves create conditions that attract sparrows. Block the entries to their favored nesting places, and the birds are less likely to be troublesome.

The next step in sparrow control recommended by the bureau of biological survey, United States department of agriculture, includes the destruction of sparrow nests. Because the birds are active breeders it is necessary to make the rounds and destroy the nests every 10 or 12 days throughout the breeding season. Nest destruction on a community-wide scale is more effective than on isolated farms.

Nestling sparrows help the farmer for a few days. Before the birds begin to fly the parents supply them with many worms and insects. But once they are well grown they fall into the habits of their adults and become vegetarians with keen appetites for grains and garden products as well as for weed seeds. If the grains are housed carefully the sparrows are likely to be less numerous and will eat more weed seeds, and in this way may even prove helpful to the farmer.

SOYBEANS AS GREEN MANURE.

Soybeans grown as a green-manure crop should be plowed under at the blossom stage to insure the maximum soil improvement, the United States department of agriculture has found. Soybeans blossom in from 30 to 95 days after planting, depending on the variety, time of planting, and soil and climate conditions. Most of the nitrogen has been gathered in the plant by blossom time. About the maximum amount of organic matter has been produced and the plant is still tender and juicy enough to decay within 35 or 45 days. If allowed to grow longer, the plant becomes woody and decays slowly. The crop should be covered by about 3 inches of soil, so the plants will have sufficient soil moisture even in droughts to decay. If covered with less solid, decay may be retarded by lack of moisture; if deeper, air will be excluded and decay retarded.

RETAIL POTATO PACKAGING GROWS IN FAVOR AT MARKETS

Increased use of small packages in marketing potatoes last season is reported in a recent survey by the bureau of agricultural economics of the U. S. department of agriculture. Potatoes in small packages are intended to reach the consumer in the original container without the necessity of reweighing or repackaging by the retailer. Small bags made of cotton, burlap, or other fiber, and also paper cartons, are used. The bags or cartons usually contain 15 or 25 pounds.

The survey included seventeen cities and compared sales last year with those of the previous year. In eight cities an increase in the use of small packages was reported. In two cities a decrease was indicated. In the other cities the quantity of potatoes marketed in small packages was very slight, or no trend was reported. Boston, Los Angeles and New York made most use of the small packages. These cities also reported the greatest increases over sales the previous year. Chicago and Minneapolis reported fewer potatoes received in small packages than a year earlier. In most cities potatoes in small packages were only a small part of the supply. This class of receipts was mostly from Idaho and Prince Edward island.

CUTTING CORN AT GROUND AIDS IN CORN BORER CONTROL

Low cutting of corn is one of the most economical and effective methods of controlling the European corn borer where the practice of cutting corn is feasible, says the United States department of agriculture. Low cutting requires practically no more labor than the usual method of cutting several inches above the ground surface, and the extra equipment necessary is inexpensive and easily maintained.

Low cutting means cutting at the ground surface. At harvest time very few borers have worked down the stalks and gone below the ground surface. Therefore if the stalks are cut at this level almost all borers can be removed from the field and destroyed in the subsequent disposal of the crop. The standard corn binders can not cut lower than five or six inches above the ground and in practice they are usually set to cut higher. This high stubble may harbor a sufficient number of borers to increase the infestation the following year.

Surface cutting can be accomplished with a low-cutting attachment on the standard corn binder. This attachment is a simple and inexpensive device developed by the department of agriculture. It consists of a long stationary knife which runs at ground level for cutting the stalks, extension butt gathering chains and extra throat springs for lifting and carrying the stalks back over the sickle, special cutaway side knives to increase the throat clearance, and an elevating chute over the sickle. The large stationary knife does all the cutting. The sickle is used only to keep the throat clear of weeds and trash. The low-cutting device is easily attached to the binder and does not change the operation of the machine.

These attachments, which have been used the past two seasons in all sections of the corn borer area under all conditions, have operated satisfactorily wherever a standard binder could be used. The extra throat springs and extension butt chains enable the machine to gather down and tangled stalks much better. The device requires little attention other than the occasional sharpening of the stationary knife, which being curved and beveled on the under side, is, to a certain extent, self-sharpening. It does not require a keen edge for cutting and stands up surprisingly well even in gravelly and stony soil.

HOW CAN I WHIP CREAM OR THE WHITES OF EGGS QUICKER?

Add a pinch of Ivory Salt to the cream or egg whites. This speeds up the whipping process, and does not in any way affect the flavor.

GRAVEL ROADS

It is noted with interest that the highway commissioner has put out for bids among the latest projects one for gravel surfacing of the Scotland road to Baltic.

Gravel surfacing is not a common method of improving Connecticut roads by the highway department, but it is a method that is endorsed and sought in many sections of the state in the belief that it will provide better highways for the country residents of the state and hasten the much needed relief in those localities.

Gravel surfacing is resorted to in many other states. It provides a decided improvement and makes possible the provision of better roads for far greater distances than would be possible if macadam or tar bound roads were provided. It doesn't furnish as good a road, or one that will last as long, but it meets requirements considering the amount of traffic, and in doing so it serves not only residents on such roads and those having business with them but it provides the much desired short cut in countless instances.

Connecticut has experienced a demand over a period of several years for the improvement of the country roads. There is a commendable desire to get out of the mud. It is felt by residents on the backroads, the cross roads, the country roads that they have a legitimate claim upon part of the funds which the state receives for highway purposes through the tax on gasoline should be devoted to the improvement of the roads which they must use in order to get to the good roads and which those who have good roads must use in order to get to the country residents.

The indications are that the highway commissioner is giving recognition to this demand, that he appreciates the position of the taxpayer who has gotten no consideration for his money, and it is to be hoped that this means the beginning of a policy that will lead to the early carrying out of more of the much needed improvement of country highways through gravel surfacing. With such roads given proper attention and possibly an annual oiling a big contribution would be made to the highway conditions of Connecticut.

STREET CONGESTION

Cities that are small as well as those that are large are being forced to resort to changes and improvements which are forced by congested conditions created by the automobile.

Motor vehicles have come in great numbers and are here to stay for an unknown period. With their number increasing provision must be made in some way for accommodating them. In some cities it has been necessary to resort to the policy of no parking in certain of the important business streets. Such a method was viewed with alarm but the effects have not only been salutary but trading conditions have helped.

Other cities have resorted to the widening of streets, the construction of new avenues that take through traffic around the city, the elimination of bad crossings, the construction of underpasses and the establishment of one way streets, signal systems and other regulations for the relief of bad conditions.

The automobile has been one of the greatest aids to better roads and streets. It is responsible for the intricate road systems which take travelers in any and all directions and it is to be expected that each year will witness valuable extensions and the provision of valuable cross roads. In the country as well as the city extensive changes are steadily being made for the betterment of roads that distance may be cut down, dangerous situations eliminated and safer driving conditions created. These changes are simple in comparison with those in cities where narrow and choked streets have to be contended with, but city relief does not all depend upon street widening or straightening. The city suffers severely from the great number of machines that are standing in the streets which are supposed to be used vehicles in motion. Reducing the number of parked autos and providing circling highways that will keep through traffic out of congested streets are methods which are yearly getting increased recognition in dealing with the auto problem in cities.

BALCHEN'S NATURALIZATION

When it comes to the upholding of laws it is expected that there will be quite as careful attention given to the provisions of the naturalization law as to any other. And yet it is always possible to stand up so straight under such efforts as to almost tip over backward.

In connection with aviation the name of Brent Balchen has been prominently identified for a number of years. He is a Norwegian and was a pilot for Admiral Byrd in his flight to the South pole. Balchen is desirous of becoming an American citizen. He took out his first papers three years ago but he faces the possibility of being required to start all over again because of the fact that he went with the Byrd expedition and spent two years out of the country.

It is the requirement of the naturalization laws that residence in the country must be continuous after taking out the first papers. There are exceptions which permit temporary absences of six months but when those periods are stretched to a year or more the continuity of residence is broken and that means a new application must be made and the five year residence period be started all over again.

Balchen is in that position. He has been out of the country for more than the permitted period, but he has been engaged in what might easily be regarded as national undertaking. He went to the South pole only because the object sought could be accomplished by going there. He was virtually under the American flag at all times. He certainly was not engaged in activities which caused him to change his mind concerning citizenship in the United States. He went to the Antarctic with the expectations and intentions of returning here as soon as possible. Such a case may be unusual but there are many unusual situations faced in enforcing the naturalization laws and from experience it is apparent that common sense should govern in this as well as in other cases.

If it is necessary special legislation might be adopted that would cover this or similar cases or that would reinstate him in view of the reason for his two years' absence. Balchen has given every evidence of being a worthy citizen and it would be unjust to keep him waiting five years more before being naturalized.

AN INVALUABLE AID

Perhaps it is too much to claim that the 317 persons aboard the British ship Tahiti would have been lost had the vessel not been equipped with wireless so that it could make known its trouble, but it is evident that it would have had much more difficulty in disclosing its distress had it been required to resort to the old time method of signals and flares.

Being able to call assistance from long distances promptly and knowing that the appeals had been heard and that aid was on the way demonstrated once more the importance of having every steamship equipped with radio. Somehow it is easy to imagine that large ships are able to meet most any emergency that might arise but there are occasional cases which show that they are far from invulnerable and when they need help they need it badly and quickly. It is not difficult to imagine the state of mind of those on the helpless and damaged craft or to recognize the relief they must have felt to know that assistance was coming as rapidly as possible.

Such proves the value of the requirement that all passenger carrying vessels must be equipped with wireless. This protective measure resulted from the anticipation of just such unforeseen emergencies and while it is recognized as necessary for the prevention of the loss of life on passenger carrying ships it likewise demonstrates the desirability of surrounding those who go on freighters, where crews are often large in number, with the same degree of protection.

Even though such a means of disclosing conditions and summoning aid does not insure rescue in all instances, it is an aid which is invaluable and there cannot be too strong an insistence upon its provision.

ENDURANCE FLIGHTS

From St. Louis comes the complaint that the record breaking endurance flight has not received the financial support that was expected.

Evidently the St. Louis fliers set out to break the record in the expectation that they would be richly rewarded, that they would be able to collect directly or indirectly from the public a considerable sum of money and that through advertising and other contracts get rich rather quickly.

If we can judge from the complaint success did not accompany their efforts. They were able to prove that they could remain aloft longer than anyone else had through skillful flying, painstaking refueling and a good motor. But they failed to attract the coin.

All this creates the impression that the edge has been worn off of the endurance flight. The contests have been staged so closely that the public has come to regard them as commonplace and even though the fliers were able to stay in the air close to a month interest was not whetted as it had been in previous instances.

It has been apparent since the refueling was shown to be possible that endurance records are bound to be temporary. It is not a test to which everyone would wish to submit but up to a certain point, up to the existing record for instance, there can be expected to be great enthusiasm over those who attempt to establish a new mark. The St. Louis experience indicates the necessity of providing some original feature in order to catch the public eye and that every endurance flight cannot be expected to be a gold mine. Such flying demonstrations are getting to be an old story.

A shower a day will keep the drought away.

Speaking of rain, it looks as if Worcester hung out a great, big welcome sign.

The man on the corner says: If prosperity is just ahead, why not catch up with it?

From the complaint by the manager of the St. Louis fliers, the endurance flights are getting to be an old story and public interest lags.

It is a fine job that has been done in widening Bath street and it is to be hoped it will not be regarded as an invitation for double parking.

Where it was recently only a matter of weeks it is getting rapidly to be only a matter of days to the opening of school.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—The appointment of Mrs. Ellis A. Yost of West Virginia, to the post of director of the woman's work of the republican national committee has placed in the running one of the most charming women, most effective and tactful political leaders of the republican party. Mrs. Yost is national committee woman from her state, has served in various woman's organizations, both political and otherwise, among them the W. C. T. U. from which she is expected to resign as an official, however, when she assumes her new office Sept. 1.

Mrs. Yost was urged to run as a candidate for the senate this year, but steadfastly refused. As the national committee will not make prohibition, but the tariff, the issue of the campaign, Mrs. Yost will not continue in any position that might be prejudicial to the party interest. She is a woman of rare good sense and judgment.

Mrs. Dodson, the present director, and Mrs. Yost are good friends and there will be no bitterness when one relinquishes and the other assumes the important position.

It was quite natural Mrs. Dodson should prefer to retire when Mr. Houston did, for she was a Houston appointee; and Mrs. Yost was the personal selection of the incoming chairman, Senator Fess. So the field is now clear of any left-over prejudices or associations. Both Mrs. Dodson and Mrs. Yost are admirable selections, in the minds of every republican member of the national committee, so it will be a case of a friendly speeding of the parting official when the incoming director is cordially welcomed.

Mrs. Yost, is slender, fair complexion, blue eyes and has a flare for wearing blue gowns that exactly match her eyes. She is quiet in manner, low pitched voice and altogether very attractive, as well as politically efficent, both as a leader and in team work.

President Hoover is tackling the drought in the west in the same practical and efficient manner as he handled the flood relief in the south. Apparently he is at his best when some big problem of restoration or prevention is waiting his action.

Not only has he called the secretaries of his cabinet into consultation, but is seeking the most detailed information from state executives and others who know conditions in their own locality.

From the zest with which the president attacks great problems of welfare, it is quite evident he stands in quite another grade, than in the school of politics—that is, when politics spell partisanship.

Perhaps the readiness, thoroughness and knowledge Mr. Hoover displays in meeting national emergencies, not only shows his trend of thought, but may explain why he so often runs against snags in the political world and in congress. If he ever acquires the skill in politics that he has as master of emergency in other lines, he will be what might be termed "holy terror" to political opponents who block his path.

Great forest fires, owing to the drought, are roaring within seven miles of the president's camp at Rapidan and the camp has been equipped with hydrant installation and a fire extinguishing system of its own. The work was done by the corps of marines stationed there as a guard to the president. A detachment of the squad of marines has been designated as fire guard. Since being stationed at Rapidan the marines have served as road builders, fish dam builders, cleared away the underbrush, snake killers, mosquito chasers and sentinels at the gate.

Those of us who use "shop talk" familiar only to news writers sometimes fail to think of the impression it makes on the uninitiated. For instance, we use "kill it" to indicate something previously sent to a newspaper is not to be published, for some good reason. They are telling a good story on a member of the press gallery who had sent along a story to his paper on what seemed to be a sure-to-happen appointment, the news of which had been given to him on what seemed official authority. The appointment was of national importance and a number of correspondents likewise fell for it. Not only had the writers given advance intimate details of the man to be named, whom we will call Mr. Blank, but as his wife would thereupon become a prominent figure in political circles much was also said about her.

Then at the 11th hour, which chanced to be 3 a. m. just before morning papers went to press, a sudden change of program was made and another man with another wife was appointed.

Rushing to the phone the correspondent called up the nearest telegraph office, giving the name of the paper, dictated this: "Kill Mrs. Blank." Before he could go on he heard the shocked operator calling back in a horrified voice, "What did you say they are to do to Mrs. Blank? I must have misunderstood; it sounded as if you told them to kill her." But in spite of the interruption, Mrs. Blank was killed just in the nick of time, along with her distinguished husband, and no one but the editor knew what a close call their Washington correspondent had had.

Listen to this, which we quote from a recent newspaper article of wide circulation, then please pass the salt, for we may need a grain before we swallow it whole.

"It is seldom a chief justice of the supreme court eats luncheon in the restaurants at the capitol. It has been their custom to bring luncheons from home and eat in the privacy of their rooms. Reporters scouting for human interest material at the capitol viewed the nine judicial lunch boxes with considerable interest, but no one had the temerity to find out what was in them. Two of the justices often used shoe boxes as their lunch containers."

Fancy Mr. Chief Justice Taft or Mr. Chief Justice Hughes eating lunch out of a shoe box, with their long black silk judicial robes carefully tucked back, so not to collect crumbs! It would be well worth a Sabbath day's journey to see a justice of the supreme court step out of the elevator reserved exclusively for use of the justices clutching a shoe box in his hand, as he acknowledges the deferential bows from court attendants. Then he would cross the marble corridor with stately tread, and guards at the robing room door would lower the big red velvet ropes, open the door just wide enough for him to enter, but not wide enough for the public even to get a peek inside.

Often we see brought up from the senate restaurant on trays deftly handled by colored waiters, the favorite lunch of justice at present, which is bread and milk, sandwiches and coffee or some such simple fare. And we haven't even yet glimpsed a shoe box!

Dr. Katherine S. Hoffman, the woman physician who has the government position to guard the health of the approximately 3,000 workers at the treasury building, shows no partiality when it comes to the comfort and welfare of the men and women employes.

There has always been a comfortable rest room for women, but the men have had no place wherein to catch 40 winks, if they are tired or feeling a bit below par when the noon hour comes. Now Dr. Hoffman is urging that a rest room for men be provided. She argues that the men, particularly the older men, need a chance to rest, and that it will increase their efficiency as much as it has improved that of the women workers.

There are to be new emergency quarters at the treasury building under the present plan of renovation, and Dr. Hoffman includes a big comfortable rest room for men, and that it shall be fitted up with couches for those who want a short snooze after luncheon.

Dr. Hoffman tells about some of the day-time activities of her work, for she is on duty only through the hours of treasury worker, and attends only to minor or emergency cases. The others are sent to hospitals or to their homes for treatment. Dr. Hoffman has been on duty three months, in that time she has treated more than 200 cut fingers, more than 100 skinned shins and knees, and got out several hundred bits of particles from eyes.

Even though it is something new, the department workers seem well pleased to have a woman physician in attendance.

HE DID HIS BEST

Rita really shouldn't have acted so. But any girl who has extra large, melting brown eyes—and there aren't so many of them, either—and who has had it forced upon her that these same orbs in action have a most peculiar effect upon susceptible young men, knows that it requires herculean efforts not to experiment, just a little.

And ever since the young man who had sat down across the aisle had glimpsed her, gazed for a moment as though stricken to the heart and thereafter in spite of his efforts had found his head automatically turning in her direction as though it were pulled by a string, nobody really could have expected her to look perpetually from the car window on the nondescript lower Michigan scenery. The train, almost a suburban out of Chicago, humped along methodically bearing Rita to a week-end house party, but she admitted regretfully she could not expect any man there to measure up to the good looks of the one now sitting across the way from her. Probably they would never see one another again and she had the feeling that given the chance they might have been very good friends. Life was ridiculous.

She sighed. He gazed. A rough and uncultured group piled on at the next stop and many bundles were jammed into the rack above. Two persons sat directly behind Rita and she frowned, annoyed, as one of their paper parcels was pushed against the big box of candy she was taking to her hostess. The giggles and cute talk annoyed her. It would have been much different had she and the admiring young man conversed. With a tie like his and his $15 hat he must certainly possess an eastern accent and correct tastes.

He looked like a young man of initiative. Without doubt, before the train reached Beechmore he would have thought up a perfectly logical method of meeting her. She flickered a glance at him through her long lashes and was conscious that her heart thumped. If only she could in some way take him along to the house party—a perfectly dazzling vista of the rage, envy and helplessness of the other girls attached to utterly mediocre men swam before her eyes. The special man invited for her receded with great rapidity into the background. Something must be done, but nothing so obvious as a dropped magazine, an elusive handkerchief nor a stuck window. All the windows were up anyhow, because it was a hot day and there were no parlor cars on this train.

The mirth and jollity back of her infuriated her, sitting solitary while the admiring young man sat in like state within four feet of her. He tried to read, failed, stole a glance at her. She explored her handbag tiredly, stole a look, sat up straight. The train sped on and Beechmore was nearer with every telegraph pole.

A wreck—with the handsome young man heroically bearing her in his arms away from the crash and the flames—a cloudburst sweeping the car from the tracks and once more the young hero rescuing her by main force while she lay pale as a lily in his brawny arms—a holdup with him thursting her behind him and fending off the onslaught of the desperadoes——

"Be-e-e-e-echmore!" yelled the conductor.

The young man jumped as Rita rose, picked up her suitcase and book and then her heart leaped like a rabbit—for he did, he actually did get up and come toward her. "Allow me," he said, and took her rather heavy suitcase. She followed him, entranced with his tailoring and his shoulders. Would he—could he—go further in the way of names and addresses? It wasn't possible but she clung to hope until she stood on the Beechmore platform and he had smiled a wistful good-by. The handsome young man returned sadly to his seat. And then he glimpsed the package left in the rack above Rita's seat and hope rose again within his breast.

Grabbing it wildly he leaned far out of the window—

"Oh, Miss—er—Miss—" he cried.

"Gilfoyle—Rita," she called back.

"Your package!" the handsome young man told her triumphantly and hurled it in her direction. She did not catch it, for the train was moving. It struck full in her face and it was five pounds of home-churned butter, wrapped trustfully in paper on a very hot day belonging to one of the merry group that had sat behind her.—Chicago News.

THRIFT hagyou naaffi;

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18—So Douglas MacArthur, MacArthur of the "Rainbow" division, is to be army chief of staff, one of the youngest ever named to such high rank.

At 50 he will wear the four stars of the rank of general few Americans have known.

Back in those terrific news days of 1916-17, it was his good fortune to be AP man at the war department.

He saw MacArthur close up, hand picked by Secretary Baker for press contact officer for the secretary, the first of his kind.

And with all the Mexican uproar, the Pershing expedition after Villa and later, all the turmoil of army organization for war with Germany to handle in that delicate capacity, the Bystander saw MacArthur come through with every reporter predicting that some day he would head the army.

Within less than 15 years these predictions are realized.

Army His Life

MacArthur has lived all his life in the army, more than 30 years' service as cadet and officer despite his comparative youth; and with a boyhood spent on army posts behind that.

There is no army tradition, old or new, of which he is not a part.

And in all the glowing records of the AEF in France, there is no more splendid story of valor and soldierly achievement than his.

For Douglas MacArthur was the very origin of the "Rainbow" division. The plan for this grouping of guard units from all states in a division which would reach the front on the heels of the first regulars was his.

He was division chief of staff; his the imagination that coined the very name.

General Mann, then chief of militia and first commander of the division, told the Bystander that at the time.

And General Menoher, battle commander of the "Rainbow" in its glorious career, repeated it all to Pershing in urging that MacArthur be raised to major general and succeed to command when Menoher passed to a corps command.

But for the armistice MacArthur would have led a dramatic onslaught against the Metz-Thionville "stallong" on which the whole German thrust into France was based.

That Menoher letter credits MacArthur with having actually commanded in battle more troops "than any other officer in our army." It tells of MacArthur's "husbandry of his own forces" and of a "resourcefulness which no other American commander in the field has."

And it dots the "i's" on that with specific cases.

Closed Door

MacArthur's promotion closes the door for Major General Dennis Nolan, next him in rank but eight years MacArthur's senior in age. Nolan also has a brilliant, gallant army record in two wars.

But he will be too old when MacArthur ends his four year term as chief of staff to receive that honor in his turn.

YOUR HEALTH

Well Formed Mouths For All Children

By Landis H. Wirt, D. D. S.,
South Bend, Indiana.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Today we continue our discussion of the importance of early Orthodontic treatment.

In most cases, malocclusion or improper closing of teeth, is caused by some disturbance of nutrition in infancy, together with the influence of such habits as thumb, finger or pacifier sucking, mouth breathing or lack of exercise of the jaws. Children raised on a bottle almost invariably develop deformity of the jaws and features through the fact that they do not have to work their jaws as hard in getting their food as they would if breast fed; and lack of vigorous exercise brings lack of development. Again, when they are weaned, they too often are given only food that has been passed through a sieve and made so pulpy that they are cheated of all opportunity to establish the instinct for chewing. Who ever heard of a puppy or a tiger cub that had to have its food passed through a sieve when weaned? Why does the pup chew up every old rubber shoe it can find? To develop its jaws, of course.

The prevention of malformations is principally a matter of early care. Breast feeding where at all possible or otherwise the use of a nipple closely resembling nature in form, and with the opening small enough so that the child must work for its dinner. Precautions should be observed for the prevention of colds, and prompt measures for their relief adopted if already acquired. After weaning, the avoidance as far as possible of soft pulpy foods and the careful training in vigorous chewing of food that is tough and fibrous will go far toward the development of well formed jaws with room for the teeth to assume their normal positions.

During the period from five to ten or twelve years of age during which the "baby teeth" are being replaced by the adult ones, the child should be given frequent inspection by a thoroughly competent dentist, or better still one who has been trained as an orthodontist, in order to detect the development of malocclusion before it has a chance to become well established. Sometimes a little wise advice at this time will ward off a deformity which when established would be difficult to correct.

Corrective measures to be most successful, should be applied early. It is a grave mistake to wait until all the adult teeth are in place. It is not impossible to correct irregular teeth in the adult, but the best results are obtained if treatment is not delayed beyond the adolescent years.

The principal means of correction of the deformities I have been discussing is by the use of appliances made of gold and platinum bands and wires, so designed and applied as to stimulate growth of the bones about the teeth, and to direct this growth in such a manner as to bring about a return to harmony of function and appearance. This sometimes is referred to as "straightening the teeth" but while it is true that the teeth are made to assume a nice, even appearance, the aesthetic effect is not of as great importance as the re-establishment of normal function.

It is becoming more common for parents whose children exhibit any slightest tendency to these malformations of the denture, to go directly to the orthodontist for advice, and do so early.

CHILD TRAINING

They Obey Better Now

Stella E. Fulton

"Children used to obey when I was a boy," grumbled Uncle James testily.

"There is better obeying among children now than there used to be, I think," said his niece Sylvia, mother of three.

Uncle James, being slightly deaf, overlooked the fact that her statement differed entirely from his own. "No, children don't mind as they used to do when I was a boy," he continued. "When my father spoke to us the biggest of us walked the chalk line. And he didn't even need to speak for if he snapped his fingers at one of us, or even pointed, we jumped, I can tell you. There was no talking back in those days. Nowadays if I hear one of your youngsters told to do something, likely as not he turns around and argues the matter. And that isn't good minding, my dear young woman."

"But, Uncle James, if I don't listen to what the children have to say on their side of the question, I can't be sure of judging fairly. Don't you think it seems more just to hear both sides? Didn't your father sometimes make mistakes when he gave commands without a hearing?" remonstrated Sylvia.

"I suppose he did make mistakes, but if he did, we never dared to tell him so. I tell you, we minded," said Uncle James. "We were taught to respect our parents."

"I have always felt that if I were fair and just to the children, they would respect me without being taught. And as for the other, I don't want my children to mind me with unthinking obedience," declared Sylvia.

"What!" cried the old gentleman in horror, throwing up his hands, "you don't, heh?"

"No, persisted Sylvia, "I want to be able to explain my commands to them as far as they can understand them, and then I want them to obey partly because obedience is reasonable and right and partly because their good sense tells me that the course I have marked out will be best for all concerned. In after life, they will, of course, have some use for unquestioning obedience, as for instance to the established rules of the game or the laws of the land, but there will be many more times when the habit of facing a situation and deciding according to their reason and intelligence will mean everything to them. There are too many people already who do not think for themselves. They are the ones who are ready to listen to the advice of any one who comes along on buying speculative mining stock or voting the straight party-ticket."

And then Sylvia remembered one point on which they could agree and tactfully brought that forward. "I admit, though, that it is a little difficult at times to allow the children to present their side of the case and at the same time keep them from taking advantage of this liberty. They are tempted to begin to argue and tease to gain their point, but right there I set my foot down, and they soon stop, for that, they know, is not playing fair with me."

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

Thrift Habits Necessary To Success And Progress

"It doesn't pay to worry about the future. The things we dread seldom happen. It's better to take life as it comes and not burden ourselves with thoughts about the years ahead."

There are many whose creed of life is something like this and it leads them along a very treacherous and dangerous pathway. It doesn't pay to worry, perhaps, from the standpoint of conjuring up imaginary woes or misfortunes. But there is a great difference between worrying about the future and facing life's possibilities in a sensible manner.

The Japanese have a proverb which says: "Success and happiness are the beautiful flowers that spring from the plain brown bulbs of thrift and savings." The point of this talk on thrift is to point out the difference between planting the honest bulbs of thrift and neglecting entirely to make provision for the future.

Too many of us are apt to think of thrift only in terms of plain, brown, unattractive bulbs, without thought of the beautiful flowers that come from them. And the sequence of thrift and personal advancement is just as true as the sequence of bulb and lily.

To maintain that one can go through life with absolute disregard for the fundamentals of rightful living and prudent habits, and still continue to thrive is as false a doctrine as would be the suggestion that the flowers could live and grow without the bulb.

There are varying standards of thrift according to individual circumstances and conditions. But living beyond one's means, squandering one's time, energies and health, and thinking only of present moments without plan or preparation for the later years, are practices that cannot fail to bring unhappiness in the end.

Unless the flowers of your success and happiness are rooted in the plain brown bulbs of thrift, the day of their passing is sure to come.—By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift.

Stories That Recall Others

Vacation Echo

Daughter accompanied the family on a vacation trip and several very interesting places were referred to as historical spots. On returning home the family was discussing the trip with friends when the youthful traveler exclaimed, "Oh mother, don't forget to tell them about all those wonderful hysterical places we visited!"

His Garb

The English professor at college rather enjoyed "baiting" a certain freshman girl, whose father was a United States senator, because of the always unusual and ingenuous nature of her replies. At one time the word "toga" came under the scrutiny of the professorial eye. "Miss Smith," he queried, "Does your father wear a toga!" "No, sir," she replied meekly. "He doesn't?" returned the professor. "Well, what does he wear?" Then innocent Miss Smith produced one of those unexpected replied. Said she, "I think he wears a derby!"

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Middletown Silver Company, Middletown.

The old colonial town of Middletown has many heritages among which is a certain tradition concerning the design and production of pieces of pewter, plate and sterling silver and has extended the handicraft of its citizens by pack-horse, train and motor truck by land, and by canoe, clipper ship and steamboat to the sea down the Connecticut river.

For the last 30 odd years this industry has been concentrated in the plant of the Middletown Silver company on Hubbard street where some 25 years ago was produced one of the earliest lines of reasonably priced electro-plated nickel silver hollow-ware—the principal product of the company today, although the recent increase in the public appreciation of Pewter has increased their production of this ware to almost the output of their plate and sterling.

Like Connecticut industry, in general, they have enjoyed more or less continuous expansion as the result of native Yankee ingenuity lowering the mechanical costs of production to the point where the values offered in their product become outstanding.

Connecticut is no longer a wilderness, in fact the beaten paths have become some of the finest state highways in the world, maintained under the efficient businesslike state administration, by a highway and motor vehicle department rightly envied by the citizens of most states, but the ingenuity still remains and its industries profit thereby.

The Middletown Silver company is no exception, their output having increased several times over just since the advent of the present management in 1910.

Carolina Woman

Lost 47 Lbs

In 3 Months and Feels Years Younger

"I have been taking Kruschen Salts for nearly 3 months. I have continued taking one teaspoonful in warm water every morning. I then weighed 217 pounds, was always bothered with pains in my back and lower part of abdomen and sides.

"Now I am glad to say I am a well woman, feel much stronger, years younger and my weight is 170 pounds. I do not only feel better but I look better, so all my friends say.

"I shall never be without Kruschen Salts, will never cease taking my daily dose and more than glad to highly recommend it for the great good that is in it." Mrs. S. A. Solomon, New Bern, N. C., Jan. 1930." "P. S. You may think I am exaggerating by writing such a long letter but truly I feel so indebted to you for putting out such wonderful salts that I cannot say enough."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks costs but 85 cents at druggists the world over. Take one-half teaspoon in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—walk a little each day. Do not overeat.

EXPLORING THE HAUNTS OF THE EEL

All the eels in the world have two convention headquarters where they meet annually.

Discovery recently of a place in the Indian ocean to which millions of Asian, African and Australia eels travel yearly recalls that the rendezvous of American and European eels was located in 1920, near Bermuda.

"Science knows more today about the eel than it did some years ago," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C. "The missing chapters in the eel's life history have been supplied through modern deep-sea investigation rather than in the study of fresh or coastal waters, where eels are more in evidence.

"Unlike salmon, shad and other fishes which enter fresh waters to spawn, the eel descends streams at maturity to spawn far at sea. The young eels—three inches or so in length, called elvers—that enter fresh waters in the spring in large numbers, and are continually working upstream, have always been known, but the stages of growth between the egg and the elver were not.

"These stages in which the baby eel does not exceed three inches in length are of comparatively recent discovery. We here find it a thin, flattened creature, so transparent that ordinary print may be clearly read through its body. When first described in this stage it was called leptocephalus and was not known to be the common eel.

"These transparent larval eels found at sea in the winter months grow rapidly, and by the end of the year are more than two inches long, when they begin to transform. By the time they are a year old they begin to appear in fresh-water streams as elvers or young eels about three inches long.

"Investigations by the Danish vessel Dana in 1920 and 1921 have shown that the early larval stages of both the American and the European eel are found only in the western Atlantic, at depths of 600 to 900 feet. The former spawns to the south and southwest of the Bermuda Islands, the latter to the south and southeast.

"While the American eel begins to enter fresh water at the age of a year, the European species remains three years in the larval stages before it appears as the elver in European streams. The latter, like the American eel, goes far inland, even passing within the borders of Switzerland.

"Females with ripe eggs are unknown, the millions of undeveloped eggs carried by each female not developing while the eels linger in fresh or coastal waters.

"The eels found far inland are always females and remain in fresh water for several years. It is only when tending toward reproductive maturity that they seek the sea. Male eels remain in tidal waters and are smaller and less in evidence. Like females, they do not reach breeding maturity until they have passed to sea.

"The great bulk of the eel catch everywhere consists of females. It is said that all the eels captured in the great Quebec fishery are females moving downstream.

"The annual catch of eels for market along the Atlantic coast from Maine to Florida normally exceeds 3,000,000 pounds and is worth some $250,000.

"A few years ago three barges, each more than 100 feet long and 12 feet wide, arrived at New York from Quebec with 165,000 pounds of live eels. They were towed by way of the St. Lawrence river, Lake Champlain, and Hudson river and were 13 days in transit. The barges are virtually well-boats, or live cars, the bottoms consisting of heavy slats, with narrow spaces between to provide abundant circulation of water.

"Large as is the catch of eels in America, it is vastly greater in Europe.

"Eels enter all American streams from the St. Lawrence river to the Gulf of Mexico. It is only the young eels that move upstream. Adults move downstream and do not return. Both males and females die at sea after the first and only breeding season in their lives. The eel is very prolific, each female producing from 5,000,000 to 10,000,000 eggs."

MOTHERS ARE LEARNING USES OF MAGNESIA

From the beginning of expectancy until baby is weaned. That's the time Phillips Milk of Magnesia performs the greatest service for many women.

It relieves the expectant mother's nausea, heartburn, "morning sickness," inclination to vomit; helps her digestion. Its mild but effective laxative action assures regular bowel movement.

Phillips Milk of Magnesia is better than lime water for neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding. A teaspoonful of it does the work of a half pint of lime water. It is a mild laxative; harmless, almost tasteless.

All drug stores have Phillips Milk of Magnesia in generous 25c and 50c bottles. Always insist on the genuine, endorsed by physicians for 50 years.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of the Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875.

LOW COST HOMES SCARCE, SAYS ARCHITECTURAL PAPER

The American Architect, a well-known architectural publication, is asking architects the question: "Who has built a good home for $6,500?"

Home owners will be interested in the results of this questionnaire. The magazine has expressed the thought that low cost houses that are really livable and pleasing to view are seriously lacking in the United States today.

Opinions on this question are being asked of architects throughout the country in an effort to find out whether it is practicable to build houses that meet space requirements of the average family and the sanitary standards of today, and that possess a meritorious architectural and construction quality, for $6,500.

MONTVILLE WOMAN, HURT IN ACCIDENT, SUES AUTO DRIVER FOR $15,000

Hurt in an automobile accident last June, Mrs. Lucy Metsack of Montville has brought suit in the superior court against Samuel Goldstein of Matapan, Mass., and Isaac Goldstein of Revere, Mass., asking damages of $15,000. The papers in the suit were filed Monday with the clerk of the superior court in this city. Mrs. Metsack claims in the complaint that the accident happened June 3rd while she was riding in an automobile operated by her husband, Ernest Metsack.

At Mallory hill, in Waterford, Mrs. Metsack alleges that a machine owned by Isaac Goldstein and operated by Samuel Goldstein, who is his son, veered to the left and crashed into the machine she was riding in. Her injuries, she claims, were a compound fracture of the left knee cap and cuts on her head, face and other parts of her body.

Negligence on the part of Mr. Goldstein is charged, in that he was driving the machine at an excessive rate of speed. The woman's husband has also filed suit against the owner and driver of the machine for $750 damages to his automobile.

REPORT RADIATOR PLANT TO LEAVE NORWICH

Efforts to verify a persistent report that the Richmond Radiator company is to remove its business interests to Union City, N. J., were fruitless Monday evening. Joseph W. Curtis, manager of the company, would neither deny nor affirm the report, stating that he had "nothing to say whatsoever" on the subject.

Several days ago Henry F. Powers, president of the Merchants National bank, made the announcement at a zoning hearing at the court house that Norwich had lost two industries, namely the Uncas Paper Board Co., and the West Side Silk mill, and was about to lose another, the Richmond Radiator Co.

At that time Mr. Curtis was approached on the subject and said that he did not know by what authority Mr. Powers had made the statement, adding that nothing definite had developed as yet, as to the plant leaving Norwich.

It was reported that men were employed the latter part of last week in taking measurements of machinery at the company's plant on Thames street. It is also reported that one or two other plants may leave Norwich in the near future.

WIDOWED MOTHER SENDS $5 FOR PLAYGROUND OUTING

The various local play centers, which have been engaged the past two weeks in the production of carnival attractions, have all made worthy contributions to the general all-playground outing fund, which is being raised to defray expenses for an outing at Ocean Beach, Aug. 27, at which 1,400 children are expected to attend.

The present week will witness the last of such juvenile efforts in a play by Hobart avenue Friday evening at Mohegan park. These activities of the children, together with a donation from the City baseball league and one from Norwich lodge, No. 430, B. P. O. E., have netted a substantial sum for the beach outing.

William J. Fitzgerald chairman of the recreation commission, is in receipt of the following letter from one who is interested in the welfare of the playground children:

"In response to your appeal for contributions to your all-playground outing fund I am enclosing $5 which is all I can afford at present.

"I am the mother of two children; my husband is dead, but I am lucky enough to be working myself. I have seen the good work you have done for my children as well as for others and so I wish to do my share."

Mr. Fitzgerald has been active for some time in the organization of the trip to the beach and has already engaged a number of busses to transport the children. He has reported that further donations from local citizens and organizations are necessary if plans for assuring a happy day for the children are to be fulfilled.

ST. PATRICK' SCOUTS HAVE WEEK'S SPORT AT CAMP

The Boy Scouts of St. Patrick's parish, who are in Camp Rosary at Bushy Point, are spending days filled with pleasurable activities.

Thursday evening, on the beach, there were two groups the Perrywinkles and Sandpipers. After Indian games the Perrywinkles ambushed the Sandpipers in real Indian fashion with blood curdling yells and rushes.

Monday the boys had calisthenics on the beach before bathing. There were water sports of various kinds in the evening with a full moon. An operetta was staged, to music of an accordian, guitar and mandolin and harmonica orchestra. Selections were given in true Caruso style, in costume.

Tuesday the daily baseball game between the Perrywinkles and Sandpipers resulted in a victory for the Sandpipers, 17 to 14. There were the usual water sports.

A donation of peanuts was given to the camp, with some found missing. Sherlock Holmes (Neil Smith) and Doc Watson (Edward Smith) were set on the trail of the lost peanuts and found that the culprit, was Billy Potter. Judge Murphy held court at 7:30 p. m. and there were many witnesses, for and against the accused, pleading of lawyer to the jurors, etc. The court session lasted until 10:30. Meantime the evidence in the stolen peanuts mystery case was cleared up and the jury discharged the prisoner as innocent. The prosecuting attorney, who had possession of the peanuts, refused to give any to the jurors unless they declared the prisoner guilty. So the judge ruled it a mistrial and jurors and all enjoyed the peanuts.

Wednesday, crabbing, fishing and baseball with water sports filled the day. In the evening there was impromptu bronco busting and fancy dancing by several of the party. Clog dancing by fishermen on the point rounded out the evening.

Thursday the usual sports, swimming, etc., filled up the day, with a marshmallow roast in the evening at Fire-place Rock, where at one time treasures were searched for.

Friday, an early start was made for the Sacred Heart church, Groton, for mass, the Scouts hiking both ways through the rain. A good view of Sir Thomas Lipton yacht, Erin and Shamrock V was gained. Later, the weather clearing, the boys hiked to Split Rock Point.

Saturday, rain interferred with the outdoor activities only swimming. But games and story telling were enjoyed at the camp. The weather cleared at noon and crabbing and fishing were the pastimes for some. Other groups were given the history of Bushy Point and places of interest about the Point.

Saturday evening dancing including the Virginia Reel, rounded out the fun of the evening. This ended the first week at Camp Rosary. Rev. Terrence Finnegan and Rev. Henry Murphy visited the camp during the week.

BRAKE TESTS CREDIT TO AUTO DRIVERS

The results of the campaign launched by Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Stoeckel against defective brakes and other automobile equipment have been most satisfactory according to a report from state police headquarters.

Apparently motorists have cooperated with the police, checking up and repairing their equipment, with the result that it has not been necessary to make many arrests or otherwise bring pressure to bear on the automobilists in the state.

It is the opinion of officials at state police barracks in the state that the motorists have heeded the warning to the effect that brake regulations were to be more severe and that an earnest investigation was to be made of all vehicles.

A report from headquarters at Hartford indicates, however, that the checkup, a part of the Save-a-Life campaign, would be carried on this week with renewed vigor. It is not the intention of the police to make immediate arrests for faulty equipment. Rather, defective equipment tags will be issued, a reasonable time given to remedy the trouble, and then another checkup to make sure that instructions have been fulfilled. Five state officers here were detailed to inspect equipment. Their report shows that of the several hundred cars examined practically none of them required attention.

With the launching of the equipment campaign Commissioner Stoeckel stiffened the requirements on automobile brakes. Whereas foot brakes were formerly required to stop a vehicle within 45 feet at 20 miles an hour the limit is now 40 feet. Formerly the hand brake was supposed to stop the car within 70 feet at 20 miles an hour. The new regulation stipulates that the car must stop at 60 feet.

MODERN VACUUM CLEANER SAVES RUGS AND CARPETS

It is with a shudder and a sense of shame that one thinks back upon the days when housewives had to cart heavy loads of carpet into their back yards for a back-breaking beating in order to keep their homes clean. Now it is possible to run an electrically driven vacuum cleaner over the floor covering with considerably less effort than the old carpet sweeper and with an effect which combines broom and beating.

A vacuum cleaner soon pays for itself in the reduction of wear and tear on rugs, upholstery and drapes as well as on the household worker. One manufacturer is marketing a vacuum cleaner made of aluminum. Its dust-proof bag is easy to empty yet perfectly sealed to prevent spilling. An efficient motor picks up even the smallest particles of dirt and requires little attention.

Such a cleaner as this helps to free women of the drudgery of housework and allows her more time for social duties and companionship with her children.

SMOKE SHOP PUTS ROYALS OUT OF RUNNING IN CITY LEAGUE RACE

The Smoke Shop, the in and out club of the City league, (mostly out), was in last night. As a result, it upset the Royals and won 8 to 4. The defeat put the fast slipping Panekmen down into a tie for third place with the Italians in the league chase, each club having won 7 games and lost 6.

Zip Gero, one of the most likeable boys in the loop, was on the hill for the Smokers and he turned in a real neat exhibition. After a rather shaky start, he settled down in the fourth and kept the Royals hitless for four frames, allowing but five hits during the entire evening. In addition he whiffed five hitters. Gero also played an important part in the Smoke offense, starting the first Smoke rally in the third with a home run over the center field fence.

After the Royals had counted all of their runs, two in the first and two more in the early third, the tailenders went to work. In their half of the third they scored four runs on six bingles and in the fifth they went on another four run spree.

Eddie Kozlowski started to work from the Royal rubber and for two innings he held the opposition hitless. In the third, however, the Smoke batteries began to boom and Eddie began to wobble. He managed to last through this and the fourth innings but in the fifth the going got altogether too rough. He was relieved by Tommy Simcox, who finished. During his term of duty Koslowski gave seven hits and Simmy allowed four.

Natorsky, Royal shortstop, led his club on the offense with a pair of doubles and Fagan, Breen and Couillard, all of the Smoke Shop, each had two safeties. Afield, Chubby Gibbs was the star. He handled 11 chances and made but one slip. The score:

Thermos vs Ideals Tonight

Another big one tonight. The long awaited Thermos and Ideal game will be played at the campus this evening. These two clubs, it will be remembered, figured in a fracas about a month ago that shook the City league to its very foundation. The game was also the beginning of the Bottlers tumble.

Following a flock of protests, counter-protests and what not, the City league governors decided the affair a tie and ordered it played over. Since, the teams have engaged in a grudge series, independent of the league play and the Ideals won in a walk.

In both games, however, both clubs appeared with shifted lineups so that after all, nothing was decided. The fans can judge for themselves after tonight which club is really the better of the two. Both will appear with their regular lineups and will play a regulation twilight game.

The two pitchers who worked in that memorable affair of July 29, will again oppose each other this evening. Mike Nickerson will work from the Bottler hill and he will be opposed by shifty Bob Shaw.

Tonight's game is the regularly scheduled contest between the two nines on the league's third round of play. The tie will not be played off until next week.

ITALIANS BLANK "Y" IN JUNIOR LEAGUE GAME

The Italian Young Men's club blanked the Y. M. C. A. in the Junior league last night, 4 to 0.

The "Y" however offered plenty of opposition holding their opponents down to a 1 to 0 score until the sixth, when the Italians bunched three hits for as many runs. Wilk, pitching for the I. Y. M. C. was in fine form holding the "Y" to three hits. The "Y" was in scoring position on several occasions, but did not have the punch to put a run across.

The Italians got off to a one-run lead in the first when Hastings was safe on Burke's error, stole second and scored on Burelle's single through short.

From then until the sixth, there was no further scoring. In this frame, with one away, Burelle singled to left, and when Hoffman singled inside third, Burelle took third. Ferns singled to center scoring Burelle and when Lyons threw wild over the plate, Hoffman also scored. Caprilozzi grounded out to the pitcher, Ferns scoring, while Peltier fanned for the third out.

MAYS AND RICHARDS IN FEATURE AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 18—Bobby Mays of this city, Connecticut lightweight boxing champion, will box Phil Richards of London, England, in the ten-round feature bout of the opening show at the Thames arena, Division and Woodbridge Sts., on Friday night.

Richards occupies a prominent place in the fistic sun and from all appearances a lively contest is looked forward to on that night. Richards' style of fighting is similar to the well known Jackie Berg, and there will be action all the way through the bout.

Al. Matthews, well known New York featherweight, is booked for an eight round semi-final go opposite Al. Gillette, former local boxer who held the state bantamweight title until he removed to New Bedford. Matthews is agreeable to the match and only the consent of Gillette's manager was needed to complete this bout for a hummer.

Jimmie Quinn, Norwich local favorite, is matched to box Buster Ellis, New Bedford, Mass., in one of the opening bouts and it promises to be a rugged fight from start to finish as Ellis is of the old school and has met the best of them in the preliminaries in this section.

CUBS ACQUIRE KELLY TO TAKE GRIMM'S PLACE

CHICAGO, Aug. 18—(AP)—Long George Kelly, former New York Giant and Cincinnati first baseman, has returned to the National league—as a member of the Chicago Cubs.

William L. Veeck, president of the Cubs, today said that Kelly, who was released by Cincinnati more than a month ago, had been obtained from the Minneapolis club of the American association, for Malcolm Moss, young lefthanded pitcher, and one other player to be named this week.

Kelly will report for work tomorrow and will play first base while Charlie Grimm recovers from a spike wound, suffered Saturday when Frank O'Doul, of the Phillies, slid into him.

Kelly had played in 33 games for Minneapolis and has complied a batting average of .352, including six home runs. He served eight full seasons with the Giants and two and part of another with the Reds.

FAST AMATEUR BOUTS AT DANIELSON TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, August 18—Boxing fans from three states will be assembled at the North Street arena here Tuesday evening when another of a series of outdoor shows is staged by Louis Peloquin. The interest is so widespread because boxers from three states will appear during the course of the eight bouts scheduled.

Promoter Peloquin used exceptional care in making the matches for Tuesday night's show. The events will bring together a flock of boys who are just natural battlers and like the game. Some of them, boxing their ways to careers in the amateur ranks, have developed their style and ability to a degree forecasting that they will soon step into the professional ranks.

The majority of them have been seen in action here previously, and have in each instance developed a following of suporters who will be out rooting for them to win.

In case of rain Tuesday evening the bouts will be held the following night.

Short Double Header Today

MOLINE, Ill., Aug. 18—(AP)—One of the shortest doubleheaders ever played in the Mississippi Valley league is scheduled for Moline field tomorrow night when the Plows and Waterloo Hawks will play an inning and one-third of a game protested by the manager of the Waterloo club on July 7.

At the start of the abbreviated contest, Waterloo will have men on first and second and the score will be 7 to 5 in favor of Moline.

BATTALINO GIVEN BOUT OVER TAYLOR

HARTFORD, Aug. 18—(AP)—Bat Battalino, of Hartford, featherweight champion of the world, tonight decisively defeated Bud Taylor, Terre Haute Ind., veteran and won the decision of Referee Gene Roman, who credited the champion with winning eight of the ten rounds, giving one to Taylor and one even. The battle was witnessed by a crowd of 6,600 and was jammed with head to head fighting. Battalino's title was not at stake the champion weighing 129 1-2 pounds while Taylor weighed 128.

Taylor defeated Battalino in a hard fight at Detroit a few months ago but tonight the champion outboxed and outpunched the Terre Haute veteran. Battalino matched left hands with Taylor to win and scored many points with his left while Bud's pet hand ran into Bat's guard time and again. Much of the fighting was at close quarters. There were no knockdowns and neither fighter was cut.

Battalino ran up a big lead on points in the early rounds, Taylor losing six of the first seven and getting an even break in the seventh, according to Referee Roman's card, before he broke through to win the eighth. The referee's card gave Battalino 42 points against 36 for the western boy.

Ralph Lenny, Union City, N. J., light weight, knocked out Young Giraldo, of Cuba, in the first round of an eight rounder. Prince Saunders, of Chicago, won an eight round decision from Tony Leto, of Tampa, Fla., and Buster Nadeau, of Holyoke, won in eight rounds on points from Eddie Burll, of Hacksonville, Fla. In a six rounder, Billy Avera, of Florida, outpointed Frankie Marino, New Haven.

The Aetna
BOWLING — BILLIARDS
Alleys Reserved for Ladies
55 Shetucket St. Tel. 1912

Yesterday brought to us the prize alibi of the month.

It seems that there is a certain man in our town whose wife holds the family nurse-strings in a grip that is little short of strangulation.

The said citizen feeling the need of a "shot," as the boys say, and finding himself financially embarrassed decided to put the bee on the wife. He knew that the simple truth would result in only a tightening of the purse strings so his mind devised a ruse whereby the "shot" could be procured.

Approaching the custodian of the household resources he said, "Mary, old dear, it is imperative that I procure me a pair of socks for you know that this pair I have on will not stand another washing and darning."

And the good wife replies, "Faith, Michael, and if it was rum I thought you was after you sure would get a pair of socks—but not for your feet but your eyes." So to the family treasury she goes and extracts a 50-cent piece which she hands to her spouse with the instructions where the best socks are to be had for the money.

Everything is rosy with the said citizen. Here's fifty cents burning a hole in his pocket. A good pair of socks can be procured for two bits which would leave another two bits for the "shot." That would be slipping one over on the wife.

So the citizen went to the store and looked at the socks but he was displeased and refused to purchase. Then the entire fifty cents was spent in quenching the thirst.

Arriving home later in the day the good wife wanted to see the socks. The socks were not forth-coming and in explanation the husband said that he wouldn't buy any of Mr. Blank's socks for they were both for the left foot.

This alibi didn't register well at all with the wife who incidentally supplied her husband with the pair of socks.

But the strange part of it is that the men really thought that the socks he looked at in the store were for the left foot. He had been in the habit of seeing his wife hang the socks on the line with the toes pointing in opposite directions. And when he saw them in the store the toes pointed the same way and he thought they were both for the same foot.

BETTY NUTHALL LEADS FAVORITES IN TENNIS PLAY

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 18—(AP)—Betty Nuthall, with a bright red band around her head and all her strokes in beautiful control, led a parade of the favorites through the opening round of the forty third National Women's Tennis championship on the turf of the West Side stadium today.

Playing her first match in the United States since she was upset by Mrs. Molla Mallory in the quarter finals of this event last year, the English challenger turned back Louise McFarland of Pasadena, Cal., 6-0, 6-1, in a one-sided encounter thatlasted less than half an hour.

Against reh comparatively unknown opponent, Miss Nuthall employed the methods characteristic of Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, calmly out-driving her from the baseline in a competent fashion that indicated this English girl is a dangerous contender for the title Mrs. Moody has relinquished.

Two of Miss Nuthall's leading American rivals, however, won by scoores as decisive as hers. Mrs. Anna Harper, the left handed San Fran Francisco veteran who was ceeded first among the United States players, crushed Dorrance Chase of Boston, 6-0, 6-1, and Sarah Apifrey, of Brookline, Mass., outplayed Laura Pittenger of Camden, N. J., 6-1, 6-0, despite numerous double faults.

MANDELL TO CONDUCT HIS OWN BUSINESS

CHICAGO, Aug. 18—(AP)—Sammy Mandell, former world's lightweight champion, and Eddie Kane, his manager for nine years, came to the parting of the ways today.

Mandell will continue to box but not under Kane's management. Kane's contract with the Sheik of Rockford, Ill., does not expire until July 6, 1931. He says he will enforce it to the extent of collecting his share of Mandell's ring earnings until the expiration of the contract.

Kane is authority for the statement that Mandell has earned $400,000 during their nine years of association. Mandell plans to handle his own affairs, with the assistance of Teddy Bobkin, a friend.

Rotary vs. Polish Club

Tonight, the Rotary club meets the P. N. A. C. in the Junior league. The Rotary who are in the fight for the league leadership with the Duwells and Elks of course will put every effort to win, while the Polish club are out to beat out the Italian club for runner-up position in the league. There is some question as to what pitcher the Rotary will rely on, but Caron seems to be the logical choice, with Alex or Deschamps in reserve. The P. N. A. C. will no doubt start Watters who has been going strong with Kozlowski behind the bat. The game is scheduled for 6:30 p. m. sharp.

Lake Street Wins

Miss Germaine Wins

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18—(AP)—Helen Germaine, of New York, disposed of Jean Arteberger, of Pittsburgh today, in the annual public parks tennis tournament, 6-2, 6-2.

TILDEN, HAMPERED BY INJURY, PLAYS BRILLIANT TENNIS TO BEAT VINES

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 18—(AP)—Big Bill Tilden, suffering from injuries that made every step a painful one, today called upon his great wealth of tennis experience to turn back Ellsworth Vines, rising young Californian, in the veteran's first match in defense of his Newport Casino invitation singles championship.

This match was the most thrilling encounter of the 36 first and second round matches that were completed before an early evening shower put a stop to the play. The small opening day gallery saw the seven times national champion who had been top seeded, limp through a fierce 24 game battle with the cool youngster before overcoming him by margins of 9-7, 6-2.

Many times during the opening set Tilden appeared doomed to humiliating defeat. His injured hip prevented him from making any kind of an attempt to cover his court and during the early games he was forced to use all his great stroking skill to stay even with Vines.

Service was held for a dozen games before Tilden's terrific service and returns became annoying to the Californian. The veteran's furious speed seemed to dull Vines' sense of accuracy for there were many times when he belted an overhead smash to the sidelines, catching Tilden off balance on the other side of the court. Most of these shots failed to result in earned points by fractions of inches and it was these close "outs" that enabled Tilden to break through Vines' service in the 15th game and save his own in the following one for the set.

Tilden's limp became more pronounced during the second set but at this stage Vines was greatly upset by his narrow misses and he was completely overwhelmed by the grim veteran who broke three of his four second set services.

All of the other seeded players on the American list were able to survive their opening matches and the only setback that was unexpected came when John S. Milten, of New York, a newcomer to major tennis tournaments, defeated Keith Werner, of Los Angeles, in a gruelling extra set match, 3-6, 6-4, 9-7.

But four of the seven foreign players were called upon to play and three were strong enough to answer, E. R. Avery, young British collegian, gained the third round on a bye and a victory over Harry Plymire, of Palo Alto, Cal., 6-3, 7-5, and Marcel Rainville, of Montreal, the Canadian Davis cup player kept pace with him by taking a 32 game match from Howard Voshell, New York, by scores of 12-10, 6-4. J. S. Olliff, England, overcame Harold McGuffin, Philadelphia, 7-5, 6-1, in another second rounder but L. A. Godfrey, captain of the British forces, was eliminated in the first round by Harrison Coggeshall, of Des Moines, 6-3, 6-2.

BUTTON LOCKS OPERATE AT TOUCH OF FINGER

Modern door locks, like modern lights, operate at the touch of a handy button; no keys are actually required. Such a button lock, locked by pressing a button in the knob and unlocked by a turn of the knob from the inside, gives instant action, avoiding delay and furthering convenience. More than a million of these locks, it is stated, are now in use.

It is necessary to use a key only on doors where ordinarily a key on both sides would be required; in such places with these button locks the keyhole is placed in the center of the outer knob, and is used only for unlocking the door from the outside. All metal trims are of solid brass or bronze. Glass, metal or opal knobs in eight types are available. Durability, precision and perfect operation are fully guaranteed.

BARTELL'S DOUBLE IN 9TH WINS OVER THE DODGERS

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 18—(AP)—Dick Bartell's double to deep left in the ninth with the bases loaded sent Paul Waner and Adam Comorosky scampering across the plate with the runs that gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 4 to 3 decision over the Brooklyn Robins today. As a result of the defeat the Robins' lead over the third place Giants, who were idle, was reduced to half a game.

Preceding Bartell's dramatic hit, Glenn Wright had sent Brooklyn out in front by one run when he slammed out a homer in the first half of the ninth. Clark, who gave Ervin Brame a great mound battle weakened in the ninth, however, as P. Waner singled and Comorosky and Bool walked. Luque relieved Clark and was greeted by Bartell's double that won the game. The score:

CUBS PICK UP FULL GAME BY SWAMPING PHILS

CHICAGO, Aug. 18—(AP)—The Cubs accomplished more constructive work on their job of building up a lead in the Naitonal league pennant battle today, mauling Philadelphia, 17 to 3, for their third straight in the series, and giving them a three and one-half game margin over Brooklyn which lost to Pittsburgh.

Perce Malone held the Phillies to eight hits and accounted for his fifteenth victory of the season. The Cubs belabored Hensen and Phillips for 17 safeties and used nine bases on balls to advantage. Woody English walked four times, hit once and scored five Cub runs.

Hack Wilson slammed out his forty-second home run of the season to open a six run rally in the eighth, and was only one circuit drive away from the league record set last season by Chuck Klein of the Phillies, who saw the drive sail into the bleachers. Malone also hit for the circuit, getting his with a man on in the fourth. The score:

GEHRIG LEADS BATTERS IN BIG SIX RACE

(By the Associated Press)

Pounding out three hits, including his thirty-fifth home run of the season, Lou Gehrig again led the batting parade of baseball's big six yesterday. The second successive day of hard hitting by the Yankees' first baseman boosted his average to .391. Two hits in four times at the plate sent Babe Herman's average up one point to .402. The leader, Bill Terry, was idle. As Gehrig tacked on three points, he moved into a tie for third place with Chuck Klein, who went hitless and fell down to .391. Simmons' average remained at .380 but Ruth added a point with one hit in two times at bat.

YANKEES POUND OUT EASY WIN OVER WHITE SOX

NEW YORK, Aug. 18—(AP)—Aided by some timely hitting on the part of his teammates, Herb Pennock won his tenth game of the season today as the New York Yankees clubbed out a 11 to 4 victory over the Chicago White Sox. The victory gave the Yanks their sixteenth triumph of the last 22 starts.

Pennock was hit hard but as usual was stingy with blows with men on bases and he did not give a base on balls. Lou Gehrig drove out his thirty-fifth homer with two aboard in the sixth, while Reynolds, who made four hits for the Sox, cleaned the bases with a double in the seventh. The honor of leading the Yankee attack, however, went to Ben Chapman, who pounded out four hits in five times at the plate.

Umpire Moriarty chased Manager Bush of the Sox from the park in the first inning for arguing over a questionable hit by Byrd. The score:

George Earnshaw, who lasted the distance for the Mackmen, was credited with his nineteenth win of the season. PERSIA ANCIENT CROSSROADS WHERE BUILDING IS DIFFICULT

Persia's plan for a north-south railway traversing the country from the Caspian sea to the Persian gulf has run into serious obstacles in recent months—the obstacles including two lofty mountain ranges.

A bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society tells of Persia's geography as it affects railway building and the difficulties that must be overcome if the country is to be traversed by a steel highway.

"Because of its geographical features, Persia is one of the most isolated of the world's important extensive areas," says the bulletin. "The high central plateau that constitutes the bulk of the country is almost entirely rimmed by lofty mountain ranges. Their crests and even many of their passes lie deep in snow in winter. The isolation is increased by sizable desert areas in south, central and eastern Persia.

"Since the earliest historic times important trading routes have led across Persia, but until recent years they have been exclusively caravan tracks for camels, mules and donkeys; and even today these are the most important factors in moving Persia's exports and imports and in distributing her domestic products. During the World war a few highways were given hard surfaces and automobile trucks put into operation. The chief route that has been thus partially motorized leads from the frontier of Iraq on the west, over the Zagros Mountains to Hamadan on the plateau, and thence on to Teheran, the capital. The road has not been kept in good repair, however, and is used by caravans of slow-moving animals, so that as a motor highway it is not highly efficient.

"For more than a quarter century there has been talk of building railways in Persia, but practically nothing was done until during the World war. Before the war the only railway that Persia could boast of in all her 628,000 square miles was a toylike pleasure line between Teheran and a suburb eight miles distant.

"Railways have reached out toward Persia for some time from neighboring countries. The Russian Trans-Caspian line in Turkestan dips to touch the Persian border near Abivard, a hundred miles southwest of Merv. A line built by the British from Baghdad has its railhead on the Iraq-Persian border near Khaniquin. It is from this railhead that the motor road runs toward Hamadan.

"Two railways, extended for military reasons during the World war, actually penetrated into Persia. The first, built by the Russians from Georgia and Armenia, crossed the boundary at Julfa, near the northwest corner of Persia and reached Tabriz. This road is only 85 miles long. Fourteen hundred miles to the southeast is the second railway to cross into Persia. It is the British-built road from India through Baluchistan. It crosses the border at Mirjawa and runs on Persian territory for approximately 100 miles to Duzdap, near the point where Persia, Afghanistan and Baluchistan meet.

"Less than five years ago the present ambitious plan for a trans-Persian railway was born. The road was mapped to extend from a port to be built at the southeastern corner of the Caspian sea, a short distance along the lowlands that skirt the southern shores of that sea, and through the Elburz Mountains to the plateau. It was then to continue to Teheran, across the plateau to the Zagros Mountains, through that range, and to the Persian gulf near its northwest corner—a total distance of between 1,200 and 1,400 miles. Contracts were let to a German syndicate for work at the Caspian end; and to an American-French-British syndicate for construction in the south.

"Surveys disclosed excellent port possibilities on the Khor Musa, an inlet of the Persian gulf about 40 miles east of the mouth of the Tigris-Euphrates. No port had ever existed on this deep water inlet, but there Persia hopes to build her finest southern harbor. The port, Bandar Shapur, has been begun; the American syndicate constructed a dock there in 1928 from timber shipped from America, and there all material for the southern construction has been unloaded directly from ocean vessels. From the dock at Bandar Shapur the railway has been built north for 155 miles to Dizful, and is in operation. In this stretch it has been necessary to erect many bridges including one a mile long at Ahwaz, across the Karun river, Persia's only navigable stream. Just beyond Dizful, the railhead of the southern railway, rise the Zagros mountains. Extending the railway through this lofty range will require great engineering skill, laborious construction work, and millions of dollars. It is possible that a highway will be built from the railhead through the mountains to serve in conjunction with the existing railway until it can be extended to the plateau.

"In the north the situation closely parallels that in the south. The German company erected a pier at Bandir-i-Gas on Asterbad bay, on the Caspian and laid rails through the lowlands for 70 miles to Sari. Twenty miles farther are the Elburz mountains with peaks 9,000 to 19,000 feet and passes over 7,000 feet high. There the northern work has stopped.

"Americans can get a better idea of Persian geography by imagining the country loosened from its position on the map and slid half way around the world in the same latitude band. If its southeastern corner were brought to rest at the southeastern corner of Texas much of the western part of the transplanted Persia would fall in a region with terrain and climate not unlike its own. The new Persian gulf port, Bandar Shapur, would fall approximately at Nogales, Arizona. The Persian Caspian coast would lie southeastward from Great Salt Lake, Utah.

"The great size of Persia is apparent when its map is thus superimposed on that of the United States. It would cover more than half of Texas, all of New Mexico, most of Arizona and large parts of Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado, Utah, Nevada and northern Mexico."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

There is a new contagion in town, but the health authorities are doing nothing to prevent its spread. In fact they might even be inclined to say to the public—"go and get some of this it will do you good."

The contagion is Jack Oakie's spreading grin, in "The Sap from Syracuse," which closes its local engagement at Warner's Broadway today.

This picture, Oakie's second starring vehicle, is a panic from start to finish. It presents the wizard of wisecrackery in the title role of a supposed "dim-wit from the sticks" who is the butt of practical jokers on board a boat to Europe but who finally turns the tables on his tormentors amid oceans of laughter.

Oakie's leading lady in this show is Ginger Rogers, the peppy little "cigaret me" girl who made such a splendid success of her first movie role as Puff Randolph in "Young Man of Manhattan."

It's up to the true wife to act like a woman possessed.

WESTERLY

WESTERLY VOTES TO BUY BEACH SITE FOR PUBLIC USE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 18—The special Westerly financial town meeting for the purpose of purchasing seashore property for recreation purposes was called to order by Moderator Lewis Stanton at 7:30 p. m. Monday in the Westely town hall with 150 voters present.

Town Clerk Col. Everett E. Whipple read the call for the special meeting at the direction of the Westerly town council for the following purposes:

"Shall the Town of Westerly purchase seashore property to be used for the purpose of a recreation park or recreation ground?

"Shall the Town of Westerly make an appropriation for the purchase of seashore property to be used for the purpose of a recreation park or recreation ground and if the town shall vote to purchase such seashore property?

"Shall the Town of Westerly make an appropriation for the development and improvement of seashore property to be used for the purpose of a recreation park or recreation ground when and if the town shall vote to purchase such seashore property?"

The move for the call came from the regular August session of the Westerly town council on Aug. 4th last when a letter under date of Aug. 5, was received addressed to the council from Albert L. Saunders of Medford, Mass., and Carrie L. Saunders of the Shore road, Westerly, heirs of Alzada Saunders, stating that a 60 days option was given at the price of $6,500 for shore-front beach lots Nos. 92 S, 93 S, and 94 S, each of 50 feet width, and located 500 or 600 feet east of the Atlantic Beach casino.

The following vote was offered:

"That the town of Westerly purchase the following described seashore property to be used for the purpose of a recreation park or recreation ground, to wit: Lots No. 92 S, 93 S, 94S on the plan of sites of Misquamicut recorded in plat book No. 2, page 14 of the records of said town of Westerly, together with the land opposite and in the rear of said lots approximately 140 feet, more or less, in width and extending back to Brightman's pond, so called, and the town council of the town of Westerly is hereby authorized and directed to forthwith negotiate for and conclude the purchase of said property from its present owners for a sum not to exceed $6,500."

Harry R. Milner moved the acceptance, seconded by Farquhar Smith.

James O. Lynch arose to ask if a specific parcel of land was called for and where it was located. Mr. Milner, chairman of the municipal improvement committee of the chamber of commerce, showed a blue print of the beach to show that the west line of lots available for purchase was about 600 feet east of the casino or the 12th lot distant, as Moderator Stanton informed the voters.

Isreal R. Chapman inquired as to the present ownership of the land and was informed that it was owned by the heirs of Capt. William F. Saunders.

Howard C. Babcack, of Florida, a visitor at the beach, asked if the vote carried with it the development and the cost of such. Also if it was desired to provide a public beach where thousands could come from other states. He said, "If you are going in after a wait of 25 or 30 years, you should go in all over and provide means so that visitors would not undress in the highways. A comfort station should also be erected.

Edwin L. Sawyer declared that it was his belief that it should be self-supporting, saying that there was a movement on foot to lower town taxes and this could not be done if more expense was involved.

James O. Lynch inquired as to the necessity of the rush and thought that the increase and decrease of real estate values should be investigated. James Salemano said that enough land should be purchased so that an extensive right of way to the beach could be installed.

George B. Utter stated that three lots were not enough for a way, and had been at a town owned beach at Westport, Conn, where conditions were ideal and that a mistake was made, when he was a member of the Westerly town council, that Ft. Mansfield property was not purchased at $90,000.

Frank A. Sullivan said that conditions had changed in the last 10 or 20 years and with the building of better roads more and more people from distant points were attracted to the beach. He thought it an outrage to live in a town so near the beach where people cannot afford to have their own beach and the condition was growing where the poor people were not welcomed anywhere. He said the town now owned some 400 feet of land on the pond with a skip of a lot next to the three lots under discussion. He said that a previous council had traded a 400 foot strip of beach front for 400 feet of swamp land and the town was stung.

Charles Henry Crandall asked Mr. Utter what the necessity for a 150 foot right of way to the beach was. He said that on the strip of breach extending from the highwater mark to the ocean was room enough for everybody, in reply to Mr. Utter's statement.

George A. Dolan offered an amendment to the resolution to have an appropriation of $15,000 substituted for the $6,500 and that two lots to the eastward of the three lots joined a pathway to the beach which should be acquired. At the present time one lot is owned by Mary Damerel of Westerly and the second by Raymond B. Case of Norwich. Mr. Dolan later withdrew his amendment as under such conditions he thought the price of land would go up.

On a rising vote the original vote as offered was carried.

On motion of Mr. Dolan the meeting voted to have the Westerly town council obtain prices on the two lots and report at a future meeting.

By a voice vote the following was carried without remarks:

"That the sum of $6,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, and the same is hereby appropriated for the purchase of said property, and the town treasurer of the town of Westerly is hereby authorized and empowered to hire money and issue in the corporate name of the town of Westerly, notes, debentures or other evidence of indebtedness, signed by the town treasurer and countersigned by the town clerk of the town of Westerly at such time and in such amounts as the town council of said town shall determine, and may renew the same from time to time as the same may become due and payable, to the amount not exceeding in the aggregate at any one time the sum of $6,500, to provide the funds necessary for the purchase of said property."

On the motion of Henry L. Burdick the Westerly zoning board, amended by Mr. Sullivan to read Westerly town council, was instructed to look into development costs and report at the annual meeting in February. The matter of making an appropriation was also referred to the finance meeting in February.

At a joint meeting of the Westerly highway commission in the Westerly town council held Monday afternoon it was decided to take no action looking to the request of the building authorities on the Westerly junior high school to call a special financial town meeting in making funds available in advance for grading and similar work. The request for such a special meeting will now have to come from another source than the town council.

A special executive committee meeting of the Westerly chamber of commerce held Monday afternoon endorsed the proposition for the town to secure seashore property for recreational purposes. On the discussion of a new Pawcatuck bridge, it was brought out that the Westerly highway authorities are to go to Providence on Wednesday to confer on the subject with the Rhode Island state board of public roads.

CAPT. FOST CAUGHT LOBSTER, 6 SLOBSTER CAUGHT CLAM

Capt. E. Fost, in his boat Horsefly, was out at the fishing grounds Thursday after flat fishing. They had been scarce and seemed to play hide and seek with old and young salts. So Mate Joe McBride in a sad voice said, "Well, captain, looks like another unlucky day for us, with no fish in sight." Being a good sport, the captain said "I will toss a John D. Rockefeller new dime in the air and if it lands heads we will move to another place and try our luck." So the dime rolled a head and off to a new place the good ship went. Throwing over the net to see if the April Fool fish had come back from their strike for the last month or so, when the time was up the net was pulled on deck. Then what a load of fish. Five barrels were taken. That made the smile come over the fishermen's faces, to see fish again. They had been out since 3 in the morning and now the sun was going down in Hadley woods. One more drag was planned, to see if the rabbit foot was still in Mate McBride's back pocket. But this time what a headache Capt. Fost had! The net was torn, but two barrels of fish were there and a monster lobster. Gee! it sure was a dandy. In one claw the lobster had a round clam. Capt. Fost could not get the clam. The monster shell fish had got a good hold and the captain would lose a finger. One lobster claw had enough meat to feed about two persons. The mate did not know what to say with a round clam in a lobster's claw—no scales on deck to weigh the lobster. He had to wait until he reached the packing-house dock. It was 6.30 when the boat Horsefly reached the wharf. Then the lobster was put on the scales and it weighed 15 1-2 lbs. It was sold for a ten spot.

To get the clam out of the monster shell fish's claw it had to be cut away with a chisel and hammer. It took ten minutes before the clam was free. Nothing like that was ever seen round the Indian town of the fishing center of Connecticut. A picture was taken of the lobster with the clam in the claw, to prove it when Capt. Fost tells the story to fishermen from Block Island or New London.

But that's not all. It will cost about $25 to fix the net. Will the seven barrels of fish clear enough for the crew and the expense for the day? Wait and see, when the check comes back from Fulton market in Father Knickerbocker's city. Many old salts never saw in their life a lobster holding a clam in its claw. One old salt used to fish with the Indians and could tell a storm coming up the river the way the wind blew. With a big chew of Tiger chewing tobacco in the left side of his mouth he said, "I have learned something today about lobsters that I never knew before—going after round clams! That one down in the mud getting one in its claws. I am 91 years old and I've been on a whale boat and heard some awful whale yarns by old salts but if I had not seen it with my eyes, I never would have took it for the truth! I will have to shake the hand of the younger man for bringing in to the fishing village a lobster that was perfect and a clam catcher besides! Well you cannot tell what freak thing a fish or shell fish will do in this North American salt water!"

Over 200 people came and saw the monster lobster with the round clam in its claw and many snapshots were taken before the hammer got busy. Some automobiles that stopped had Massachusetts numbers and some from New Hampshire. It sure was a real treat for the summer people who came that far to get a smell of the Long Island air off Fishers Island water. Now they can go back home and crowd into the corner store and tell about the freak trick that lobster did with the clam, coming from the bottom of the ocean in a fish net. The fishermen are going to wait and see if Capt. Fost made a good day's pay on the fish and to pay for the net that was torn when the 15 1-2 lb. lobster got in around the shores of Block Island.

POETRY

Poplars

The poplar is a lonely tree,
It has no branches spreading wide
Where birds may sing or squirrels hide,
It throws no shadow on the grass
Tempting the wayfarers who pass
To stop and sit there quietly.

The poplar is a slender tree,
It has no boughs where children try
To climb far off into the sky,
To hold a swing, it's far too weak,
Too small it is for hide-and-seek,
Friendless, forsaken it must be.

The poplar is a restless tree,
At every breeze its branches bend
And signal to the child, "Come, friend."
Its leaves forever whispering
To thrush and robin, "Stay and sing."
They pass. It quivers plaintively.

Poplars are lonely. They must grow
Close to each other in a row.
—Edward Bliss Reed.

Sonnet

Such little things can often come between
Two hearts that love. As by a conjurer's trick
Stray thoughts can make a wall as real as brick,
And as impenetrable, though unseen.
Like smouldering weeds, still damp with rain, a screen
Of smoke is rised by old desires—so thick
That one gropes for the other blind and sick,
Needing a friendly arm on which to lean.
Such little things can wound the heart, though both
Be ever careful what is done and said.
For like the branch of mistletoe that Hoth
Threw sportively at Balder's golden head,
A playful word, light as a summer moth,
Can bear a venomed sting—and love lies dead!
—Carl B. Adams in Stratford Magazine.

Visitor—I suppose you are like all the other sailors—a wife in every port?

Patriotic Boatman—Certainly not, madam. Only ports within the British Empire.—London Answers.

It was right after the Wall Street crash. Broker Beeswax was waked in the middle of the night by a burglar.

"What are you doing in my room?" inquired Beeswax.

"I'm looking for money!" growled the burglar.

BEAR FACTION FAILED IN ITS EFFORT TO HAMMER DOWN PRICES OF STOCKS

NEW YORK, Aug. 18. —(P)—Reactionary commodity markets encouraged the bear faction to apply further pressure to the stock market today, but again the market was found to have been hammered down about as far as it could go.

Stocks sold off sharply for a time in the morning, and a few individual issues developed acute weakness, but pivotal stocks were well supported, no general public liquidation could be shaken loose, so share prices rose almost as quickly as they fell when shorts tried to buy back their stocks. The market closely followed the pattern of Saturday. Most of the activity originated with floor traders, and the day's transactions aggregated only 1,413,610 shares.

The price index of 90 leading shares showed a net loss for the day of less than a point. The amusement shares were selected by bears as a vulnerable spot and a few issues in this group declined easily, but they regained about half their loss before the finish.

The day's news included a few fairly favorable earnings statements. Fox Film reported $2.84 net per class A and B share in the first half, against $2.08 in the like period of 1929, which checked a bear raid on the stock. After dropping six points, the stock rallied 3. It was announced that no change in dividend policy was anticipated. Drug, Inc., reported first half net of $3.01 a share, against $3.10 on about two thirds as many shares.

There had been considerable bearish gossip in circulation in brokerage circles regarding possible dividend cuts, by Fox Film and others. Kennecott had been expected to announce a quarterly disbursement of 50 cents against 75 cents in the previous quarter, but the directors' meeting was postponed because of lack of a quorum.

On the whole, industrial news was meager. Early estimates of steel operations for the week indicated that no further curtailment in the Youngstown area was in prospect, but output in the Pittsburgh district appeared to be holding barely steady. S. W. Straus and company reported building permits taken out in leading cities for July showed an increase of 1 3-5 per cent over June, as contrasted to a normal seasonal reduction of 18 per cent from June to July, but the July total was about 36 per cent under July, 1929, and last year was a slack year in building.

Powerful bear pressure was directed against Radio corporation, common during the morning, and it sold off about 3 points, but the stock was well taken by brokers connected with its market sponsors, and regained all but a point of its loss. Since only $1.27 per class A preferred share was earned during the first half, against dividend requirements of $1.75, bears argued that the preferred dividend was insecure but sponsors of the issue feel that the company did reasonably well in the first half, considering demoralized conditions in the radio industry, and look for improvement in the last half.

Columbia Graphophone was depressed 3 points to a new low at 12 1-8, and recovered a point. The company is said to be receiving increasing competition abroad, and the stock has been less popular since the merger negotiations with Radio corporation's foreign subsidiary appear to have been indefinitely postponed. General Theatres Equipment sagged 3 points to a new low.

American Telephone, General Electric, General Motors and U. S. Steel closed about steady. Such stocks as Coca Cola, Eastman, Hershey Chocolate, Western Union, Safeway Stores, and Sears Roebuck lost 2 to 3. United Aircraft was sent up 2 points in a large turnover. Earnings for the year are estimated at a little better than $2 a share. Standard Gas, Jewel Tea and Johns Manville rose about 2, Curtiss Publishing 4, and Ingersoll Rand jumped 7 in a small turnover.

Cotton tumbled about $3 a bale to new lows in selling reflecting weakness of the Liverpool market and bearish weather reports. Wheat and corn futures lost about 2 to 3 cents a bushel.

Foreign exchanges were inclined to sag. Sterling cables again held steady around $4.87 1-8, but the peseta recorded another new low, and the Canadian dollar gave up most of its premium.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 18—(P)— The curb market began the new week with speculation being kept alive only by the listless efforts of professional traders and with share prices again pointing downward, particularly the oils. Total sales were only 350,800 shares.

Despite the progress made at curtailment of crude output and reduction of gasoline stocks, prices have been none too firm, and rumors of a fresh cut in mid-continent crude prices were widely heard. Humble dropped 3 points, and Vacuum, 2. Gulf lost one, and Cities Service sagged fractionally.

Bearish pressure against the utilities were generally resisted. Electric Bond and Share was depressed 2 points, but it regained all but 1-8 of a point. American and Foreign Power warrants lost 2 points, while American Gas and Electric gained nearly as much. Electric Power and Light warrants mounted 3 and Northern States Power class A stock 4 points. United Light A fluctuated between a gain of 5-8 and a loss of 1 1-4, and closed off 3-4. In the natural gas stocks, Duquesne was active and firm.

A few comparatively inactive issues in which there is almost no market again broke sharply on light offerings. Franklin Manufacturing sold at 6 compared to the previous sale of 16 1-2. American Hard Rubber sold at 50, 17 3-4 under the previous sale. Both recorded new lows. Firm spots in the specialty group were Air Express, up .. and National Rubber Machinery, up nearly as much.

In the investing company stocks, United Founders was firm, while Blue Ridge and Goldman Sachs eased.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.— (P)— Grain prices underwent a sharp all around setback today, influenced largely by rains over corn fields in parts of Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, and Kansas. Besides, big arrivals of newly harvested wheat at Minneapolis, 1250 cars today, led to increased selling of Chicago wheat future deliveries, and the United States wheat visible supply total piled up 8,519,000 bushels additional as compared with a week ago. Continued uncertainties relative to financing of the 1930 Canadian wheat crop tended also to pull values down.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled, 2 3-8a3 1-4c a bushel lower than Saturday's finish. Wheat closed heavy 2 1-4a2 7-8c down, oats 1 1-4a1 3-4c off, and provisions unchanged to 30c decline

Sales for the month totaled 207,400 tons and total shipments 194,747 tons. Approximate unsold stock on hand August 1 was 82,708 tons.

A shipment of $140,000 in gold arrived in New York today from Rio De Janeiro aboard the steamer American Legion, consigned to the Chemical Bank and Trust company.

The two Cleveland plants of Hupp Motor Car company resumed operations today after a two weeks' vacation shutdown. Approximately 1500 men are employed in the two plants

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—(P)— The listed bond market moved irregularly today in a quiet and colorless session.

Railroad issues were in fair demand at close to their best prices of the year, which also signifies the best since 1928. Utilities were firm and the continued inquiry for investment issues brought out a further list of bonds in this group, with several climbing to new 1930 peaks.

Changes in the foreign list were small and of a divergent nature with the price level little disturbed. Expanded trading developed in United States governments. Liberty issues held firm, while Treasury issues yielded a small fraction.

The daily advance of a group of railroad bonds to new peaks for the year has become an old story during the past few weeks. Today was no exception. A feature was the assumption of leadership in the day's trading by Southern Pacific 4 1-2s. The brisk demand for the bond carried it to a new 1930 high price at 103 1-4.

Pennsylvania issues were well bought, with the debenture 4 1-2s, general 4 1-2s and 3 1-2s, advancing to new peaks for the year along with Reading 4 1-2s. Atchison general 4s, Big Four 4 1-2s, Colorado and Southern refunding 4 1-2s, Delaware and Hudson refunding 4s, New Orleans, Texas and Mexico 5s, Nickel Plate 4 1-2s, New York Central 3 1-2s and New York Connecting Railway 5s.

Kansas City Power and Light 4 1-2s, Public Service Electric and Gas 4 1-2s, and North American Edison 5s C, appreciated to new high figures for the year. Brooklyn Manhattan Transit 6s, were quite active and firm.

A feature of the stock privilege group was the 5 1-2 rise in Pathe warrant 7s. Paramount Famous Players Lasky 6s gained 3-4. Amusement convertibles sagged. General Theatres losing 3-8 and Warner Brothers again turning downward, losing 1 1-4.

Among industrials General Motors acceptance 5s gained 1-2 to reach a new high. Shell Union 5s and Pure Oil 5 1-2s were firm. Royal Dutch 4s were a strong spot and sold at a new high price for the year.

Leading foreign dollar bonds ruled steady to firm, with most of them attracting little trading. German 5 1-2s and 7s the most active of the standard Europeans were steady. Batavian Petroleum 4 1-2s were sold 1-8 lower. South Americans were quiet. Brazil 6 1-2s of '26-57 gained a full point. Chile Republic 6s of May 1962, another active spot, sagged 1-2 point.

NORWICH BUILDING ACTIVITIES SHOW GAIN

Building permits issued by cities and towns in Connecticut during the month of July fell off perceptibly as compared with the figures of June, according to the monthly survey conducted through the office of E. L. Taylor, industrial commissioner of the New Haven railroad. The decline amounted to approximately two million dollars among the 22 communities reported individually in the railroad survey.

The canary pine, a hardy tree from the Canary islands, is said to be ideal for the warmer parts of the temperate zone, and has already been successfully introduced into the arid regions of South Africa, into Australia, New Zealand, Japan, Chile, Argentina and Brazil

Attends Spa Races

By MME. LISBETH

One of the many notables who attended the famous Spa races at Saratoga, N. Y., recently, was Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, prominent New York social registerite.

Mrs. Iselin wore a printed frock with an interesting circular skirt and long sleeves, belted at the normal line. With this frock she wore a hat with a moderate brim, which was slit in front, and banded with ribbon. Black oxfords were worn with this costume.

The count of Pooder, who claims to be the last lineal descendant of King John Sobieski, of Poland, was recently discovered living in Budapest, Hungary, in poverty. An attorney is trying to get him a pension from the Polish government.

BUILDING PERMITS FOR PAST MONTH CALL FOR EXPENDITURE OF $95,000

During the past week five building permits were granted by Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft for work entailing an outlay of approximately $95,000. The permit issued to Contractor W. S. Spencer for the erection of the Norton Memorial gymnasium is the largest item on the list, the estimated cost of the building being $90,000. The building is practically complete only a small amount of interior work to be done besides the grading of the grounds surrounding the building. It is expected that it will be ready for use by the time school opens in September.

Work on the New London County home on Norwich-Groton highway is well along. The brick work has been completed on the main building as well as on the school house and the children's cottage, both of which are practically complete. The workmen are now engaged in putting on the porches in the front and the sun-porches in the rear. The copper conductors and flashings are now being put on.

The house for Charles D. Greenman, being built by Contractor P. F. Sweeney on McKinley avenue extension, is practically completed with the exception of the interior decorating. The exterior lacks only the finishing coat of paint.

There is another house on the extension being erected by a local builder. This house is almost ready for occupation. The house is being given the final coat of paint.

The addition to the United Congregational church which is being erected by Peck-McWilliams Co., is well along, the three brick walls being nearly completed.

The building permits issued by Fire Marshal Taft are as follows:

To W. S. Spencer, contractor, to erect a brick and steel gymnasium building on Crescent street for the Norwich Free Academy corporation. The building will be fire-resisting construction with concrete walls faced with brick, concrete floors, truss roof covered with 5-ply roofing and interior walls faced with ornamental brick and tile. The building is two stories in height. The plumbing is all in brass. The building is heated by steam. The estimated cost is $90,000.

To W. S. Spencer, contractor, to alter the present brick building on Franklin street for The Bulletin Co. The alteration work will include the re-arranging and the erection of new partitions. The estimated cost is $1800.

To W. S. Spencer, contractor, to erect a fire-proof concrete vault for the storage of files and records. The building will be 12x16 feet and one story high. The walls will be of reinforced concrete with asphalt roof and fire-proof door. The estimated cost is $1200.

To Margaret and Annie Carroll, to add a veranda to the present building at 43 Williams street. The veranda, which will be of frame construction, will be 6x25 feet. The estimated cost is $150.

To Francis M. Toomey, contractor, to erect a one-car frame garage for Lyman J. Cobleigh at 36 Hedge avenue. The garage will be 12x18 feet with concrete foundation and balloon frame. The estimated cost is $150.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were four sales of real estate as compared to 11 sales for the corresponding week in 1929. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $30,395 and $9,920.

There were five sales of real estate in New London during the past week, one less than during the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $8,000 and $23,105.

NEW LONDON

Completion of the new administration building of the Connecticut College for Women within three weeks was announced at the office of the general contractors on the job.

Workmen finished placing the linoleum coverings for the floors of the offices on the main floor this week and practically all that remains to be done now is the final coats of paint on the inside of the structure.

The new administration building is located about 125 feet south of New London hall on the college campus and is of local ashlar granite and steel construction with limestone trim and cement base roof covered with slate.

It is 155 by 50 feet in dimension and four stories high. The design is similar to that of the other college buildings. The cost is placed at $275,000.

The first floor contains class rooms, storage rooms, day student rooms, locker rooms and sitting rooms. The second or main floor contains the administration offices, including a suite of offices for the president and the offices of the graduating secretary, personnel director and bursar.

The third floor contains eight class rooms, the faculty room, cloak room and kitchenette. The fourth floor contains lecture rooms.

Ground for the new building was broken Oct. 12, 1929. The contract provided that the work be completed by Sept. 1 this year and indications are now that this will be done.

As soon as the building is completed the administration offices in the old administration building will be moved over to the new structure and the vacated offices transformed into extra class rooms, etc.

Work is proceeding expeditiously on the construction of a substantial addition to the heating plant of the Connecticut college.

The foundations have been completed and work is well along on the walls, which are to be of tapestry brick and hollow tile construction. The plans also provide for two new boilers to be installed and a 125-foot chimney. Within the new addition the heating plant will be 68 by 44 feet and besides the boiler room will contain a pump room, cold storage room, engineer's room, shower room and tool room.

WORK STARTED ON NURSES' HOME AT PUTNAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Aug. 18—When the present volume of building now underway slackens in the early winter months a number of new building will grace some of the undeveloped sections of many streets in the city. On Main street builders have brought about a remarkable improvement on the site of the old municipal sand hole, through the erection of a modern brick and steel garage, which will, upon its completion, house the Place Motor company's sales rooms and service station. Exterior work is nearing completion and finishers are now at work on the interior portions.

Excavation was started last week on the site of the proposed nurses home at the Day Kimball hospital on Pomfret street. As soon as the foundation is set contractors will begin work on the $50,000 project for which, funds are now being raised.

William E. Wheaton of Mechanics street, is the owner of a modern one and a half story bungalow recently completed on the northerly end of that street. The house embodies all of the most up to date innovations of home building and its various features greatly accentuate the beauty of that street which is one of the city's best residential sections.

The year's outstanding achievement in Putnam building circles is the new and ultra modern home of the Cargill Trust company which stands foremost among the business blocks on Main street.

On Providence street, the local Polish faternity is financing the erection of a one story club building. The site of the home is one the lot west of the railroad bridge, directly opposite the old trolley switch. Foundations have already been laid and work on the building is now in progress. It will be built of wood, along present day lines of architecture.

The social rooms of the members of the engine and ladder companies at the Union square fire station have been renovated by the laying of new floors and decorations of the walls and ceilings with a fibre board. This work was carried out under the direction of the property committee of the common council.

Engineers in charge of the renewing various mains of the city water system have the reconstruction work well underway at this time. Trenches on Oak street have been dug and pipe lines connecting the new standpipe on Oak hill with water mains at Front and School streets are now being sunk into the ground by the large force of workmen employed. R. E. Thurston, chairman of the board of water commissioners and technical engineer on the reconstruction feat said last week that he expects to see the majority of plans worked out before cold weather sets in.

Road builders are active in this town at the present time working for the completion of a stretch of state aid road which commences at the intersection of Grove street and Killingly avenue and runs in the northerly direction over Putnam Heights, tying up with the Providence pike road at a point near the Children's home in Sawyer district. The work is nearly finished, only a short strip of roadbed on the Providence road side, remaining to be macadamized. This highway, in addition to affording winter time relief for residents of the Heights, provides a shorter and more direct route to Providence and other points of western Rhode Island.

WESTERLY

For the second week in August, Westerly Building Inspector Thomas Wills and Zoning Inspector Louis J. Rossie have issued the following building and zoning permits:

Aug. 13. Michael D. G. Papalia, 37 Grove avenue. Reshingle house at 37 Grove avenue with slate-coated shingles.

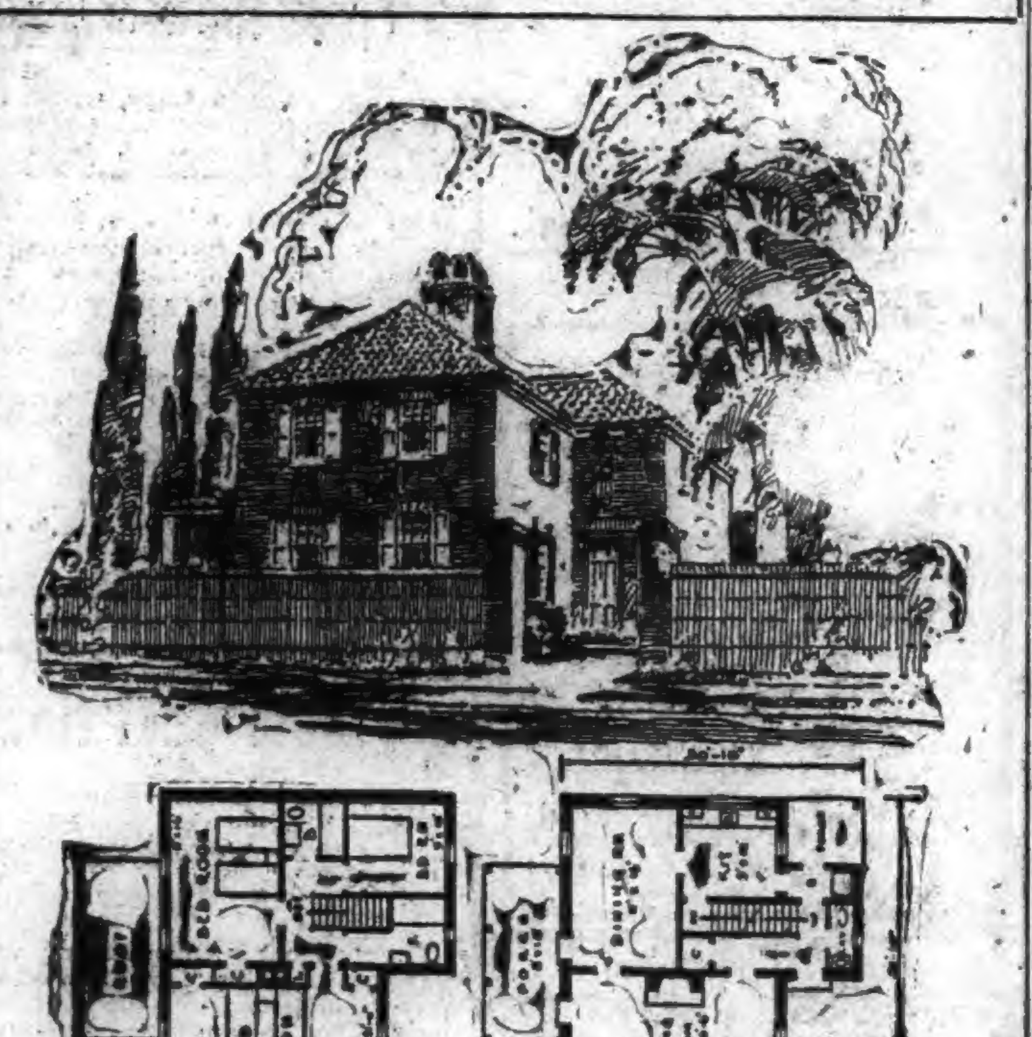
Aug. 13. Mrs. David Harper, 37 Chester avenue. Build one-car garage, 10 feet by 16 feet at 37 Chester avenue.

Aug. 13. George M. Lihou, George street extension. Build two-car garage, 20 feet by 20 feet on George street extension.

Aug. 13. Howard E. Thorp, Potter Hill. Additions, 4 feet by 22 feet and 4 feet by 16 feet to side and rear of present garage in Potter Hill, also build boathouse, 8 feet by 24 feet.

Aug. 13. Mrs. Abbie Alment F. Jenks, Ninigret avenue, Watch Hill. Build screen porch addition, 6 feet by 12 feet to house on Ninigret avenue.

Air of Privacy Lends Charm to House of Brick



Quiet dignity marks the appearance of this type of house, which recalls the style of some early city houses in the south.

Either slate or tile may be used for the roof, while the walls may be common or Harvard brick, depending on the builder's taste. The brick may be whitewashed or painted white.

Over the door is a wrought iron lantern of colonial design that adds a note of stateliness to the entrance.

From the entrance hall one goes into a living room flooded with light from three sides. Both the dining room and living room open into the porch, an arrangement that permits of easy serving of meals outdoors.

There is cross-ventilation in all three bedrooms on the second floor, and all of them are good-sized.

Although this house could be built on a rather narrow lot it appears to much greater advantage if plenty of space is allowed for a vista of lawn or garden from the porch.

A lot 100 by 100 feet is ideal, but a plot 75 by 100 feet could be utilized without serious handicap.

A few large trees and shrubs, rather than a quantity of small plants, should be used in landscaping.

The wall around the front lends an air of privacy that frequently is desired, particularly in view of the fact that the principal living room windows face the street.

Cost of materials and labor will make building expenditures for the house vary in different parts of the country, but estimates run from $10,000 to $12,000. The lower figure probably would apply in most average sized communities.

POETRY FOR THE WIDEAWAKES

Pete the Plugger

They called him Pete the Plugger,
and a plugger sure was Pete;
That's the reason why you'll find he lives today on Easy Street.
When the other fellows idled half the precious time away,
Peter saw the sun a-shinin', and he went and made his hay.
Pete the Plugger was a cheerful sort as he raked in his pile.
"For," says he, "folks kinder like the man who allus wears a smile.
Though the clouds may darkly gather in the sky and send down rain,
It just makes us all feel happier when sunshine comes again!
Naw, you'll never find me frettin' of the weather, times, and such,
'Cause I reckon all those kickers never will amount to much.
While they're sighing at their troubles,
I just sing myself a song—
Fortune's knocks are only bubbles, so I grin and plug along!"
You will find two kinds of Hustlers everywhere, beyond a doubt:
There's the "sparkler" sort who flashes for a moment, then goes out;
But when dollars brightly flourish
here before bloomed but a dime,
I have found some Plugging Peter pushing onward every time.

—Pictorial Review Hustler.

The Fellow Who Fights Alone

The fellow who fights the fight alone,
With never a word of cheer,
With never a friend his help to lend,
With never a comrade near—
'Tis he has need of a stalwart hand
And a heart not given to moan—
He struggles for life, and more than life,
The fellow who fights alone!

The fellow who fights the world alone,
With never a father's smile,
With never a mother's kindly tone
His sorrowful hours to guile,
Who joins the fray at the day of day
And battles till light is down,
Must needs be strong, for the fight is long,
The fellow who fights alone!

Ah, bitter enough the combat is
With every help at hand,
With friends at need to bid Godspeed,
With spirits that understand;
But fiercer far is the fight to one
Who struggles alone unknown—
Oh, brave and grim is the heart of him,
The fellow who fights alone!

God bless the fellow who fights alone,
And arm his soul with strength,
Till safely out of the battle rout
He conquering comes at length,
Till far and near into every ear
The fame of his fight is blown,
Till friend and foe in the victor know
The fellow who fights alone!

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDEAWAKES

It is a good habit for boys and girls to say things to themselves, provided they talk right. Little things well done are what make men in great demand. A good thought to always hold when one is employed is: "I am going to do this thing well." It is both an inspiring and hopeful thought. If you think you do not care how it is done, failure can be safely counted upon from the start.

We all have tenants of the mind and we should take care and have good ones. "I can't" is an unprofitable squatter, and should be fired out. "By-and-by" is a loafer, it does no one good to entertain. "I'll think of it" is a ne-er-do-well closely related to "I don't want to," and a hinderer of progress. The mind should always want to do what will be well for it, or prove helpful for other.

A great many grown people do not know that their minds are full of thoughts which hinder them—that they would be happier and make others happier and accomplish more if they just thought differently. Thought gives rise to our feelings, and our feelings are what make a success or failure of our work.

The tenants of our minds control our thoughts and that is why we should give notice to all hinderers to get out. They realy have no business in there. When one thinks right there is no room for loafers. Be positive for kindliness, be positive for helpfulness, be positive for action of every sort. Do not let too many "perhapses" get in your way, or too many "guess-sos", for they are the wandering relatives of shiftlessness.

"I will" is your best friend; but "I can't" is the enemy which is sure to throw you down. The person who can't is a burden everywhere.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES

A Dangerous Fishing Place

Dear Uncle Jed: It was in the lovely month of May when I set out to go fishing. The place I headed for was a steep cliff and at the bottom of it was a pond.

The cliff was high and mossy which was very slimy and slippery. The pond was of a rather small size and it contained many frogs, snakes and lizards as well as fish.

After fishing for some time I felt a hard yank at my hook, and I began reeling in. But not an inch did the line come out of the water. I pulled so hard that I began slipping on the slimy moss. I could not get hold of anything so down I went falling, stumbling to that dreadful place of snakes!

But guess what happened? Why I woke up and found that I had been just dreaming. I had fallen to the floor with the pillows and blankets all on top of me. What a relief it was to me to find out it wasn't true.

Date Palms

Dear Uncle Jed: It has been a very long time, since I have written to the Wide-Awake Circle. I think it is time I sent in a story. I will tell you and the Wide-Awakes about date palms.

There are large date orchards in southern California. They grow there because it is warm. There are a number of them farther north, but the dates do not ripen because the season is too short.

The stem to a bunch of dates is nearly as large as a man's wrist, with small stems branching out from it.

The large stems are flat on one side and round on the other while the small ones are square, with dates growing all up and down them. They are all a light orange color and very smooth and shiny, something like gloss enamel paint.

Some of the bunches of dates are about as large around as a bushel basket, and quite long. Some may be even larger. They are so heavy that it is about all one man can carry.

Some people I used to know had a date palm that came up from seed. The dates that grew on it were three cornered and did not have any stones in them. It grew very tall, something like a fan palm. Date palms are shorter and have large fern-like leaves. Some of them are five or six feet long. Others may be even longer than that.

Dog Rescues Child

Dear Uncle Jed: The fire alarm awoke me one night. Father took me with him to see the fire. The firemen had arrived.

Poor Mrs. Gardner had little three-year-old Betty in her arms, while Mr Gardner watched over them. Their dog, Rover, was licking their hands trying to comfort them. Betty slipped down from her mother's lap, suddenly remembering her doll. She ran into the flaming home. Her mother tried to follow, but the firemen said it was hopeless as the whole house was falling in.

Rover suddenly realized the danger his mistress was in. Without hesitation he ran into the house to help. Little Betty had rescued her doll, but had fallen down near the door. Rover is a big dog, as you know all shepherd dogs are. Taking hold of her clothes he took her out to safety. As the people cheered he laid her in her mother's lap.

The fire was soon under control and the people returned to their homes, taking the Gardner family with them for the evening.

Rover was given a medal for his bravery. He always limped afterward. Father and I went home to sleep, but all we could talk of was Rover's rescue.

At Crescent Beach

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you of a week that I spent at Niantic this summer.

My mother and two cousins of mine, together with me, spent several pleasant days at Crescent beach. As there are so many Crescent beaches, at least three, I will say that this Crescent beach is in Connecticut.

It was nearly 11 o'clock when my brother and I left for New London, where at 12 o'clock we ate our lunch. After luncheon was over we visited our aunt and uncle who are residents of that city.

It was about three when we reached the cottage where my mother had already preceded me. The cottage was situated near the water front, and, of course, that evening I went bathing with my two cousins.

The next morning I took a walk over to a small store and left a list of groceries to be sent over to our cottage and on my return I stopped at the post office and dropped cards to a number of friends.

That night we had company for dinner and after a few games of whist we went bathing.

The next day seemed terribly dull until I received an invitation to take a drive and of course I accepted and then time flew. I saw many beautiful cottages and gardens.

Several days passed this way and then Monday afternoon my brother, with two other young couples, came out and we went swimming all the afternoon and then we came home and found a lunch ready for us. While we were eating another young couple came in, asking us to go bathing with them. Every one was ready to go so we donned our suits and went.

Finally tiring of bathing we came back to the cottage, turned on the radio and started to dance. I looked at the clock, it was 10:25, and I called to my brother and said:

"Is there room for me to go home with you tonight?" "Yes," if you want to he said. I packed my suit case in a hurry and at five minutes of eleven I was ready.

We said our good-byes and rode away.

A Trip Under the Sea

Dear Uncle Jed: This is a trip which we will have to take in our imagination. There are wagons, cars, boats, balloons, etc., which carry us on land, water and in the air, but there is nothing yet invented to carry us on the ocean bed.

After leaving the pebbly beach and getting beyond the slope of sand we find ourselves in the midst of a delightly garden where seamosses, red, green and purple, look beautiful and gay. Fish and other curious animals sport with each other and swim here and there. As we descend the water becomes colder and the beautiful gardens disappear. We are not alone for there is work and life all around us. See these little creatures working in and out of the slime. They must be short-lived, for the floor of the sea is covered with their skeletons. Upon this floor a stream of mud from the rivers is constantly pouring. The rivers also bring with them lime which they steal from limy rocks over which they flow. In this way the work goes on until we find the broad seabed thus formed pushing up out of the sea. The waters disappear leaving a broad plain composed of many layers which is part of the earth's surface.

Her First But Last Lie

Dear Uncle Jed: A little girl by the name of Mary had never told a falsehood. Her mother had always been careful of her playmates, only having her play with good little girls and boys. She was beginning to triumph over her wonderful success when one day a terrible thing happened. One of the neighboring houses had a broken window. A baseball had been hit through the window. Everyone knew nothing about it. Mary's mother was worried. Suppose Mary had broken it and had lied. For several days the mystery of the window was still unsolved. Mary, all this time, had been sick with a sort of nervousness. She didn't know why she had such a funny feeling every time she passed that window. One night she woke up crying. She was frightened. From what she did not know. Then suddenly it dawned on her a little at a time but nevertheless she began to understand. She called mama. Then she confessed cryingly that she had broken the window. Then pressing her small lips beside her mother's ear she whispered: "Mama, it was the first, but is my last falsehood." Then her mother left her and it wasn't very long before she was sleeping happily.

Cornelia's Jewels

Dear Uncle Jed: The title of my story is Cornelia and Her Jewels.

Many years ago in Rome there lived a beautiful lady named Cornelia. She had two fine boys, and the mother and sons were devoted to each other.

The mother would say to herself as she watched them with their books or at play, "I am fortunate, indeed to have two such sons."

One day a very, very rich lady came to call upon Cornelia. She brought with her a box of rare jewels. Presently she took from the box some wonderful diamonds, pearls, and rubies, and showed them to Cornelia. The latetr thought them very beautiful.

When all the gems had been shown to Cornelia the visiting lady said: I have shown you all my jewels. I should like very much to see yours. Just then Cornelia's two boys returned from school and came to kiss their mother. Putting her arms around the boys, Cornelia said proudly: "These are my jewels. There are none more precious or more beautiful in all the world!"

BRICK FOR INTERIORS

Builders are rapidly coming to the conclusion that the advantages of building with face brick are not confined to its structural superiority or to the external beauty it imparts. Face brick is now being employed quite as effectively for distinctive interior effects. The superior textures and colors available in face brick make it particularly appropriate for sun porches, dens, mantels, etc.

It was a lovely soft-hued print made with a full, quite long skirt, and bertha or cape effect which was cut to a point over the arms and tied in front.

With it Miss Daingerfield wore long-wristed gloves, slippers that tied quietly over the instep, and a hat with the last suggestion of

NEW LONDON COUNCIL GIVES NOTICE OF A POLICY OF RETRENCHMENT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 18—The city council this evening gave notice of the inauguration of a policy of retrenchment and ceremony in city expenditures during the coming year beginning October 1.

As introduced by Councilman Miner of the finance committee, a motion was adopted stating the purpose of the council to reduce the budget expenditures more than $100,000 the coming year. Mr. Miner stated that an expenditure of $40,000 as New London's share of the expense of erecting the New London county home would not have to be made this year and that a sum of $12,000 was reduced by the abolition of the School of Commerce and the board of school visitors had reduced the expenses $14,000 and it was the opinion that that reduction could be made $25,000.

Mr. Miner did not say so, but it was evident he had in mind other reductions.

A score of building applications was granted, including many for one-family dwellings.

It was recommended by the City Manager to pay the expense for the repairs on the boiler in the Jennings school, which has become cracked, it was said because cold water was turned into a hot boiler. There was some discussion as to where the responsibility should be placed, but it was not fixed upon either the janitor or plumbers who did work on the boiler. The idea was expressed that the expense should be taken from the school board funds, but the council finally decided to have the repairs made. Councilor Fox said that warning should be given the school board that no plumbing work should be done, except when the janitor was present, he also said that men on the payrolls of the city could make the repairs.

An offer has been made to the city for the lease of land on Colt street, adjoining the State armory for the establishment of a Tom Thumb golf course at a rental of $25 a month. Councilors Fox and Scott opposed the lease. Mr. Fox said that the state probably would want that land, as it adjoins the state armory and the rental was too small to be considered.

The report was made on the improvement of Wightman street at an expense of $9,000. Referred the matter to the public safety committee.

Sarah Sample gave notice of a suit for damages for $250 for injuries in falling on State street, in front of property No. 23.

A protest was made against what is termed the nuisance of smoke from locomotives of the New Haven road. It was found that the charter gave the council the authority to abate any nuisance and the city manager was directed to call the attention of the railroad officials to the smoke nuisance.

W. H. Bush applied for permission to put a dining car on his property on lower Truman street. It was determined that the application was not in proper from and while the council favored granting the petition another application must be put in and all regulations complied with, which include a sewer connection for the car.

The Salvation Army was granted permission to have a tag day August 30 and the Boy Scouts permission to sell cake at Ocean Beach August 23.

Councilor May moved a vote of thanks to the board of school visitors for their effort in keeping down expenses during the past year. There was no second to the motion. Councilor Fox objected, saying that the school board was forced to make reduction in the High School of Commerce matter and the city manager was directed to notify the school board that they should make no more committments for expenditures of money until they were sure that the council would provide for the appropriation.

The Nutmeg Beverage company asked for permission to dispose of their beverage at the same place where they had been for the past five years, but which territory is now within the zoning law. The matter is to come before the zoning board of appeals this week. The council meeting lasted until after ten o'clock.

Marie Gallagher, Waterford; Mrs. Engel Fillipetti, 11 Evergreen avenue; Beth Chapman, 379 Main street; Edward Daghlian, 95 Willetts avenue; Virginia Sumner, Waterford; Samuel Feltzer, Hartford; Cora Boardman, 77 John street; Mrs. Ray Whitley and infant son, 511 Williams street; Frank Dexp, 8 Orchard street; Mrs. Joseph Parisi, and infant son, 99 Lincoln avenue; Charles Esposito, 106 Bank street; Frederick Soule, 43 Church street; Mrs Jacob Eldersheim, Mystic; George Skeen, U. S. Coast Guard; Mrs. Ida Allen, Barbara Morton, Station 6, Waterford, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged Sunday and today.

Fractured Shoulder.

Henry Burdick, 40, residing at 30 Baker avenue, Groton, suffered a fractured left shoulder Sunday afternoon when he fell from a tree while picking fruit in his orchard. He was brought to New London and taken to Lawrence-Memorial hospital.

SIX GRANDSONS BEARERS FOR MRS. GEO. F. MARTIN

The funeral of Mrs. Isabel E. Martin, widow of George F. Martin, of 153 Bayonet street, was held this morning with services at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, and attended by a large assemblage of mourners. The high mass of requiem was sung by Rev. George Clark. The bearers were Percy F., Clarence, Lester, Merrill and Leon Martin, and Lawrence Saunders, all grandsons of Mrs. Martin. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

OBITUARY.

Michael Santefe.

Michael Santefe, 55, of Orchard street, died Saturday night at Norwich State hospital, Preston, where he had been a patient but a comparatively short time. He was a laborer and his only near relatives reside in Italy.

Francis L. Collins.

Francis Leo Collins, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Collins, of 42 School street, died this morning at Lawrence-Memorial hospital where he had been a patient less than a day. Besides his parents, the boy is survived by two brothers, Joseph C. and Richard P. Collins and two sisters, Roberta B. and Madeline H. Collins. The boy was apparently as well as usual yesterday and during the afternoon became ill. When a physician was summoned the boy was ordered taken to the hospital and there his condition rapidly grew worse.

Anna Bloomster, of Brockton, Mass., dined at a State street restaurant Sunday evening and when she started to depart her fur neckpiece was missing and could not be found. The woman reported her loss at police headquarters a few hours later Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh recovered the fur at the eating place.

KENNETH STAPLINS FAILS TO APPEAR IN COURT

NEW LONDON, Aug. 18.—Kenneth Staplins, a resident at Station 5, Waterford, is being sought by the New London and state police; he was supposed to have appeared in the Waterford town court this afternoon for his conduct with one Eva Park, in Waterford where they had been residing as man and wife, until complaint was made to the state police a fortnight ago. They were arrested by State Police Officer Peter Busch, but when court convened today, Staplins was among the missing. He is described as being about five feet, six inches in height and weighs about 135 pounds. When last seen Staplins wore a slip-on sweater, mixed colored trousers and was without a hat.

Claims Franklin Took V

Mrs. Rosa Lane, colored, residing at 8 Schoolhouse lane, made complaint to the police this afternoon that William Franklin, also colored, a bootblack and with a police record, had stolen $5 from her. Mrs. Lane said that the Negro entered her home at a time when she had $8.50 on the kitchen table and after being loaned 50 cents, Franklin stole a bill of $5 while she was absent from the room. When she returned and found both Franklin, who is familiarly known as "Rattlesnake Pete", and the money missing she sought Franklin and requested that the money be returned and when he denied all knowledge of the bill, Mrs. Lane made complaint to the police. Franklin has been employed several weeks as a bootblack at the Union station.

Abraham Prettas, 26 Shapley street, was arrested this afternoon on Crystal avenue, charged with reckless driving and will be in court tomorrow morning

PROFESSIONAL BONDSMAN LOSES $475 IN TWO CASES

In the police court this morning two cases were re-opened where a bond in each case had been declared forfeited. As a result Louis Elfenbein, professional bondsman, who became surety on the bonds of the man and woman, effected a compromise with the court, for he paid $475 when the actual amount of the bonds the accused forfeited was $1050. On Oct. 2, 1929, a house at 23 Pearl street was raided and a frequenter found there, a young woman known as "Bobbie Mariana" was held in bail of $50 for arraignment in court. When court convened the girl was absent and the bond was declared forfeited. Aug. 5th. last, Clarence Hamilton, a Negro, and in charge of the lavatory at the bathing pavilion at Ocean Beach, was arrested on a charge of violation of liquor law, when Sergt. William Babcock raided the place. He furnished a surety on his bond in the person of Elfenbein in the sum of $1000. The next day, when the case was called in court, Hamilton had vanished and the bond was declared forfeited. Today, however, Judge Daniel M. Cronin ordered the two cases re-opened; in the case of the Mariana woman, Elfenbein paid $25 and in the case of Hamilton the bondsman turned over $450 to the court, the total amount Elfenbein paying being less than one half of the face of the original bonds.

Frank Wheeler, Neptune park and New York, charged with evasion of responsibility had his case continued to Sept. 4. Wheeler was arrested Sunday upon complaint of Mrs. Frances Lane, 49 Riverview avenue, who claimed that Wheeler's auto collided with the complainant's auto at Bank and Truman streets and then speeded way.

Several cases of intoxication were tried and all the accused were given suspended jail sentences.

The communist meeting at Tyler square Saturday night was not attended by the throng anticipated for less than 150 curious persons assembled to hear the two or three speakers of the party. A squad of police was on duty there to quell any disturbance that might arise, but the subject of the speakers was not such that utterances were made to stir the anger of the listeners.

Suicide's Body Sent Home

The body of Edward C. Reed, who committed suicide by hanging himself in a cell at police headquarters Sunday afternoon following his arrest on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor, was forwarded today to the young man's home in New Britain. William Dolan, arrested with Reed on a charge of intoxication, was given into the custody of his mother upon the order of Leon Bolsheim, prosecuting attorney of Waterford town court, before which tribunal the young men were scheduled to be tried this afternoon.

THINK MARTIN WANTED FOR PITTSBURGH MURDER

NEW LONDON, Aug 18.— Joseph Martin, 31, and John F. Ryan, 41, both of New York, who were arrested at the Union station Saturday afternoon, the former charged with being a suspicious person and the latter with attempted larceny, were presented in the police court today, but because of the absence of important witnesses the cases were continued until Wednesday. In default of bail of $3,000, the men were committed to jail. The New York department has advised New London authorities that Ryan has been arrested 16 times and Martin 41 times on various charges. Tonight, the New London police were informed that it was believed Martin is a man wanted by the police of Pittsburgh on a charge of murder.

John Siminton, colored, of Deep River, arrested there Saturday by state police at the request of the New London police on a charge of uttering false checks, was not presented in court this morning. One of the checks was for $218.23 to pay for a fine imposed in the police court 10 days ago and the other check was for $200 to pay for counsel fees. When returned to New London, Siminton had a certified check for $200 in his possession and he paid this and the balance of his fine was paid in cash. He also had $150 in cash to pay for the major amount of his counsel's fees and with assurance that he would make the additional payment of $50, Siminton was allowed his freedom without bond, being allowed to go to his employment on his own recognizance.

RUDD, DEVLIN, CRISTINA HELD FOR LAFRANCE ASSAULT

NEW LONDON, Aug. 18—Thomas Rudd, 159 State street; Hughey Devlin, 708 Bank street, well known prize fighter and Tony Cristina, 113 Shaw street, a bootblack, were in the Waterford town court this afternoon, the first named charged with felonious assault and robbery and the others with robbery. Probable cause was found in each case and all of the youths were held for trial at the next term of the superior court. Rudd's bond was fixed at $5,000 and the bonds of Devlin and Cristina were fixed at $3,000 each. The testimony charged that Rudd and Charles LaFrance, the latter until recently employed as auditor by the Hotel Mohican, were at Ocean Beach on the night of August 4 and both had been drinking. About 1 o'clock they went to a Bank street restaurant and Rudd requested the use of Cristina's car to convey the pair to the hotel. Rudd and LaFrance being intoxicated, Cristina would not consent to the loaning of the auto, but agreed to drive the young man to their destination. Cristina and Devlin entered the car in the front seat, Devlin driving and Rudd and LaFrance sat in the rumble seat. When the hotel was reached, Rudd requested that the car be driven to the Hartford turnpike and when it reached a point about two miles from the city line another request was made that the auto be driven to a sideroad. All four occupants alighted and a few seconds later, Rudd attacked LaFrance, beating him and knocking him down, where he robbed the auditor of about $23. LaFrance was then loaded into the auto and driven to the grounds of Bulkeley High school where the former was left. As Rudd, Cristina and Devlin drove away La France made an outcry and a sailor and girl, who occupied a parked auto went to his assistance. The young woman had the police notified and when officers arrived at the school grounds, LaFrance was taken to police headquarters where he told of what had occurred as best he could and that his companion had been Rudd, although he did not know the other occupants of the car. Rudd was arrested at his home and he implicated Cristina and Devlin. When the last named were arrested they related their stories to the effect that Rudd had attacked and beaten and then robbed LaFrance and that Devlin received $12 of the spoils and Cristina $5. Rudd kept the balance.

Manuel Perry, 333 Jefferson avenue, was in the police court this morning charged with violation of the liquor law, but was prosecuted on but one count, that of keeping with intent to sell. Perry entered a demurrer, which was overruled and a fine of $200 and cost was imposed. He paid. Perry was arrested Saturday afternoon when his home was raided and 19 cases of home brew were seized.

Frank Mariana, 32 Grand street, a laborer, was charged with breach of the peace and was fined $5 and costs. Mariana was on Church street early Sunday morning and refused to move on when ordered to do so by Patrolman William Riordan.

Drove By Standing Car.

James Watts, Jr., was charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in driving his automobile past a trolley car which was motionless and receiving and discharging passengers. He was fined $25, but the court ordered the remittance of the fine. Watts was arrested Saturday night by Patrolman Clarence Wells upon information of Patrolman Den Murphy that the driver had passed a motionless trolley car at the corner of Montauk and Willetts avenues.

Chyman Vinick, Springfield, Mass., was charged with obstructing a driveway and blocking a fire hydrant at Ocean Beach. He did not appear in court and his bond of $5 forfeited.

Harry Cook, R. F. D., No. 7, Norwich, charged with parking his automobile in restricted area on State street, also did not show up and his bond of $2 was forfeited.

M. Brooke Tyler, Jr., Springfield, Mass., charged with parking his car in restricted area did not appear forfeiting his bond of $2.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Impy Has a Warning

Youth is confident and shows it;
Age is wiser far and knows it.
—Old Mother Nature.

Impy the black Chipmunk was getting the habit of staying out until after the coming of the Black Shadows each night. All the rest of the Chipmunk family took care to be safely in their beds very soon after the approach of the Black Shadows. They were afraid to be out after dark. You see, their eyes are made for daylight seeing. It is just the same with Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel and Chatterer the Red Squirrel and Rusty the Fox Squirrel. All are afraid to be out after dark. There is but one of the Squirrel cousins who is not afraid at that time. This one is Timmy the Flying Squirrel.

"No good will come of staying out so late," declared Striped Chipmunk, who is, you know, the father of Impy.

"But," protested Impy, "I like it when the Black Shadows come. I feel a lot safer then. I cannot so easily be seen."

"No, and you cannot see as well yourself," retorted Striped Chipmunk. "When jolly, round, red Mr. Sun goes to bed it is time for a Chipmunk to go to bed. No good will come of being out after dark. One of these days you will be picked up by Hooty the Horned Owl or Spooky the Screech Owl."

"Who are they?" asked Impy, who, quite naturally, never had seen them.

"They are feathered enemies, who fly by night and see by night, and who would like nothing better than a tender young Chipmunk. It surprises me that you have not been picked up before this. They have wonderful eyes and wonderful ears."

"What good do their ears do them?" demanded Impy.

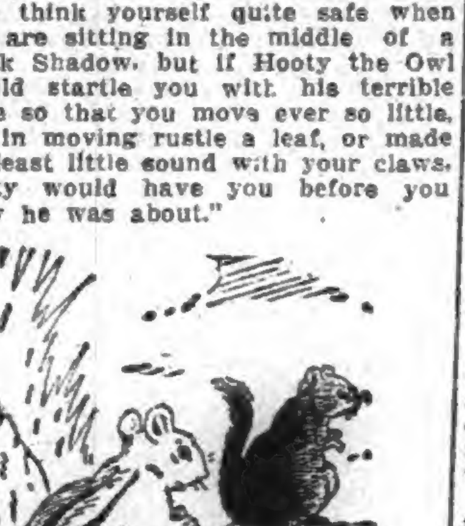
"I don't see any sense to that," said Impy. "What have their ears got to do with their eyes?"

"A very great deal," replied Striped Chipmunk. "Their ears are so wonderful that they can hear the tiniest rustle of a leaf. They can hear it at some little distance and they can tell just where it comes from. Then they fly right to that spot and their wonderful eyes do the rest. Some hunters, like the members of the Hawk family, do all their hunting with their eyes; but the members of the Owl family use both eyes and ears. You may think yourself quite safe when you are sitting in the middle of a Black Shadow, but if Hooty the Owl should startle you with his terrible voice so that you move ever so little, and in moving rustle a leaf, or made the least little sound with your claws, Hooty would have you before you knew he was about."



"No good will come of staying out so late," declared Striped Chipmunk

"I guess I could hear him coming," said Impy. "My ears may not be wonderful like his, but they are perfectly good ears. I have never had any difficulty in hearing the Hawks."

"Don't make the mistake of comparing Owls with Hawks," replied Striped Chipmunk. "You wouldn't hear an Owl if he passed so close that his wings almost touched you. An Owl makes no noise when he is flying. That is what makes him so dangerous. That is one reason why Chipmunks who are wise retire before it is time for Owls to be out. Owls do not like bright light, so they do not start hunting until the coming of the Black Shadows. I have given you fair warning, Impy. If you are a wise Chipmunk you will be in bed with the rest of us."

Impy said nothing. Striped Chipmunk had no way of knowing whether or not his warning would have any effect.

The next story: "Impy Meets a Cousin."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theater

Can you imagine a production with three stars in the leading feminine roles, supported by three other stars in opposite parts? Such a production is "Our Blushing Brides" which is now playing at the Palace Theater where it will be shown for the last times today and tomorrow.

"Our Blushing Brides" combines the separate love affairs of three girls who work in the same department store, who live in the same meager quarters and who are all tired of the monotony of their lives. Opportunity at last knocks on their doors and they are given a chance to free themselves of the life for which they have so much distaste, by ardent gentlemen who woo them with luxurious gifts.

Only two of the girls accept the offers, the third believing that no good can come of such things and how her ideas were only too accurate, is revealed in the picture.

The stars in the picture are many and among those who play the leading parts are Joan Crawford, Anita Page and Dorothy Sebastian. They are supported by Robert Montgomery, Raymond Hackett and John Miljan. All are screen favorites and all do unusual work in this dramatic production.

On Thursday the Palace will present a double-feature bill which includes Richard Dix in "Shooting Straight" with Mary Lawlor and a great cast and two other favorites, Grant Withers and Sue Carol in "Dancing Sweeties" which proves that our dance-mad youth is not a bit madder than the youth of the older generations.

BOARD VOTED VACATION FOR METHODIST PASTOR

Sunday morning at the Methodist Episcopal church the pastor, Rev. George Warren Potter preached on the theme "Traps", taking for his text psalm 140:4.6. Mary Waters, a member of the decorating committee had beautifully arranged many baskets and bouquets of summer flowers. Mrs. Lewis E. Aldrich, the organist, played during the offertory. Folowing the church service a meeting of the official board and trustees was held, with the pastor presiding. The board voted to give the pastor a vacation of three weeks beginning August 25th, and ending September 14th. The church will be closed all next Sunday on account of Willimantic Camp meeting. August 31st and September 7th services will be held and the preachers will be announced later. It was decided to begin evening services the first Sunday in October.

The board voted to have the parsonage painted during the pastor's absence. They elected Stanton W. Brown, Mrs. George Manning and Edward H. Howe a committee to make the arrangements.

TO IMPROVE TWO MILES OF THE BALTIC ROAD

Two miles of the Baltic road in the town of Scotland are to be improved by the state highway department it was announced Monday. In all about 10,078 feet of the road will receive a gravel surface.

Plans for the construction of approximately seventeen miles of pavement and surfacing on Connecticut highways were announced Monday by Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald. The work is to be divided among nine different projects, sealed bids for which will be received from contractors at department headquarters in Hartford on Monday, August 25.

Eight of the new projects call for waterbound macadam pavement and one project for an improved gravel surface. The largest of the jobs announced in this contract letting is that on the Clapboard Ridge road in the town of Danbury upon which more than four miles of macadam will be laid. This project will require 27,200 cubic yards of earth and rock excavation. Another of the larger jobs is the paving of the Grassy Hill road in the town of Orange with nearly three and one-half miles of macadam, where specifications will require 25,658 cubic yards of excavating.

FIFTH DISTRICT LEGION MEETING HERE THURSDAY

Announcement was made Monday that the August meeting of the fifth district, American Legion, will be held at Buckingham Memorial, Thursday evening of this week. At the meeting further plans for the district's attendance at the Boston convention will be discussed and the convention committee will have a definite report on transportation and housing to make. Through the kindness of Victor division of the R. C. A., Victor company and the National Broadcasting company, the 1930 American Legion Convention Corp., will present the biggest and most comprehensive broadcast in the annals of radio over a gigantic network of all the stations of the National Broadcasting Co., on Thursday night, September 18th, 10 to 11:30 Eastern daylight saving time. This broadcast is of utmost importance to the entire membership of all American Legion posts and auxiliaries. As part of the arrangements for this spectacular broadcast it is planned to have simultanous meetings in every one of the 10,500 American Legion posts and their auxiliary units througout the country to listen to this broadcast and to conduct special preconvention business regarding which they will be advised. The seat of the broadcasting will be Faneuil Hall—"Cradle of Liberty".

Now is the time for orphans of the World war veterans to take steps to secure aid in the furtherance of their education, according to the American Legion Auxiliary committee on the education of war orphans. This committee has issued several recommendations in a report to department headquarters of the legion at Hartford.

Among the facts not commonly known, in the opinion of the committee, is the information that both Connecticut state and United States aid are available. In addition there are six scholarships that have been provided by the American Legion Auxiliary of Connecticut for those war orphans not entitled to Connecticut state aid, but who are deserving.

The committee points out that the present is the proper time to prosecute claims for orphans' aid to cover the forthcoming school year. Federal aid is given such orphans in the sums of $10 a month to the first child in a family and $6 a month for each succeeding child when they attend approved schools. While a great number who are so entitled receive this aid there remain many to whom the committee extends the offer of assistance in presenting claims.

A special variety of aid is available under the Connecticut statute adopted last year. Those orphans of World war service men whose deaths occurred during the actual legal existence of the war, April 6, 1917 to July 3, 1921, are entitled to aid in the sum of $200 each year for the purpose of pursuing courses in institutions of higher learning such as universities, state colleges and state normal schools in Connecticut. This aid is open from ages 16 to 21.

MAY BE "KEYNOTER" AT DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

Announcement has been made that Claude Bowers, New York newspaper editorial writer, who delivered the "keynote" address at the democratic national convention at Houston two years ago, has been advanced as a likely "keynoter" at the democratic state convention to be held in New London, Sept. 11 and 12. Alton T. Miner, democratic state central committeeman, who is a member of the special committee named to select a temporary convention chairman, said that it was contrary to precedent to go outside of the state for a presiding officer and keynote speaker and it is believed that Mr. Bowers' name has been put forward merely as a suggestion. Other members of the special committee are James J. Walsh of Meriden, chairman, and Sidney A. Lynch, New Haven, secretary of the state central committee and National Committeeman Archibald McNeill of Bridgeport.

ACTIVITIES OF THE SOCIETY OF FOUNDERS

Regarding the activities and aims of the Society of Founders of Norwich, an officer of the society Sunday issued the following statement:

The Society of Founders of Norwich, Connecticut, was organized October 10, 1901. The object of the society is to perpetuate the memory and the spirit of the founders or original settlers of the town of Norwich; to encourage the study of the early history of the town; to preserve documents, relics and records relating to that history and especially relating to the original settlers; and to mark by suitable monuments, inscriptions and other designations, historic places within the limits of the original town. Any person is eligible to membership who is a lineal descendant of the original settlers of the town.

The dues are only one dollar a year, and until two years ago, when it was voted to ask one dollar as an initiation fee, no initiation fee was required; no assessments have ever been made and no other way of raising money has been employed.

The work of the society has, therefore, been somewhat limited. Some of the things done are as follows:

A small oak tree, grown on Union street, a scion of the famous Charter Oak of Hartford, was planted at the right of the Rockwell street entrance to Mohegan park. It was planned to place a bronze marker on the tree, but unfortunately, the young oak did not live.

In 1919, sign boards or markers were placed on the original home lots and at many historical and interesting points in the town, and to accompany these, a pamphlet entitled "Notes on Persons and Places in the Ancient Town of Norwich, Conn.", was issued.

These markers have been repainted and replaced, when necessary. They have attracted much favorable attention from visitors, and some have suggested that bronze markers should be used instead of the wooden ones, but these are too expensive.

The late Dr. Dwight Tracy published a set of seven post-cards, showing the four sides of the monument erected in memory of Major John Mason and the Founders of Norwich, Conn., the nearby oak tree, the cobblestone posts and gateway (the entrance to the monument), and the deed of Norwich, 1659.

The society purchased a number of these cards for distribution, and when Dr. Tracy's son was about to enter the World war, he presented the remainder of the cards and some large pictures on which the four sides of the monument appeared, to the society of which his father had been a member. The large framed pictures have been presented to the public schools and other public institutions.

During the World war, few meetings were held, so that on July 9, 1920, there was only $125.62 in the treasury; since then the society has been more active.

The inscriptions on some of the oldest stones in the Norwith Town Burying Ground (the second burial place), had become almost illegible; they were those of four of the founders of Norwich and the wife of one; namely, Deacon Thomas Adgate, John Post, Thomas Waterman, Stephen Gifford and his wife Hannah. These were recut and reset.

The remnant of the oldest stone in the City or Oak Street cemetery was preserved by embedding it in cement. The inscription, taken several years ago, was "Here lies the child of Mr. Jeremiah Clement and Mary his wife, a son, still born, June 10th, 1755. Ye first interd of ye dead in this buring place."

The little footstone which has long since disappeared, was engraved, "Mr. Clement's child."

The society was instrumental also in securing the placing of large signs indicating the entrance to the Mason monument and the Old Burying gruond (the second burial place).

At the formal opening of the Governor Samuel Huntington school (that name being suggested by the Founders Society), the society presented to the school, a large framed picture of Gov. Huntington and also a picture of his house.

An important piece of work has long been contemplated which would be of widespread interest. George S. Porter, who was number 6, in the society, had copied the inscriptions from over 1400 gravestones in the Norwich Town Burying Ground, but had not published them. He died in 1908, and on November 11, 1913, the society purchased the inscriptions from his sister. The society's funds did not permit of their publication at that time, and then came the World war. Funds accumulated slowly and about two years ago the society began to seriously contemplate the publication, and preliminary work was begun, when the grave menace to the first burial place of Norwich, and to the monument erected to the founders, claimed attention.

The land had been sold for building lots, without regard to the monument and the right of way to it; this deed was later changed, reserving however, only the monument, but not the burial place. It was stated openly that the monument could be moved in 1932, but this statement was immediately corrected by the town counsel. The selectmen of Norwich employed a surveyor to locate the burial ground, and after many delays, the report and survey were finally submitted.

The society could not possibly accept the location as given in this survey nor the deeds quoted to support such location, so one of the members of the society was appointed to search the records for deeds in which the burial place was excepted and reserved.

This report was submitted in October, 1929, and the society then employed the firm of Chandler and Palmer to survey the land in question and locate the burial place as closely as possible according to these deeds. A copy of this report was given to the selectmen in October, who also had reference to the plan or blue print.

Nearly a year has passed since then, and no definite action has been taken toward the preservation of the burial place; the society still hopes that for the honor of the town, and for the upholding of the town records, its historians and all the documentary evidence relating to the subject, that some definite action will soon be taken.

When this important matter is satisfactorily settled, the society will continue preparing the inscriptions in the Norwich Town Burying Ground for publication.

LOCAL SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS SHOW INCREASE

The monthly business survey conducted by the Connecticut chamber of Commerce shows a continued downward movement of business.

Industrial conditions continued far below 1929 operations with substantial decreases in employment and payrolls and part-time schedules in many factories. Seventy-one new joint stock companies were formed against 75 organized in July 1929, and 78 bankruptcies were reported against 47 in July 1929.

Electricity consumption showed decreases of from 6 to 23 per cent and increases from 2 to 21 per cent with the emphasis on slight gains. Gas consumption declined from 1 to 17 per cent in some communities and gained from 8 to 16 per cent in others. In Willimantic electricity consumption was 21 per cent greater and gas consumption 16 per cent greater than in July 1929.

Secretary John Richardson of the Norwich chamber reported as follows: The total value of building permits issued in July was $63,090, an increase of 14.7 per cent compared with the total valuation of $54,988 of the permits issued in July 1929. Bank debits amounted to $21,600,381 against $21,189,767 a year ago, or a gain of 1.3 per cent. Savings deposits amounted to $46,112,661, a increase of 2.9 per cent over the total of $44,787,032 in July 1929, which in turn was an increase over the total of $43,590,544 in July 1928. Gas consumption amounted to 15,386 which was a decrease of 4.4 per cent when compared with the consumption of 16,109 in July a year ago. Electricity consumption totaled 929,500 kwh. showing an increase of 6 per cent over the 871,600 kwh. used in the corresponding month a year ago. There were 94 telephones installed and 101 removed during the month, a net lose of 7 telephones, compared with 118 installed and 112 removed in July 1929. Post office receipts amounted to $9,536 last month, a decrease of 5.8 per cent when compared with the total of $10,129 in July 1929.

New London

Secretary George H. Garlepy of the New London chamber reported as follows: Retail business showed some gain in July although not equal to July 1929. Industrials also made some gain, but are still operating at about 60 per cent of normal. Real estate sales have made good gains considering conditions. The Connecticut Power company reported 10,936 electric meters measuring 1,589,528 kwh. in July 1930 as against 10,776 meters measuring 1,556,935 kwh. in July 1929. Also 7,755 gas meters measuring 24,692,200 cu. ft. as against 7,713 meters measuring 23,962,700 cu. ft. of gas on July 1929. Post office receipts for July 1930 were $16,788, as against $16,347 in July 1929, showing a gain of $440. The telephone company reports show that in July 1929 there were 9,853 telephones in use as against 10,265 phones in July 1930, a gain of 412 phones. The building insepctor reports a slight decline in the number of permits but a considerable gain in the amout as follows: July 1929, 55 permits amounting to $97,485 as against only 36 permits in July 1930 amounting to $186,450, a gain of $88,865 in value. One other noticeable feautre in the city is a much more optimistic view held generally by the business men. Visitors as well as natives seem to feel that conditions have eased up considerably and that within a comparatively short time normalcy will appear.

Willimantic

Secretary John J. O'Rourke of the Willimantic chamber reported as follows: Eleven building permits with a total valuation of $7,600 were issued during July 1930 compared with four permits valued at $6,405 issued in July 1929, an increase in value of $1,195. There were 41,219,200 gallons of water consumed against 43,626,000 gallons used in July a year ago, a decrease of 2,406,800 gallons. Gas consumption for the month amounted to 4 626,,200 cu. ft. compared with 3,971,000 cu ft. in July a year ago, an increase of 656,200 cu. ft. or 16 per cent. Electricity consumption totaled 409,08[illegible] kwh., an increase of 72,698 kwh. or 2[illegible] per cent over the 336,391 kwh. used in July 1929. There were 57 telephones installed during July 1930 and 60 installed in July a year ago. Post office receipts for the month amounted to $3,917 compared with $4,038 in July 1929, a decrease of 2 per cent. Savings bank deposits totaled $222,091 which was an increase of $15,292 or 7 per cent over the total of $206,799 in the corresponding month a year ago.

LOW PRICE OF SUGAR AROUSES INTEREST IN PRESERVING

Housewives Cannot Resist Great Economy in Preserving Fruit This Year

Fruit jars, jelly glasses and preserving kettles are claiming the attention of women these days. For they have figured that there is real money to be saved by putting up the maximum of fruit.

One only needs to go to market to realize the economy of home-canning. Everywhere is an abundance of fine fruits and berries amazingly low in price. As far as the cost of sugar is concerned, never before has it been so cheap.

There is a place in every normal diet for canned fruits. Many are rich in vitamins. As a dessert for children there are few foods more appropriate than canned peaches, plums, apricots or pears.

It is much easier to plan menus when there are jellies, jams and preserves within reach. A tart-sweet jelly is a fine accompaniment for meats and fish. And a bit of sweet makes the meal complete. The Sugar Institute.

ESCAPE TANK AT THE SUBMARINE BASE

At the United States submarine base a huge steel tower has been erected that is causing considerable interest. It is a "submarine-escape training tank" and is the only one of its kind in the world.

The tank, which is 155 feet high and cost $100,000, is practically completed and will be used to train officers and enlisted men in the navy, especially those aboard submarines, how to use the newly adapted "safety lung." Lieut. C. B. Momsen, U. S. N., designer of the tank and co-inventor of the lung, is stationed on the submarine S-4, now an experimental ship at New London.

The "lung" which the navy has developed is a light device, similar in shape and size to a gas mask. A small clip, like a clothespin, fits over the nose to prevent inhaling water and to compel the wearer to breathe through a mouthpiece connected by means of two tubes to a rubber composition bag containing oxygen. One of the tubes is used for inhaling from the bag and the other, by means of check valves, conducts the exhaled air back into a small compartment containing caustic soda or similar chemical purifier, where it is breathed into the bag and out through the canister.

The efficacy of the "lung" depends upon the maintenance at all times of the equality of the external and internal body pressure, regardless of the varying external pressures of the water. This is controlled by putting an air outlet in the bottom of the bag.

RED CROSS TO ALLEVIATE SUFFERING FROM DROUGHT

Will Handle Most of the Individual Relief Work in Cases Where There is Actual Distress—Secretary Hyde Has Been Appointed Chairman of the National Drought Relief Committee—Rain Has Greatly Improved the Situation Outside the Acutely Affected Areas.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19—(AP)—A national drought relief committee under the chairmanship of Secretary Hyde was appointed by President Hoover today and will begin to function immediately in conjunction with state and county agencies in more than 300 counties.

Secretary Hyde will supervise the relief work from his office in the department of agriculture. He will have as assistants on the committee: Chairman Legge, federal farm board; Chairman Bestor, federal farm loan board; Governor Young, federal reserve board; Chairman Payne, American Red Cross; Chairman Ashton, American Railway association; Ogden Mills, under-secretary of the treasury, and Henry M. Robinson, president of the First National bank, Los Angeles.

County agents have been instructed by Secretary Hyde to watch feed shipments closely to prevent unwarranted price increases.

In announcing the committee, President Hoover said late reports had "confirmed the severity of the situation and the inevitability of distress over the winter in the acutely affected counties, which now apparently number something over 300."

He added, however, that rains in the last few days had "stemmed the spread of the drought and greatly improved the situation outside the acutely affected areas."

In the drought sections, he continued, the destruction of crops has "proceeded to a point that is beyond any great degree of recovery, although pasturage should improve."

The president emphasized that from a relief standpoint the "burden of the problem in the acute area will show very much more vividly over the winter than at the present moment."

He said he had received from all sections of the drought region high appreciation of the railroads for their "prompt and constructive action" in cutting frieght rates and added:

"It is a notable act of courageous cooperation and has been undertaken in the face of seriously reduced income due to the depression. It emphasizes the public interest of maintaining the strength and financial stability of our railways that they shall be able to cooperate in times of national difficulty."

Pending completion of state relief committees, the president said, the Red Cross will see that no sufferers go unaided. These committees are rapidly taking shape, he added, and are already creating there county organizations.

Aishton's task on the national committee will have to do with emergency freight rates while Robinson will concern himself with coordinating federal, state and private credit activities.

The Red Cross will handle most of the individual relief work in cases where there is actual suffering. The chairman said today he expected that the entire $5,000,000 disaster relief fund would be needed. Only about 50 calls for help have been received thus far, Payne said, but he added that as time goes on the situation in some sections will be "desperate". He said he expected calls for help from 250 to 450 of the counties affected.

REPORT THAT AIMEE SEMPLE McPHERSON HAS LOST SIGHT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19—(AP)—Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, was reported by her secretary today to have lost her sight as the result of a nervous ailment, but other associates of the woman religious leader, including her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, openly expressed doubt that she had become blind, or is seriously ill.

The announcement that the evangelist had gone blind two days ago was made by her secretary, Emma Schaeffer.

Mrs. Kennedy, who has had many stormy scenes with the evangelist, revealed that she had had a fistic encounter with Mrs. McPherson, who since has been in seclusion. The mother said she was undergoing treatment for a broken nose received in the fracas with her daughter.

"I do not believe my daughter is suffering from blindness at this time," Mrs. Kennedy said. "If she wanted to have her face lifted that was nobody's business. Because she had to stay in seclusion she probably gave the excuse to the public that she was resting her eyes."

"If my daughter wants to bang me on the nose, or I want to box her ears," said Mrs. Kennedy, "it is nobody's business. We could get along if I could keep her out of the influences that caused our troubles three years ago.

"The results of this break between my daughter and me, you can see by the frame I am wearing on my nose. I was forced to come to the sanitarium at 3 o'clock in the morning."

CAPONE NOT IMPLICATED IN FLORIDA CONSPIRACY

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 19—(AP)—Vincent C. Giblin, attorney for "Scarface" Al Capone, Chicago gang chief, declined to make any statement here today regarding a reputed plot against the life of Governor Doyle E. Carlton except to say that Capone had no part in the conspiracy.

Giblin, who was arrested in connection with the alleged plot but soon released, said he would "be glad" to answer any questions should he be called as a witness at a preliminary hearing Monday for Fred O. Eberhardt, Tallahassee publisher, and Frank Ralls and Henry Halsema, who are charged with conspiring to procure the governor's death.

"I talked with Ralls and Eberhardt during dinner at a Jacksonville restaurant Saturday night," Giblin said. "Later we sat together on a hotel porch until Eberhardt went to his room. The three of us were arrested but I later was released."

He declined to make further comment.

PUBLIC SWIMMING POOLS IN PHILA. ORDERED CLOSED

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 19—(AP)—All of the city's public swimming pools were ordered closed today as a precautionary measure after health department officials received reports of the seventh death from cerebro-spinal meningitis and three more cases of illness from the disease.

The seventh death since the first of the month was that of Rosina Masie, her physician reported she had not been in a public or private pool, but had bathed with other children in water from a fire plug.

Dr. Charles J. Haines, chief of the health department's bureau of communicable diseases, said today "nothing" had been found to indicate city pools had caused spread of infection, but that the department felt the closing of the pools and an investigation of them was a public duty.

KNIFE REMOVED FROM STOMACH OF AN INFANT

DYERSBURG, Tenn., Aug. 19—(AP)—George Lewis Spencer, six months old, was recovering in a hospital here today after an operation for the removal of a knife from his stomach.

The child swallowed it about two weeks ago without suffering any apparent ill effects. An X-ray examination located the knife, about three inches in length, and an operation was decided upon.

AMENDMENTS TO CORN BORER QUARANTINE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19—(AP)—Secretary Hyde today announced amendments to the European corn borer quarantine regulations so as to permit interstate shipments of oats and rye straw, celery, and cut flowers from the two generation area of New England, effective August 20.

The regulations requiring certification of cleaned, shelled corn and the cleaned seed of broom corn, sorghums, and sudah grass also was ordered discontinued in both the one generation and two generation areas. Several years experience with restrictions on these plans and plant products, the department announcement said, indicated infestation in them was so rare that "their movements can hardly be considered to involve danger of spreading the European corn borer."

NO STATEMENT BY MELLON IN BUSINESS SITUATION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19—(AP)—Secretary Mellon today denied stories crediting statements to him in Pittsburgh yesterday on the general business situation.

Mr. Mellon said: "I made no statement whatever on business conditions, optimistic or otherwise."

The secretary issued the denial after his attention had been called to published reports which said the stock markets had gained strength today on the basis of the alleged Mellon statement.

While issuing the denial Mr. Mellon was anxious that no interpretation be put on it. He said he simply wanted it understood he had not commented on the business situation and that he was not commenting on it.

EIGHT MOTION PICTURE STUDIOS BUSY IN BOMBAY

BOMBAY, Aug. 19—(AP)—India's little Hollywood here has eight motion pitcure studios. There are several others scattered about India, but Bombay is the center, turning out twelve to fifteen films a month.

The average film here, with native actors, costs $10,000 to $15,000 and its approximate life in the trade is two years. Some films are hand-colored. This costs 30 cents a foot.

Bombay has five theatres running foreign films, chiefly American, and Calcutta has three. The native cinemas in these and other cities are numerous. The larger ones are palatial, having gorgeous entrances with emblems of peacocks, monkeys and elephants at every corner.

INVESTIGATING HOW SWIFT WAS IN POSSESSION OF GUN

NEW YORK, Aug. 19—(AP)—The revolver with which William E. Swift, son of the Chicago packer, killed himself in a Park avenue sanitarium Saturday night was purchased in Chicago Aug. 9, 1929, by a person who gave the Union stock yards in Chicago as his address, New York police were informed today.

In their investigation of how Swift, a patient in a private hospital, came into possession of a gun the police wired Chicago authorities a description of the weapon and asked them to trace its purchase.

Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner, will conduct a hearing on Swift's death tomorrow.

FIND THIRD STRONG BOX OF SLAIN GANGSTER, ZUTA

CHICAGO, Aug. 19—(AP)—A third strong box containing more of the secrets of the slain Jack Zuta's transactions with prominent Chicago political figures was reported late today to have been discovered by the state's attorney's investigators into the gangster's affairs.

In the third box, according to unofficial information obtained from the investigators, are papers bearing much more recent dates than those on papers previously made public.

The importance of this lay in the fact that it would bring the papers within the statute of limitations which has barred grand jury action on the papers previously found.

MISSING HARTFORD BOYS SAFE IN ONTARIO

SIOUX LOOKOUT, Ont., Aug. 19—(AP)—Out of communication with relatives and friends for 20 days, Roger and Bruce Manternach, schoolboys, sons of a wealthy Hartford, Conn., resident who journeyed to the north country for a holiday of adventure, were safe today at Lake Kapikik, 150 miles from here.

Guides, sent out to check a food cache which had been prepared for the brothers and their guide, returned Saturday with the news that the boys had never reached it, and immediately airmen, forestry patrols, trappers and prospectors were asked to look out for the party.

Just as a special searching party had been organized a radio message was received from Pilot Harvey of the Ontario forestry air service saying the tourists were safe. The youths had taken a side trip which threw them out of communication with their courier and gave rise to the fear that they had met with mishap.

Roger, who is 18, and his brother, 16, will start the return journey to Sioux Lookout immediately.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 19—(AP)—Thomas Gray Bennett, Civil war veteran and for 21 years president of the Winchester Repeating Arms company, died here today. He was 86.

Born in New Haven in 1845, Bennett joined the Union forces at the age of 17, was wounded, and promoted to a captaincy of the 29th Connecticut Volunteers. After his discharge he entered Sheffield Scientific school and after his graduation in 1870, entered the employ of the Winchester company. He served as secretary, treasurer, director and vice president of the company until he was chosen president in 1890. In 1911, he resigned the presidency but was continued as consulting director.

Searching The Sea For Van Lear Black

BALTIMORE, Aug. 19—(AP)—Van Lear Black, 56, multi-millionaire Baltimore publisher, capitalist and world flier, disappeared from his yacht off the New Jersey coast last night, and though sea and aircraft, including the naval dirigible Los Angeles, continued search late today, no trace of him has been found. He is believed to have perished.

The dirigible Los Angeles, scheduled to make a practice flight from Lakehurst, N. J., today was instructed by the navy department to keep a close watch along the coastline. Coast guard vessels also were ordered to help, at the request of the Baltimore Sun, of which Mr. Black was publisher.

John J. Kelley, captain of the yacht, the Savalo, a twin-screw, oil-burning craft, brought word of his disappearance today to New York, whence he telephoned to Mr. Black's associates in Baltimore. Aid of coast guard and other craft was obtained and search resumed.

The opinion that the publisher, known in many countries for the airplane flights, fell accidentally from a dangerous perch on the rail of the yacht, which he was accustomed to use despite the warnings of the captain, was expressed by Kelley.

On the deck was found a handkerchief, and the captain said apparently he lost his hold when the yacht took a sudden lurch as he reached for the handkerchief.

The disappearance was discovered by Mr. Black's valet, who went to his employer's cabin as customary about 10 o'clock. The yacht was put about, thoroughly searched, and searchlights combed the waves in vain. A heavy swell was running, the captain said.

Two coast guard craft joined the search for some time and today both the coast guard and the navy were asked to lend further help.

Mr. Black was on his way to Chesapeake Bay after cruising and visiting in the vicinity of New York since July 31. He planned to visit his island home in the Chesapeake.

Among his visitors on board recently were Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, and Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, both friends of long standing.

Because of the flights, beginning in 1927, which took him around the world, to the Dutch East Indies and to South Africa, a total of approximately 125,000 miles, Mr. Black was more widely known as a flier than as a publisher, capitalist and leader in civic affairs, though he had been a prominent figure in Baltimore for years. He was known as the richest man in Maryland.

DETERMINED TO PROSECUTE THE LYNCHERS OF NEGRO

TARBORO, N. C., Aug. 19.—(AP)—A mob which early today lynched Oliver Moore, 29, Negro, confronted tonight the expressed determination of Governor O. Max Gardner to see that its members are prosecuted.

The governor, on a vacation in the western part of the state, characterized the lynching as a "disgrace to North Carolina." Late today he was undetermined whether the state would make an investigation independent of that of Sheriff W. E. Bardin of Edgecombe county, but said the sheriff had "the state back of his county forces."

Moore, a tenant farmer, was accused of attacking his landlord's two small daughters on July 18, and was taken from the Edgecombe county jail here by the mob shortly after midnight.

The mob carried him into Wilson county, a stone's throw from the spot where the crime was committed, strung him from a tree and shot him to death.

Suspended by two plow lines passed under his arm pits, the Negro's body hung from a limb of a giant pine tree until 9 o'clock this morning, when it was cut down and an inquest held.

Veterans from every state paraded to the beat of drums and the blare of bugles. Thousands lined the sidewalks and packed the reviewing stands, their cheers and applause supported by the roar of nine military planes overhead.

After the parade the veterans saw a demonstration by army fliers at the Philadelphia navy yard, followed by contests for uniformed drill teams.

The parade was the feature of "Preparedness day," the second day of the encampment which is to continue until Thursday.

Tragedy Due To Fear Of Losing Legacy

Atlantic City Gardener Killed Employer, Her Sister, Nephew and Self.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 19—(AP)—Deranged by fear of losing his home and a legacy he had counted upon, Bernard J. Rutort, 45-year-old gardner, today shot and killed his elderly employer, her sister and her nephew and then took his own life.

Mrs. Mary Parr, 75-year-old widow, for whom Rutort had worked 15 years, Mrs. Anna M. Collins, 77, of Philadelphia, and Leo Collins, Mrs. Collins' son, a Philadelphia church sexton, were found dead in Mrs. Parr's home at Pleasantville, near here. Rutort died in a hospital here after admitting the slayings.

The tragedy occurred shortly after Mrs. Collins and her son arrived at the Parr home for a visit. Police said a quarrel began over Rutort's residence in the home and his right to share in the estate. Collins was said to have attempted to eject the gardener from the house.

Mrs. Mae Walters, a neighbor, told police she heard sounds of an argument in the house and was startled by a succession of shots. She saw Rutort stagger from the doorway followed by Mrs. Parr. A woman passer-by called police and they found the mother and son dead in the kitchen and Mrs. Parr dead in the garden. An automatic pistol lay on the floor. Rutort was found mortally wounded.

Later Police found Mrs. Parr's will in her room. It stipulated the estate should be divided equally among Rutort, Mrs. Collins and her son. They also found a note in Rutort's handwriting saying in part, "Health and happiness and success are mine, I claim them in my name."

SEES HIGH WAGES CURE FOR BUSINESS DEPRESSION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19. — (AP) — President Hoover was told today by Eldredge R. Johnson, Moorestown, New Jersey, industrialist, that high wages are the medium to "snap us out" of the present business depression.

Johnson, former president of the Victor company, said there was evidence that business generally is on the up grade. He said an indication of this was seen in plans of the RCA Victor company to enlarge its force by 5,000 men to a total of 17,500 before September 15; that the Campbell Soup company expects to have more employes by that date than ever before, and that the Pennsylvania railroad has contracted for electric locomotive equipment running into millions of dollars.

The New Jersey capitalist gave it as his opinion that these were only isolated instances of a general movement toward business recovery.

Johnson said it was "far easier to resume on a high wage basis that it is on a low wage basis because on a high wage basis everything begins where it left off right away, whereas on a low wage basis it will take years to build up again to the old standard."

MRS. O'DONNELL LEADS IN WOMEN'S AIR DERBY

DOUGLAS, Ariz. Aug 19.— (AP) — Mrs. Gladys O'Donnell of Long Beach, Cal., won the fourth and fifth laps of the women's national air derby today to increase her elapsed time lead to more than 16 minutes over Marjorie (CQ) Doig, of Danbury, Conn., who was second.

The six women who took off Sunday at Long Beach on the nine-day jaunt to Chicago, made the morning flight from Phoenix to Tucson and the afternoon trip from Tucson here without serious mishap.

Yesterday, Ruth Barron, of Hollywood, Cal., missed Phoenix in flying from Calexico, Cal., and was forced down to a corn field 110 miles northwest of the Arizona capital by a fuel shortage. She rejoined the group shortly before continuance of the race at Phoenix this morning.

Mrs. Mildred Morgan, of Beverly Hills, Cal., crowded Jean La Rene, of Kansas City, out of third place by finishing ahead of her in both of today's flights. Otherwise the fliers' standings were unchanged, Ruth Stewart, St. Louis, remaining in fifth position and Miss Barron, sixth.

FATALLY BURNED IN A FILLING STATION

HARTFORD, Aug. 19.—(AP)—John McDonald, 29, of this city, died tonight as the result of burns received in an explosion at the filling station of a local automobile business this afternoon, and Tony Smith, 42, of Tariffville, a co-worker was reported in a critical condition at St. Francis' hospital, with burns all over his body. Another man is in Hartford hospital with slight burns and will recover, physicians said.

McDonald and Smith were working in the basement of the filling station. A leaking pipe had caused the cellar to be flooded with gasoline and, after repairing the leak, the men set to the task of pumping out the basement. But they did so with an electric motor and pump, a spark from the motor igniting the gasoline fumes and causing the explosion, which could be heard for several blocks.

Fire Marshal Coggshall condemned the building after an investigation. It was the second explosion due to the same cause to occur at the plant within three months.

"LAWLESS ENFORCEMENT OF LAW" SUBJECT OF DEBATES

At Sectional Meetings of Members of the American Bar Association—Phohibition Threatens to Bring About a Heated Fight When the Annual Convention Opens in Chicago Today—Executive Committee Has Decided to Complete a Referendum On Prohibition.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19—(AP)—Prohibition threatened tonight to bring about a heated fight before the American Bar association when that body formally opens its 53rd annual convention tomorrow.

Spirited disagreement became imminent late today when the association's executive committee refused to withdraw a mail poll on the dry question. A group of members had demanded that the poll be abandoned.

The executive committee decided last spring to conduct the vote and cards were mailed the first of July. Each member was sent two cards, one asking: "Shall there be a referendum on prohibition?" and the other: "Shall the eighteenth amendment be repealed?" When the voting ends in November, envelopes containing answers to the first question will be opened. If the majority favor a referendum, the second cards will be counted. Otherwise, they will be burned.

"Lawless enforcement of law," drew the attention of early delegates to the city to attend sectional meetings today.

A committee on the subject, delivering a report to the section of criminal law and criminology denounced the third degree, which, it charged, is practiced extensively throughout the country, and criticized Chicago and other police for recent crime "round ups" which, the report said, have no warrant in law.

"Hundreds, even thousands of men are haled to the police stations, looked over, quizzed and, after a few hours, turned loose," the report said. "Out of a thousand arrested in such a raid, perhaps 60 or 70 may be held for minor offenses in no wise connected with the ostensible purpose for which the raid was made.

"It is one thing to suspect that A. killed B. It is quite another thing to suspect that A. is the sort of man who might kill someone and these raids have no basis except some such indefinite suspicion."

Charging that officers break into and search dwellings without a warrant and contrary to law, and that suspected persons are whipped, beaten, kicked, threatened and otherwise tortured to force confessions, the report continues: "The boldness with which the sheriffs, police and state's attorneys practice this lawlessness is astonishing and goes on despite protests and rebukes from the courts."

The report deplored the lack of statistics on how extensive is the practice of the third degree and said that at least nine out of ten such cases are interred from the public view because they result in guilty pleas and never reach trial.

AMERICA'S CUP DEFENDER YACHTS TO RACE TODAY

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 19—(AP)—Four candidates for the honor of defending the America's cup, blue ribbon of all yachting trophies, will go to the starting line off here tomorrow.

They are the Enterprise, sailed by Harold S. Vanderbilt, with the best record to date, Weetamoe, the Morgan-Nichols candidate, sailed by George Nichols, Yankee, sailed by John S. Lawrence and Charles Francis Adams, secretary of the nation's navy, and Whirlwind, the Hammond-Thorne entry which may be the best boat but which has never been sailed to her best advantage.

One of the four boats will be selected to defend the cup won by the yacht America back in 1851 and that selection will be made within the next ten days. The boat selected will meet Shamrock V, Sir Thomas Lipton's fifth challenger off here September 13.

On past performance the boats rank Enterprise, Weetamoe, Yankee and Whirlwind. Enterprise has sailed a greater mileage and in better time than any of the others in competition to date. She has been able to finish in air so light that none of the others has been able to come in within the time limit.

SEC'Y DAVIS WOULD GRANT BALCHEN CITIZENSHIP

Difficulties are faced by the well known pilot for Rear Admiral Byrd because of his absence from the country for a year preceding his petition to become a citizen, he having been at the south pole.

The secretary of labor communicated today to Raymond F. Crist, commissioner of naturalization, his view that because Balchen's service with the explorer "was exclusively on vessels of American registry, in company with Americans, and in part at least upon territory which, it is understood, has been claimed for the United States, this absence from continental United States may quite properly be construed by the court hearing his petition for citizenship as residence within the United States, within the meaning of the naturalization law."

CLUES TO WOMAN BURIED IN POTTER'S FIELD

SPRINGFIELD, Vt., Aug. 19—(AP)—State's Attorney L. S. Edgerton today announced receipt of the "best clue" yet revealed as to the identity of the woman buried in the Potter's field at Chester. The clue was contained in a letter from Mrs. Belle Chickering of 281 Essex street, Lynn, Mass., formerly of Hardwick, Vt., who said the description of the dead woman tallied with that of her daughter, Ruby Chickering Green, missing since 1926.

The identity of the dead woman, named several months ago by George J. Packard as his wife, Mrs. Catherine R. Packard, has been shrouded in mystery since the reappearance last week of Mrs. Packard. Authorities had apparently reached a standstill in the investigation when the letter arrived today from the Lynn woman.

SUPREME CONVENTION OF KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

BOSTON, Aug. 19—(AP)—Criticism of the enforcement of virtue by statute and machine gun and a plea for the settlement of the unemployment problem, were addressed to the 48th annual supreme convention of the Knights of Columbus, here, today by Catholic leaders in the church and in public life.

William Cardinal O'Connell, speaking of Puritanism, said:

"Puritanism was an extreme, which, unchecked, was bound to lead to fanaticism. We wish we could say that there was nothing of this unsocial, uncongenial spirit left in America. But alas, from time to time, we are made only too conscious of it by the enactment of laws and statutes which still indicate the spirit of the old testament and not that of the new.

"History proves that goodness and virtue and righteousness cannot be forced on a people by statutes or by machine guns. But, while we shudder at the fierce austerity of Puritan life, we would do well not to forget that luxury and wealth may lead to the corruption ven of the best and destrey corruption even of the best and destroy founded by sturdy men in poverty and privation.'

Y., Aug. 19—(AP)—Governor Roosevelt late today ordered a state investigation of the Ewald case in New ork city, and at the same time it was made known he was considering widening the scope of the inquiry to include the entire judiciary in the city, including reported buying and selling of seats on the United States bench there.

FOREIGN MISSION SERVICE AT WILLIMANTIC CAMP GROUND

WILLIMANTIC CAMP GROUNDS, Aug. 19—The congregation Monday evening had a pleasant surprise at the long service in the singing of Miss Avelena Lorenzana, of the Philippines who rendered two familiar Gospel songs in the language of her people and Justin Laurie later joined singing the chorus in English giving a rich tenor accompaniment. Dr. Birney's message on "The Whole Family in Heaven and Earth" made a profound impression.

The processional hymn used at the chapel service at 9:15 was "True Hearted Whole Hearted," the children's choir led by Mrs. Shaw doing good service. The speaker was Rev. Frank W. Gray of Burnside whose address was based upon the narrative of Saul's Conversion told in Acts 9 and stressing the transforming value of a soul vision of Jesus Christ.

Eight Classes Held.

The classes were held as appointed Tuesday morning, eight classes being held at different places at two different periods, viz 8:15 to 9:05 and 10 to 10:50, the instructors being Dr. John R. Cheney of Wesleyan university; Dr. Robert J. Chrystie, Mystic, Conn. pastor; Mrs. J. S. Pennepacker, Niantic; Miss Marenda Prentis, M. A., Boston; Mrs. R. J. Martin of University of Washington; Rev. Kenneth Holmes, M. A., pastor, East Blackstone, Mass; Rev Duncan Dodd, pastor, Windsor, Conn.; and Rev. John Manly Shaw, M. A., pastor, Baltic, Conn.

The boys and girls meet at 9:50 as follows: at the Tabernacle, ages 3 to 6, Mrs. Pennepacker; of the Niantic House, ages 6 to 8, Miss Prentis; at Epworth Chapel, ages 9 to 11, Mrs. Martin; and at the Manchester House, ages 12 to 14, Mr. Holmes.

Dr. Birney's address at 11 on "The Holy Spirit and the Continuous Revival" met with a good response in numbers and depth of interest on the part of his hearers.

Foreign Mission Service.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary society was in charge of the service of Tuesday afternoon and the speaker was Miss Avelena Lorenzana of the Philippines. Miss Lorenzana's interesting appearance and solos at the Monday evening service had created an interest in her message at this service. The president of the District W. F. M. S., Mrs. O. E. Tourtellotte of East Hartford, presided. The speaker gave some very interesting facts about the history and present condition of the people of these islands. Being a native Philippino she could tell many things with the freshness of a first hand knowledge. She speaks English very clearly but with a slight accent. She amused the audience when she spoke highly of the influence of the English language but added that to learn to speak it is no joke. She sang a stanza from one of their songs and explained in several ways that the people of these islands are making progress under American rule with high hopes of a future independence.

Miss Pauline Mayo is giving a course in public speaking at one period each afternoon 1:30 to 2:15. Miss Mayo's course furnishes a rare opportunity to learn how to take part in a public meeting. Her classes are held in the Tabernacle and are open to all as spectators in case one does not care to enroll as a member. At her class on Tuesday there was a large attendance and great interest was manifest especially in the trial efforts of the members of the class who in turn spoke briefly on "My Hobby."

Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Carter of Jewett City were among the visitors to the Ground Tuesday.

The Cottage Holders' association held a meeting at 4 p. m. Tuesday at the New London house.

In Brief.

C. OF C. ADVOCATES A TOWN FINANCE BOARD

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 19—The matter of establishing a town finance board in Windham is now holding the attention of the directors of the Willimantic chamber of commerce. Finance boards function under the provisions of the state enabling act permitting cities and towns in the state to establish such boards. The act provides for the election and duties of a finance board to consist of six electors and taxpayers who hold no salaried office, and who shall not receive any compensation for their services excepting the necessary expenses of the board as a whole. The board may be elected by ballot at special election or at the regular election of town officers. Two members are elected for one year, two for two years and two for three years.

Not less than two weeks before the annual town meeting the board shall hold a public meeting at which itemized estimates of the expenditures of the town for the ensuing year shall be presented, this budget to be subsequently prepared for publication along with the expenditures of the preceding year and an estimate of the revenue during the ensuing year from all sources except that of taxes to be raised on the grand list next to be completed. This publication shall also include an itemized list of the debts and obligations of such town. The board shall lay such tax on the grand list as shall be sufficient, in addition to other income, to pay the expenses of the town for the current year.

The chamber directors feel that the establishment of such a board in Windham would provide a sound method of conducting the financial affairs. There are already 68 towns in the state functioning under this system and the results are said to be most favorable. In the event that such a board is established it will be necessary to have legislative action to have the election of the board conform with the election of town officers which is now biennial.

Expansion of C. A. C. Considered.

The directors of the chamber are conducting an investigation into the proposed expansion of the educational facilities at the Connecticut Agricultural college, as indicated in statements made by the former president, Dr. George A. Works. The directors went on record as favoring any beneficial expansion at the college as a matter of state interest as well as benefit to this community.

Increased State Sanatoria Facilities.

The support of the Willimantic chamber of commerce has been pledged though the directors, toward securing additional sanatoria facilities to take care of the large number of tuberculosis patients in the state. Statistics showing that several hundred persons suffering with this disease are now awaiting the opportunity to enter one of Connecticut's crowded sanatoria, were presented. It was said that much of this condition was brought about by the reduction of the appropriation to $395,000, as compared with $845,000 asked for by the tuberculosis commission.

Trade School Competition.

Announcement was made that many criticisms had been received that the school was competing with local contractors in securing business with the result that many tradesmen were having difficulty to find work. Information was requested on this form of alleged competition from Bridgeport, Stamford, New Britain, Danbury, Putnam, South Manchester, Torrington, Meriden and Middletown. The report to the directors was that replies from these cities was that there existed no criticism or adverse sentiment against the trade schools in the respective communities, regarding competition with local contractors.

Small Claims Court.

The subject of small claims courts is again before the chamber of commerce directors. It is a matter that necessitates legislative action because the local court has no civil jurisdiction at the present time. Various cities which have such courts write that they are beneficial.

Industrial Prospects.

Three industrial prospects have been communicated with and the possibility of getting them to locate in Willimantic is being investigated by the industrial committee of the chamber of commerce. It is understood, however, that the type of facilities needed by two of the prospects could not be found in the city. Substantial floor space is available for industrial purposes at No. 3 mill of the former Quidnick-Windham plant, the fine structure formerly occupied by the S. C. S. Box company or at the factory building formerly occupied by the Chaffee company. There is also a vacant factory at Eagleville.

DANIELSON

STALLED FREIGHT HOLDS UP MAIN ST. TRAFFIC

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Aug. 19.—Traffic on Main street was at a standstill for several minutes shortly after noon today when a freight train several cars in length stopped in the station limits and blockaded the crossing. During the hold-up a line of cars, three rows abreast, clogged the main thoroughfare from the westerly side of the crossing to a point as far south as one could see. It was estimated that upwards of 150 automobiles were included in the jam.

Conditions were relieved for a few minutes when trainmen, at the order of Chief of Police John McFarland, uncoupled the cars to allow the traffic to pass. The train experienced delay in getting under way and autoists were forced to remain in line until the caboose cleared the gateman's station. During the minutes the street was choked with the large number of idle vehicles. Danielson's west side was left unprotected in case of fire, since the progress of fire apparatus, should an alarm have been sent in at this critical time, would be delayed by being diverted around Furnace street after weaving its way through the congested traffic.

A mention of the name of the Mary A. Livermore tent, daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, was inadvertently omitted from the list of delegations of various organizations in attendance at the funeral of Thomas P. Bates, which was held yesterday afternoon.

On September 1, all roads in the territory hereabouts will lead to South Killingly where an elaborate programme in commemoration of Old Home day will take place. On this occasion native sons and daughters will be recalled to the fold once again to renew old friendships and visit the scenes of their youth. The day is an important one in the lives of South Killonians and this year it will have a peculiar interest in view of the fact that the day will mark the end of nearly a year of splendid service of Rev. Henry A. Coolidge and his wife in South Killingly.

In connection with the celebration of Old Home day, a church service will be observed in "The Little White Church on the Hilltop," on Sunday morning, August 31, at which Rev. Mr Coolidge will preach. On Monday afternoon the grand reunion of residents of South Killingly, their friends and former citizens of the little community will take place. The feature of the programme will be a clambake and shore dinner, to be served by the committee in charge.

Denham H. Arnold of Elmville has reached the height of his ambitions, in a sporting sense at least—he scored a hole in one last Thursday on the Woodstock golf course. Not many have reached the pinnacle of success in golfdom by qualifying for admittance to membership in that mythical fraternity—The Hole-in-One club. Mr Arnold, one of Killingly's enthusiastic followers of the ancient Scotch pastime, is now a bona fide member. When asked concerning his accomplishment Mr. Arnold, shy and modest and in a manner remarked. "It was only luck."

Funeral services were held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the rooms of Undertaker A. F. Wood on Mechanics street, for Henry J. Cooper, Danielson resident, who died early this week at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam. Rev. Albert Abbott, rector of the Methodist Episcopal church, officiated at the service and at the committal exercises at the grave in the Brooklyn cemetery. The bearers were Lester B. Williams, Meddie Harold, Hrbert Lyman and Waldo A. Tillinghast.

The body of Charles Brown, who died Sunday at his home in New York, was received for burial in the family plot in High street cemetery in Dayville his afternoon. The body arrived at Putnam by train and was taken in charge by Undertaker A. F. Wood. A committal service at the grave was in charge of Rev. Albert Abbott of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Brown, who was well known in Dayville, is survived by a sister, Mrs. Mary Street, of Dayville, a nephew and several nieces.

Harry Goodman of Danielson, arrested Monday by State Trooper Elton T. Nolan of the Danielson barracks, will appear in justice court in Brooklyn Friday, to answer to a charge of speeding.

While conducting brake and general equipment inspections in Killingly Monday afternoon, State Officers George Martin and Lionel Poirier arrested Joseph Madigan of Waterbury who was found to be operating a motor vehicle without a license. They also arrested Victor Brunelle of Danielson on a charge of overloading a commercial vehicle. Both drivers will be presented in town court Wednesday morning.

William Harrington of the borough, who has been a patient at the Chelsea Naval hospital, has returned to his home here in an improved condition.

Chief John McFarland continues to issue the welcome tags to out of town motorists extending to them an unrestricted parking privilege.

Dr. and Mrs. Levin are now on a motor tour through the White mountains of New Hampshire.

PUTNAM

BOARD OF EDUCATION HAS COMPLETED SCHOOL PROGRAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Aug. 19—With only a fortnight remaining before the summer recess of the 1930 school year is at an end, officials of the town department of education are busy making preparations for the reopening of schools, which will take place this year on Wednesday morning September 3. The commencement date of the fall semester was announced this morning by Superintendent of Schools Leon M. Farrin.

A program of school enrollment required by state law government education, affects only children entering the primary departments. The requirements are few and the rules are simple and should be followed by parents in order to avoid unnecessary commotion that usually accompanies opening day. All children presented for enrollment in the kindergarten or first grades should bring birth certificates. Entrance age is 4 years and 8 months for kindergarten and those seeking admittance to the first grade must be at least 5 years and 8 months old, before they can be accepted. No certificate of vaccination, required in past years, is necessary this year, Mr. Farrin said. The revisal of the laws pertaining to vaccination, eliminated this requirement last season.

The town teaching staff has been compiled and published, there being only three changes noted in the list. New teachers who will take up their positions in the various schols this year are Miss Lydia P. Tollander of Norwood, Mass., who succeeds Mrs. Ernestine Wheeler as supervisor of music. Miss Tollander is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music and holds the degree of bachelor of school music. Her duties consist of the supervision of music instruction in all of the schools.

At the East Putnam school Miss Sylvia Kurlan, principal there for the past few years, who resigned in June, will be succeeded by Mrs. Clara Gibson. Mrs Gibson is a graduate of the Willimantic Normal school.

Miss Anna Keniry, of Bristol, Conn., a graduate of the New Britain Normal school will succeed Miss Angelina O'Flynn as teacher of the primary grades at the Sawyer district school. Miss O'Flynn has been transferred to the Israel Putnam schol, as teacher of a division of grade 1, succeeding Miss Mildred Torrey, whose resignation was submitted last June.

Mrs. A. A. Vonsiatsky, general chairman of the drive for funds for the Day Kimball hospital nurses home reported today that the campaign treasury has surpassed the $10,000 mark and is well on its way to the objective amount of $25,000. Several private donations received this week served to enhance the funds on hand. The donors and the amounts contributed are to be announced at a later date, Mrs. Vonsiatsky said today.

With $10,000 already on hand and the drive only in its 8th week, appearances are that the desired amount of $25,000 will be obtained in surprisingly short time. Many events are planned for, outstanding among which is the Russian dinner to be held on September 14. This affair was originally scheduled for August 31, but was postponed to the September date, considered to be more attractive to the various communities fostering the drive. Food sales are being planned for by local woman's clubs and on August 30, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Swain will open their palatial Pomfret home to the home drive committee for the holding of a tennis and swimming tournament. Excellent tennis courts and a marvelous outdoor swimming pool decorate the grounds surrounding the Swain home.

Rev. Joseph Vasey of Terre Haute, Ind., to whom a call to become pastor of the Second Congregational church of this city was extended last week by the church committee, in a letter received this week by Frederick W. Seward, secretary of the church, has accepted the call. Rev. Mr. Vasey in his letter, thanked the members of the church committee charged with selecting Mr. English's successor, for their consideration and expressed his intentions of arriving in Putnam in time to assume his new pastorate on October 8. A biographical sketch of Rev. Mr. Vasey appeared in the Thursday edition of last week's Bulletin.

Miss Marjorie C. Bradford, assistant clerk of superior court, has returned to her duties at the court offices after a week's vacation spent in Vermont and New Hampshire.

William Johnson, assistant exchange manager at the local telephone office is acting manager in the absence of E. Leslie Beebe, manager, who is at Niantic on his annual vacation.

Lighting a cigarette while driving a car at a high rate of speed on the Chaplin-Phoenixville road yesterday afternoon, caused an accident and later a court appearance for Joseph Short of South Orange, N. J., arrested by State Trooper R. V. Scranton, following an investigation of the crash of Short's car, that tore up a stretch of highway fence several feet in length. Short was presented in Eastford town court this morning, before Justice Theresa Daubneck of Chaplin, on a charge of reckless driving. The case was nolled after Short explained the circumstances and consented to pay costs of court.

BIG RECEPTION PLANNED FOR REV. JOHN J. McCABE

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Aug. 19—Plans for the public reception to be given Rev John J. McCabe, who has been abroad for the past two months, are practically completed. Father McCabe arrived Monday evening at New London, where he was met by the committee in charge of this affair and escorted to the rectory in Jewett City.

The following plans are announced by the committee: The reception will take place in Finns Theatre Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. The list of speakers will include Rev. Stanislaw A. Iciek of St. Joseph's church, Norwich; Rev. Nicolas Caron, State Attorney Arthur M. Brown and Warden E. J. Jodoin.

A short musical program has been arranged by James Olson, organist and chorister of St. Mary's.

The committee emphasizes the fact that this is to be a non-sectarian demonstration. Everyone who is a friend of Father McCabe, and his friends are without number, is invited to be present to help make this reception a notable event, indicative not alone of the high regard in which Father McCabe is held by his parishioners but of the value the townspeople set upon his efforts for and hearty cooperation in every movement and project for the betterment of the community. It is apparent that the reception will be by no means restricted to a borough welcome, but that Father McCabe's many friends outside of the town will be in the assemblage gathered to do him honor.

ONE-TIME SLATER OFFICE DEMOLISHED BY POWER

Erected the summer following the great flood of '86, the one-time W. A. Slater Mills office, built of brick and granite, has stood for close to half a century to beautify Slater avenue corner. Laborers have been at work for several days removing the roof, tearing out the interior piping and fixtures, and slowly beating down the heavy brick walls. The contractor had the upper story fairly well down, it looked like a long hard job, when along came the big 20-ton steam shovel that had been working on the highway excavation nearby. The operator glanced at the defiant brick walls, saw the half dozen men slowly picking with bars and hammers. The great black machine halted, and as half a dozen levers were pulled, it turned on its tractor heels. The steel bucket was dropped a bit, the long boom ran out and dealt the nearest corner a blow like a battering ram. Bricks, mortar and plaster dust filled the air, as the whole side wall went down with a crash. The great steel claws then hooked under one corner, and as the engineer gave her the gun, the whole west section was reduced to a pile of rubbish. There were just two more attacks, and in 7 minutes by the watch the gent at the controls had done the job that would have taken manpower the balance of the week to accomplish.

Unexpected among the many items of salvage, were the several dozens of window weights hidden within the casings. They were of pure lead, hundreds of pounds in all, and worth a pretty penny today.

Now that this handsome building, with its massive ivy-grown walls, is only a memory, the workmen declare that its construction was of the finest, with no item omitted that made for security and finish. W. A. Richardson, superintendent for the Fisk Rubber company has lived there for the last 11 years; before that, it was the home of the late Arthur C. Ladd. Built under the supervision of the late A. A. Young, Jr., it was a model of architectural beauty of the late 80's. Today to erect this building the cost would be, as estimated by a local contractor from $25,000 to $30,000. It was built in 1886 for $9,000.

G. H. Prior, acting for the board of supervisory engineers, has been appointed superintendent of construction at the new Tadpole bridge and overseer of demolition at the one-time mill office. Mr. Prior had in his mind elaborate and altogether practical plans regarding what the big steam shovel could accomplish in the way of tearing down the old brick construction. Contractor King also had visions of such probable efficiency. All unsuspecting what the shovel engineer had in his mind, Supervisor Prior went to Norwich on business Tuesday afternoon. While he was away, the great exhibition took place, and George missed the show which wasn't in form be being the supervisory engineer.

FRIDAY'S WATER CARNIVAL TO BE THE BIGGEST EVER

Geney Shorey, trick diver of Ashland diving troupe, who has always been the big number on all water programs promoted by the Ashland club was out Tuesday practicing some new stuff and by Friday night this lad will have plenty of thrills and comedy stunts to drop into the water. Geney is nothing if not modern and among his new stunts he gets his inspiration from both the airplane and the submarine.

Hal Chase reports that never before in the history of the club has the entry list anywhere near approached the figures already at hand. Yesterday no less than sixty-seven names had been entered and if the weather is favorable this means the most interesting meet ever staged here. In past years entries have been held open until starting time, but at the rate they are coming in it probably will be necessary to close the entries Thursday. The Tadpole Roughnecks are the latest relay team to enter in the juvenile class. Their line-up is Edward Rys, Frank Woytkin, Bozo Toper and Dominick Slonski. Other entries not previously published are Joe Senecal, Raymond Zagranitski, Armand Fregau, Louis Gingras, Walter Novakowski, Gene Shorey, Albert Belisle, Edward Koziol, Stanley Koziol, Stanley Stadnicki, Stanley Kusek, Jennie Koziol, Jennie Misiaszek, Mary Dobolek, Alice Wolzak, Josephine Zaranbovicz, Evelyn L'Hereaux, Aldea Marzec, Mary Laframboise, Eva Shorey, all listed among the juveniles. In addition, for the special race of children still under instruction, there are Joe Skoczylas, Steven Misiaszek, Germaine Derosiers, Danny Shorey, John Rosal, Claire Stanley, Amelda Ducharme, Jeanette Lafranier, Celia Belisle, Reta Belisle, Winnie Shorey and Bertha Gaska.

Among the most recent entries for the grownups are Minnie Segal and Steffie Misiaszek who will give an exhibition tandem swim. Also listed are Nellie Misiaszek, Mary Solenski and Helen Miss.

There will be a life saving demonstration in the breaking of various so-called death grips and methods of rescue and carry. The H. H. inhalator which was purchased by the local chapter of the American Red Cross about a year ago and turned over to the use of the town will also be demonstrated in resuscitation, which is a part of the life saving demonstration to be given by Mr. Chase.

All-Stars vs. H. N. S.

This (Wednesday) evening, at Ashland park, the Holy Name team will play Deo Gaudette's All-Stars. The H. N. S. will have the same lineup of heavy sluggers, with Capt. Benal the probable hurler. Pizzo, the star catcher and new lead off man, will be the other battery mate. The H. N. S. have been practicing every night this week, giving special attention to their batting. It is almost certain that Gaudette will pitch and George Robertson will catch for the All-Stars, but everyone is asking who will play the other positions. This is a mystery. The fans enjoy watching comical Joe Gilbert, the new H. N. S. coach. The betting has been about even money on this game, because nobody can tell what Deo Gaudette will offer for opposition. Both managers had practically agreed Tuesday evening that if terms could be arranged, Dan Shea would be the umpire. Dan, who has performed the judgment job for many big league games, will be an added attraction to this classy contest.

WESTERLY

NEW STATION AGENT ASSUMES DUTIES HERE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 19.— James J. Flaherty, former station agent for the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad at Manville, R. I., near Woonsocket, arrived in Westerly on Tuesday morning to begin his duties in a similar capacity for the New Haven road in Westerly. Station Agent Flaherty received notice of his appointment as station agent from Division Superintendent H. A. Moynihan and will begin his official duties Wednesday morning.

Agent Flaherty's railroad service has extended over a period of twenty-three years and began as a railroad telegrapher when he was located in a signal block tower on what was then known as the Boston division and since taken into the Providence division with which he has been connected with the several extensions of that division. He was located in Mystic in 1912 and 1913 and since that time has been at Valley Falls and Manville, R. I.

With the resignation of Station Agent Earl S Bavier, whose predecessor, Henry D. Smith, was transferred to Norwich to act as agent there, there has been a vacancy since Mr. Bavier went to the southwest for his health. Since March 1st last James M. Sission, cashier at the freight depot, has been acting station agent for the New Haven railroad.

Mr. Flaherty, with his wife and two children, have been residing in Pawtucket, R. I. Estate of Clara E. Percy. Petition received from William H. Ledward that the estate of the testatrix who died a resident of Westerly on Aug. 16th leaving a will in which he was named as sole executor, be admitted to probate and that letters testimentary be issued to him. Waiveure of notice received was approved and Clerk E. E. Whipple read the will to which Elizabeth R. Ledward and John H. Williams were the witnesses. Both appeared in court to testify and without objection will was admitted to probate and William H. Ledward was confirmed as executor and letters testimentary ordered issued to him. Bond was made $15,000 without surety. Howard E. Thorp was named appraiser.

Estate of George E. Egger. Petition received from widow, Olive Julia Egger, that the estate of the testator, who died July 29th, leaving a will in which she was named as sole executrix, be admitted to probate. Clerk Whipple read the will in which of the witnesses, Agnes M. Phelan and John J. Dunn, the latter appeared in court to testify. With no objection the will as approved was admitted and the declination in writing was also received in which Mrs. Egger declined to act as executrix and requested that the Washington Trust Co. be named to act. Beebe that the estate of the testatrix who died a resident of Westerly on July 14th, leaving a will in which he was named as executor, be admitted to probate and letters testimentary be issued to him. On the petition for an order of distribution to 27 heirs at law Mr. Reynolds said that information on the subject of relatives had come from kin in Albany, N. Y., although a diligent search in Canada had failed to find his birth recorded even in church records in Quebec, but an almost positive identification had been made from a deguerrotype and extensive advertising had failed to produce other heirs. The legatees of the man whose sudden death resulted from being struck by an automobile while he resided at the Eureka house on Main street were found to have been three brothers and a sister and their children, although he had nothing to do with members of his family for over thirty years. OBITUARY

Miss Martha E. Arnold

On Tuesday noon at her home, 123 Main street, occurred the death of Miss Martha Edwina Arnold, aged 76 years. She had been in failing health for some time, but her death was hastened by a fall she suffered a week ago last Friday in which she sustained a fracture of the skull.

She was born at Derby, Conn., on June 17, 1854, being the daughter of the late Dr. Benjamin Franklin Arnold and Mary Anne Saunders. A year after her birth she came to Westerly with her parents and had since resided here.

Miss Arnold received her education in the local school and graduated from the Westerly high school in the class of 1875, this being the second class in the history of the school.

She had three brothers, Frank Arnold, who was lost at sea when 17 years of age; Dr. Thomas B. Arnold of New York city, who died in 1907, and Dr. Fred L. Arnold, who now resides in Providence. Besides this one brother, she is survived by her stepmother, Mrs. Mary Louise Coon Arnold; two nieces, Mrs Orlo R. Clark of White Plains, N. Y., and Miss Vivian Adelaide Arnold, R. N., of Westerly; a great-niece, Miss Adelaide L. Clark, and a great-nephew, Orlo R. Clark, Jr.

Michael A. Luzzi

At the Westerly hospital, on Tuesday morning, occurred the death of a World war veteran, Michael Angelo Luzzi, in his 49th year. He had been badly gassed in his 14 months' service in France and was a hospital patient for the past two weeks.

In service, it was while a member of Co. E., 302nd Engineers, that he was gassed overseas, and he never fully recovered from the effects of the poison. Following his honorable discharge from the army at the end of the war in 1919, he came back to Westerly and worked for a time as a laborer.

In 1926, he again enlisted in the U. S. army and served a term of three years, being honorably discharged again in 1929. During this hitch, he was a member of the 7th Field Artillery at Fort Ethan Allen, Burlington, Vt.

Twice since the war Luzzi had been a patient at the Chelsea Naval hospital, Chelsea, Mass., for lung treatment and he was to have been removed there later this week for further treatment.

He was born in Italy, but came to this country about 25 years ago and had since resided in Westerly. He was the son of Maria (Pellegrino) Luzzi and the late Pasquale Luzzi.

He was never married. Besides his mother, who now resides in Italy, he is survived by two brothers, Louis and Thomas Luzzi, both of Westerly, and three sisters, Mrs. Frank Terranova, with whom he made his home, Mrs. Joseph Comforti and Mrs. Frank Giorno, all of Westerly.

As the result of an automobile accident early Tuesday morning on Granite street, two men are at the Westerly hospital and three men suffered lacerations and cuts. ERNEST KIRKCONNELL IS INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Ernest Kirkconnell is a patient at St. Joseph's hospital, Willimantic. He had spent Saturday at his home here and was returning to his work, as he is now working for the state as a corn borer inspector at East Hartford. When between Mansfield and Storrs, the machine he was driving left the road, crashed into the fence and down a bank. He was able to crawl up the embankment but collapsed as soon as passers-by arrived to aid him. He had seven teeth knocked out and his mouth is injured from being struck by the steering wheel. His eye is dangerously injured and he has slight cuts about his face. He was resting as comfortably as can be expected. He cannot account for the accident.

Miss Amy Duglas is home from Camp Woodstock, Black pond, where she spent two weeks.

Rosea Green, local mail carrier who is having his vacation, took a motor trip to Canada with his wife and several others last week. Substitute Arnold is on the route during Mr. Green's absence.

Gwendolyn and Elsie Smalley have returned from Upton, Mass., where they visited their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Wright. Albert Smalley is visiting there at present.

Miss Lucille Bosquet, of Danielson, was the guest of Derilda Roy over the week end.

Walter Weeks, accompanying his grandmother, Mrs. Albert Rollinson, motored to Mystic, where they were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rollinson and Mrs. Benner.

Miss Helen Billings has returned to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., with her nieces Elaine and Rita Vachon, children of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Vachon.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Thornley, Marjorie Thornley and Amy Duglas motored to Rocky Point Sunday.

Mrs. Henry Billings and daughter, Mrs. Arthur Lavallee, were recent visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Peter Vachon, in Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. John Jordan have returned to their home at Mechanicsville, N. Y., after visiting Mrs. Sarah Moffitt.

ROCKVILLE. R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Kenyon of Providence, have been guests the past week of Mr. Kenyon's father, Elmer E. Kenyon.

Rev. and Mrs. W. D. Burdick and daughter, Miss Marjorie Burdick, are on a motor trip to Salem, West Virginia, to attend the Seventh Day Baptist general conference, Aug. 19-24.

Mr. and Mrs. Orlando R. Smith of Westerly, were callers at the Kenyon farm, Sunday afternoon.

The several showers during the past week were very welcome, reviving some vegetation which was not too far gone.

SAFEGUARDING PAYROLLS

Those who have made studied efforts to rob have recognized the opportunities that prevail where payrolls are being transported. They have been able to learn how they are carried, when they are being taken from bank to factory and who does it, and they have made frequent and large hauls. How many others have been frustrated, by accident or intention, there is no way of telling. Just what the total loss is from such robberies is not known, but it is certain that the amount is large enough to warrant every possible means being employed to prevent further additions.

As the result of a long study by a special committee of the national crime commission the recommendation has been made that payroll robberies can be forestalled by the use of checks in the payment of wages. This is the method which is already employed in many instances. Some have followed this plan for a long time while others have been quick to recognize its protection as the result of losses by others.

The chief objection that is raised to the use of checks is that employes find it difficult at times in getting them cashed. It is quite apparent that one or a few small stores might find it difficult to meet the requirements of their customers with a steady stream of checks being presented, especially if they were located in the immediate vicinity of a large factory, but it is not improbable that through some readjustment in the time for paying off and the right kind of cooperation on the part of banks that there would be a satisfactory solution to any such situation.

In the interest of protection and as a means of thwarting crime, there is sufficient reason for placing the greatest safeguards about payrolls and to give due protection to all those who are obliged to handle them. There should be little difficulty experienced in getting such cooperation as is needed in order to combat the robbers and put obstacles in the way of those with criminal inclinations. It is unfortunate that such conditions exist but as long as they do they should be provided the strongest kind of opposition.

FLORIDA'S COMEBACK

While pests are being fought in this part of the country and opposition is being expressed in certain quarters because of the establishment of quarantine, it is an interesting report which comes from Florida.

It will be remembered that last year that state suffered severely from the Mediterranean fruit fly. It had to face a serious situation since there was a vast curtailment of fruit shipments because of the ravages of that pest and the efforts that were necessary to prevent its spread. Florida didn't like it. No one liked it. Florida suffered seriously from it right on top of the other losses which had been experienced in that state from cyclones and collapsed land booms. It was felt that the quarantine was in the nature of a needless burden, but it was regarded as the one method of controlling the pest and subsequent developments seem to bear it out.

From Florida comes the information that the prospects for the citrus fruit crop in that state are excellent. It is quite in contrast to the woeful stories that came up from the south last year, and it bears out the contention of the authorities that only through the proper control of the fly pest at that time could there be any reasonable expectation of future fruit prospects.

Florida dealt with its handicap in such a manner that it is able this year to report a gratifying come back. At least that would seem to be the situation when it is claimed that it will have a crop this year 4,000,000 boxes in excess of last year. This, in view of the fact that no quarantine might have made this year's crop as small if not smaller than last, bears out the contention that quarantine was really needed when it was applied.

That Florida is able to report such an improved condition is as gratifying to sections which rely upon the fruit crop from that state quite the same as it is to Florida itself. It likewise shows the value of dealing promptly and effectively with any and all destructive pests whenever they make their appearance. A thorough job quickly done through general cooperation means a prompt end to such a nuisance.

THE HAWKS RECORDS

Captain Hawks is not a novice in flying. In making his new record in cross country flying he has simply repeated what he did going in the opposite direction. He now holds the record for both directions. When, or how soon, these records will be lowered is decidedly uncertain. They are decidedly different than those in endurance flights.

Captain Hawks made his eastward flight in much less time than he covered the same distance going west, and from his statements it seems probable that such may be expected even if the records are lowered. This is because the prevailing winds are from the west and give decided aid to the flier going toward the east. It seems to be the case with the land flier as with the one crossing the Atlantic that the flight toward the east is the easier and safer.

Speaking of ocean flying, Captain Hawks has advanced a point which seems worthy of serious consideration. He maintains that it is a serious mistake to undertake an ocean flight in a land plane and that it would be quite as reasonable for him undertake his trips across the United States in a seaplane as it is for ocean fliers to set out on their journies in land planes.

It is the hope and expectation of all ocean fliers, of course, that they will safely reach the other side. That being so the land plane serves their purpose adequately, but it is a well known fact that even though the aviators expect to reach the other side they do not always do so. They do not always get to the point where they can land on a beach or close to one. Some have never been heard from, and if they are obliged to come down the land plane offers them no protection, while a seaplane might, under favorable conditions, keep them above water for a considerable time, long enough perhaps to be rescued.

Captain Hawks has the distinction of breaking a Lindbergh record. That is a distinct accomplishment in itself, but it cannot be overlooked that his flights have been made for the purpose of showing what American aircraft can do under ordinary circumstances. Such means a distinct benefit to aviation.

RESPONSIBILITIES IN HIGHWAY

Almost daily the hit and run driver is breaking into the record of events in a manner which not only distresses but calls for action and punishment. It brings attention to the dangers which surround highway conditions, and the consequent need of so dealing with them that accidents and fatalities will be prevented.

This means that there are responsibilities which must be assumed by all users of the highway. The automobile driver is expected to show due respect for the rights of others. He has no right to ride rough shod over a pedestrian any more than he has to run down a truck or any other vehicle. He should have his machine under such control that he can share the highway with other users and if he doesn't display that attitude he should be subjected to the provided penalties.

On the other hand there are also responsibilities which should be assumed by the pedestrian. He should give proper attention to the fact that a reasonable speedy crossing of a highway is in the interest of his own safety and that trying to occupy the whole road is no more reasonable on the part of the individual than by the motorist. The rights of others cannot be overlooked and for his own protection the individual who walks the highway at night take a desperate chance if he does not indicate his presence by a light or a reflector. It is quite important that the person afoot should indicate his position for a light ahead gives a warning to the driver of a motor vehicle which he would not otherwise receive and certainly it is quite as desirable that pedestrians as well as vehicles should be discovered in time.

DRAWING AMATEUR LINE

In amateur sports there is a determined effort to keep the status clear and distinct from professionalism and the line is drawn on the question of financial reward for successful accomplishment. The amateur cannot retain his standing and receive money prizes.

Because of this the United States Lawn Tennis association is seriously debating the effect of the bequest announced in the will of the late James D. Phelan of California, which provided that Helen Wills should receive $20,000. There is no reason in the world why Helen Wills should be barred from receiving a bequest from anyone and the only basis for the association's attitude is found in the will's explanation for the bequest. That explains that it is given for "bringing the tennis championship to California."

It is perfectly apparent that Helen Wills was not playing tennis and winning matches with the expectation that she was going to receive a financial reward from the former senator from California. In all probability nothing was known concerning the provisions of his will. She had played her game and won, won as an amateur and sought no more than the honor, the cup or the medal perhaps, that went with the championship. Unbeknown to her it made a strong appeal to the pride which the Californian had in his state and its accomplishments and, even though it may be unusual, he was moved to recognize it.

Such is not the experience of other champions. It may never happen again and by accepting the bequest there will be no change in her game and no change in her attitude toward amateur tennis. She gets her bequest because she is a Californian and not solely because of the tennish championship, and even then without advance knowledge of any such prize.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Some drivers act as if they were striving for a prize in the most reckless driving contest.

There were years when there were more or less preparations for a county fair about this season.

The man on the corner says: These are the days when we hear no serious complaints about the heat.

With the katydids singing and warning that it is but six weeks to frost, the hayfever sufferers will rejoice.

Localities which have been inundated by heavy rains would have preferred a distribution of the downpour over a greater area.

Possibly the participants in the new endurance flight in Oregon had not learned of the unsatisfactory financial result of the flight in St. Louis.

Frequently a person is rated as a dead one but it remained for a Vermont woman to return home to find she was dead and buried.

FLATTERY

"Flattery will help you if nothing else seems to do any good," said Tom.

"Huh, you don't know this young lady," sighed the younger brother.

"Well, try it anyhow," argued Tom.

"I will," promised Peter, "but it won't make any hit with Helen. She's just plain cold to all male friends."

"Too bad I don't know her." sighed the older lad.

"She has plenty of callers just as clever as you consider yourself, but Helen just doesn't seem to care for the usual things, talk included."

"She's a woman, if rather young," concluded Tom. "Flattery will get her. Try it and see!"

"Helen, you're getting prettier every time I call," began Peter.

"Blarney! Let's tune in on the Night Hawks tonight; I'm fed up on opera and symphony concerts."

"Helen, that dress is just the color that makes your blue eyes bluer," continued Peter, fingering the loud speaker cords with a preoccupied manner.

"What's getting into you?" asked the girl, looking a bit perplexed. "Have you been eating too much honey with your noon waffles?"

"No," sighed Peter. "I—I want to make an impression of some kind on your distant attitude."

"Well," Helen said, rippling a merry little laugh. "distance is what they all want in this age of radio and loud speakers."

"You are clever," said the lovelorn lad. "Clever as you are beautiful."

"Hush, child," said Helen. "You are getting positively personal."

"Did it work?" asked Tom.

"Nothing works on that girl," said Peter.

"You don't know how to go at it," said the oldest son. "Why not take me along next time you call?"

"Nothing doing. She'd probably never look at me again if she met you." sighed Peter. "You aren't as smart as you think, but you are handsome."

"Thanks," grinned Tommy. "But don't be silly over the girl. If she doesn't want you why not give your big brother a chance?"

The younger brother considered the matter, very gravely for one of his years.

"I'll take your over there," he finally promised. "Put in a good word for me if you—if you don't fall in love with her, yourself, won't you?"

"Sure thing," agreed Tom. "She must be one of our little old family, some way, somehow!"

"Don't you think my oldest brother is handsome?" asked Peter, a bit nervously.

Helen nodded.

"He is quite good-looking," she declared, with sudden frankness. "But too gushy, too-too flattering. You have just the opposite manner, except on one foolish occasion. I don't like gushy boys, or oily talk—banana oil, as they say. I couldn't bear to have a man hanging around constantly who insists on exaggerating one's good points and forgetting one's weakness!"

"What—what kind of a young man would you like?" he asked, dismally.

Helen smiled whimsically.

"You mean to say what kind of young man I do like, not what kind I could like, or would like. Peter, I like a bashful, not too clever sort of a fellow."

"I—I'm not very clever, Helen."

"No, that's why I like you better than your big, big brother," replied the girl.

Peter sighed again.

"Do you like me better than the other men who call on you?" he finally murmured.

"Of course I do," said Helen. "If I didn't do you suppose I'd stay home when you call instead of chasing you out to expensive places?"

"Then you—you aren't so cold—so distant?"

The girl shook her head.

"Not any more distant than your telephone," she sighed. "Or your person—I—Peter, don't muss my new dress. Well, wait a few minutes, at least. Yes, I will promise anything—but please don't ever tell your brother I said he was too gushy, Peter. After all, we're almost in the same family."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19—During the sweltering July and August days anybody coming to Washington to talk over matters with the state department discovered that about the only high authority of that branch of government on the job was Bill Castle, assistant secretary and recently Hoover special ambassador to Tokio for naval treaty negotiation purposes.

It looked a lot as though Bill's colleagues, from Secretary Stimson down, had figured he had already had a vacation incidental to his trans-Pacific voyaging with two stops at his home in Honolulu.

So they all, or nearly all, beat it for cooler climes and left Bill to hold the sack. He was acting secretary of state most of the time.

Rumors

There is something a little amusing about that. During the unusual period of delay after Hoover's inauguration before Mr. Stimson was installed as the Hoover secretary of state, Castle was widely expected to get the undersecretaryship.

He is by way of being a personal friend of Mr. Hoover's Washington life.

But Mr. Stimson had another idea. He drafted Joe Cotten, New York lawyer, for undersecretary.

And it was rumored about that despite Mr. Hoover's known leanings toward Castle for promotion, Mr. Stimson had a notion that a propaganda was afoot in Castle's behalf among newspapermen, senators like Reed of Pennsylvania and Borah of Idaho and others.

Certainly Castle has a host of friends as a result of his long service in the state department. But the Bystander has always doubted that the real moving force behind the selection of Cotten rather than Castle as second in command rested on that basis.

The Cotten appointment was too much in line with the similar Kellogg selection of R. E. Olds, his former law partner, as his undersecretary and with the ad interim naming of Reuben Clark, Utah lawyer, to the post after Olds quit and the Dwight Morrow diplomatic era dawned.

In Secretary Hughes' day the undersecretaryship was reserved for foreign service career men like Henry Fletcher and Joe Grew.

Hughes seemed to feel entirely competent to handle all legal angles himself and also to keep his department in touch with banking and other interests in the country that are peculiarly interested in state department policies.

The shift back to experienced lawyers rather than experienced diplomats for second in command came when Kellogg took over as secretary.

Call Bill

Be all this as it may, Bill Castle was acting secretary of state for a large part of the summer.

Cotten was off about his own affairs from early in June with no expectation of a return to his Washington desk until October.

Stimson also fled from the heat of Washington and most of the other assistant secretaries took a breather.

The state department appeared to have adopted the slogan, "Let Bill do it."

YOUR HEALTH

Taking The Ax Out Of Laxatives

By Gordon Abbott, M. D., Elgin, Ill.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Nine thousand persons were murdered in the United States in 1928.

During the same year, almost 12,000 died because they were given or took laxatives in the presence of abdominal pain.

Pain warns but it also protects; it is to the body what the red light is to traffic. Abdominal pain means do nothing until you have consulted a physician—do not give castor oil, calomel, citrate of magnesia, epsom or rochelle salt, or any other laxative before calling a physician. Printed on the labels of the foregoing should be the words "to be taken only in the absence of abdominal pain."

Do not attempt to diagnose; even a physician may make mistakes and he frequently does so because of what you have done before he arrives.

At the present time we are continuously and advisedly warned about the increase in deaths from cancer, but four times as many persons die from appendicitis as from cancer during the productive period of their lives—before the age of 50.

Judicious advertising regarding the use and abuse of laxatives will save hundreds of live and they will be saved when they mean most to their family, the community and the nation.

Do your bit. Tell your husband or wife. Warn your friends or neighbors. Ask your druggist to post a warning. Arrange for your family physician to speak before your community clubs. Save a Life.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Impy Meets a Cousin

Such friends we have as we may make;
Our relatives we have to take.
—Striped Chipmunk.

Despite the warning he had received from his father, Striped Chipmunk, Impy the black Chipmunk persisted in staying out later than any of the others of his family. He liked to be out after the coming of the Black Shadows. You see, owing to that black coat of his, he felt very safe then. He felt that he couldn't be seen and so had little to fear. Quite naturally, he knew very little about the night-seeing folk, the ones who like best to hunt at night. He knew nothing about eyes made for seeing in the dark. Sometimes he himself could see very little by the time he went to bed. He didn't know that there were others who could see very well at that hour. To be sure, Striped Chipmunk had told him about the Owl family, but never having seen a member of the Owl family, he couldn't understand about those wonderful night-seeing eyes.

Up overhead he saw the first little stars begin to twinkle

As a rule, Impy did not venture far from the entrance to his home after the coming of the Black Shadows. He usually sat where he could dive right into that entrance at the first alarm. Once in a while, however, when he felt a little bolder than usual, he would venture farther away from home when the first of the Black Shadows came creeping across the Green Meadows. He really wasn't far away. At least, you wouldn't have thought it far. But it was far enough so that in case of danger he would have to scamper a little way before he could dive to safety between the stones of the old wall.

Now, of course, the wise and proper thing would have been for Impy to start for home as soon as that first Black Shadow reached the old stone wall. But he didn't. He waited for a second Black Shadow to come, and then a third and a fourth. Up overhead he saw the first little stars begin to twinkle. He doubted if his brothers and sisters had ever seen a twinkling star. He felt very bold and very brave.

"I'm not afraid," said he to himself. "I don't see why people should be afraid just because it is dark. Why, I have never had a single real scare after the coming of the Black Shadows. I suppose that those Owls that my father told me about are dangerous; but I guess if I watch out I needn't worry about them."

Just then there was a little soft thump almost beside Impy. It was so unexpected that he almost lost his balance. He did start to run when a voice said, "What is your hurry, Cousin?"

Impy stopped. Any one who called him Cousin could hardly be dangerous. He looked. There was a member of the Squirrel family not so very much bigger than himself. Cautiously, Impy took a step nearer. "Who are you?" he asked.

"One of your cousins," replied the little stranger. "I am Timmy the Flying Squirrel."

"The what?" cried Impy.

Timmy chuckled. "The Flying Squirrel," said he.

"Do you really fly?" cried Impy, opening his eyes very wide.

"No," said he, chuckling again. "A lot of people think I do, but I don't. You see, I haven't real wings, and how can one fly without wings? By the way, are you a Chipmunk?"

"Certainly. Of course I'm a Chipmunk. I'm just as much a Chipmunk as any other Chipmunk, only I have a black coat," replied Impy.

He Was a House Dog

Billy had a new puppy. One day his uncle was visiting him and noticed that the box the dog slept in was on the back porch.

"Why don't you put his box in the garage?" Billy's uncle asked him.

"Oh, we couldn't put him in the garage," replied Billy, "because the man told us he was a house dog!"

At Last—A Reason

Ralph, age six, was puzzled because his teacher had gone to summer school.

"Where did you say Miss X went?" he asked. "To school?"

"Yes, she went to school," replied his mother for the second time.

"Do teachers have to go to school?" he asked with astonishment.

"Oh, yes, teachers go to school almost every summer."

TURK STUDIES U. S. FARMS TO BENEFIT OWN COUNTRY

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.—(AP)—American methods of farming soon are to be introduced in Turkey.

Ali Nouman, who has been studying agriculture in this country for the last two and one-half years under orders from the Turkish government, is here awaiting orders to return and put into practice what he has learned here.

"Turkey needs an irrigation system," says Nouman. "We established our capital in the midst of a very dry section in the most inaccessible part of the country. Throughout this section irrigation is particularly needed."

When Nouman arrived in New York city, accompanied by his wife and infant son, three years ago, he was unable to speak any English except "yes" and "no." After studying English for five months in the east, he spent a year each at Kansas State Agricultural college and the University of Nebraska studying agriculture.

Rooster "Mothers" Brood

HENDERSONVILLE, N. C.—(AP)—Having hatched five of seven eggs abandoned by a hen, a bantam rooster belonging to T. Pattillo, farmer near here, is now performing the duties of a mother, clucking, scratching and hovering.

A study looking into causes of street car and bus traffic accidents showed that more than 20 per cent. of street car and bus operators are "prone-to-accident" men.

The Ideal of a Craftsman

In every age men have striven with untiring patience for the achievement of an ideal. The name "STRADIVARIUS" on a violin immortalizes a master craftsman who lived true to his ideals.

Making a cigar of the finest quality was the ideal upon which in 1874, at Manchester, N. H., Roger G. Sullivan—starting with one cigar maker—founded 7-20-4. Today because of its ideal quality, 7-20-4 has grown to the largest hand-made cigar industry in the World.

Quality workmanship and the finest tobaccos are traditional with 7-20-4. The unswerving tenet of its founder—to keep faith with the public—has remained unchanged for over half a century. It is this firm principle which today refuses to alter that method of manufacture which has made 7-20-4 Cigar—FAMOUS FOR ITS CHOICE QUALITY.

AMOS-ANDY SIGN FOR 5 YEARS MORE; GET $75,000 RAISE

CHICAGO (AP)—Freeman Gosden and Charles J. Correll have signed a new radio contract said to call for more than a million dollars salary in five years.

Gosden and Correll—but maybe it would be better to refer to them as Amos 'n' Andy—thus have reached a high pinnacle in broadcasting in a little more than six years.

Announcement of the new contract followed closely upon reports that their first year on the National Broadcasting company chain had been so successful that they would be on until 1931. Now the time has been extended, with a salary said to average $200,000 a year on a sliding scale.

It was in 1925 that the two got their particular idea of producing radio laughs. They tried it out first on WGN as Sam 'n' Henry, then went to WMAQ as Amos 'n' Andy, and finally attracted attention of chain officials.

The new salary will give them about $75,000 a year raise, it is believed.

SUPER-SENSITIVE SCALES CAN WEIGHT DOT OF AN I

BERLIN (AP)—Medieval alchemists had scales so fine that "a hair of the prophet's beard would turn them," but the latest German "ultra-micro scales" are such marvels of precision that they register the weight of a dot on the i—without exaggeration. These scales are correct to one-ten millionth part of a gram.

As an experiment, ten i-dots were made in ink on a tiny bit of aluminium foil, and they were found to weigh between 2 and 3 millionth parts of a gram each. The indicator needle is so fine that its variations have to be observed through a magnifying glass. A short human hair weighed 0.00005 gram, or about 20 times as heavy as an i-dot.

SAYS UNIVERSE RADIUS OVER 9 SEXTILLION MILES

WASHINGTON (AP)—The radius of the universe has been placed at about 9,500,000,000,000,000,000,000 miles.

That is the calculation sent to the National Academy of Sciences by Prof. Wilhelm De Sitter of the University of Leyden, Holland, one of the world's foremost mathematician-astronomers.

It is based on the velocities of spiral nebulae, or island universes, as measured by the Mount Wilson observatory of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

Geologists have stated the district where the flume was found once abounded in plant life.

NORWICH OWNED SCOUT CAMP ADVOCATED AT WAKENAH DINNER

Mayor Lee Roy Robbins and a number of Norwich citizens, interested in Boy Scout work were guests at Camp Wakenah, Gardner Lake, Tuesday evening. The camp, one of the finest Boy Scout camps in eastern Connecticut, is owned by the New London Scout council, who have for several years welcomed the Boy Scouts of Norwich to share the camp facilities with the New London Scouts.

Scout Executive John L. Sellman of Norwich arranged for the party which left for Camp Wakenah at 5:30 o'clock. The members of the party were: Mayor Lee Roy Robbins, William Williams, Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd, D. D., pastor of Park Congregational church, National Scout Commissioner Arthur L. Peale, Rev. George Warren Potter, Max Hanover, Leroy Duff, John Tarrant, Arthur F. Wyman, Wilbur Wyman, Walter Weidman.

The visitors were received by Scout Executive Frederick Burdick and William D. Harris of the New London camp committee and were shown around the camp site and buildings. At 6:30 o'clock a camp dinner was served, consisting of the following menu: Beef a la mode, camp style, mashed potatoes, green peas, green corn on cob, cranberry sauce, brown gravy, tapioca pudding, apple butter, rye and white camp bread, coffee and milk. The dinner was greatly enjoyed by the guests who praised the ability of Joseph Dallas, who has served for eight years as chef of Camp Wakenah.

At the conclusion of the dinner Scout Executive Sellman called on Wilbur Williams, chairman of the Norwich Scout camp committee, for a few remarks. Mr. Williams thanked the New London Scout council for their neighborliness and their hospitality towards the Boy Scouts of Norwich who for several years have spent their summer vacations at the camp. Scout Executive Burdick welcomed the Norwich guests and called on Camp Committeeman William D. Harris for a response from New London. Mr. Harris, who is a great friend of the boys, expressed his delight at being able to make the Norwich boys feel at home at the New London camp and added that this was also the sentiment of the New London council. The speaker said that the camp is being conducted for the benefit of the boys, all facilities, service, food and other supplies being furnished at less than cost. He also emphasized the fact that last year the expenditures in camp exceeded the income by $600 and that this year the executive committee will probably have to make good another deficit. He closed by saying that all the effort and the expenditures in camp are more than worthwhile for the great moral and physical benefit gained by the boys.

At a round table discussion in which several of the Norwich guests participated, the opinion was voiced that a Boy Scout camp is a nucleus around which scout activities revolve. It was the consensus of the gathering that the scout movement in Norwich is at a great disadvantage because of the lack of a Norwich owned scout camp and that the scout executive in Norwich has a double problem in conducting boys' activities without having a camp which Norwich boys could call their own.

Mayor Robbins presented Camp Wakenah five pounds of marshmallows which was greatly appreciated by the camp leaders and the boys. At 7:30 o'clock the guests witnessed "Retreat." A 9 o'clock the boys attended camp fire under the leadership of Scout Executives Frederick Burdick and John Sellman, with the guests witnessing the events. Mr. Sellman led the boys in the Camp Wakenah Scout yell and also in a song, All the Joys of Camp. Several troops put on clever and enjoyable stunts, one of which was a mock boxing bout between a short stocky boy and a tall, lean boy. It was a real comedy. Whenever the referee stepped in to separate the boxers he was knocked down to the delight of all. Rev. Dr. Shipherd of Norwich addressed the boys, giving them a resume of his visit to Norwich, England. Rev. Dr. Shipherd's talk was both interesting and instructive and was enthusiastically applauded.

There are at present 47 boys stopping at the camp and this summer 147 boys have enjoyed the facilities of Camp Wakenah.

The Benjamin cottages, eight in all, are occupied by the following: Mrs. James Donahue, from Rutherford, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Siebert and Mr. and Mrs. Porter, from Kensington, Conn.; Dr. and Mrs. Harrison Gray, of Norwich, and their nieces, Miss Irene Ashley of Danielson, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Houghton, Norwich; Mrs. Paul Jones and son, Newark, N. J., also Miss Julia Love and Miss Hilderbrand of the Porteous and Mitchell store, Norwich; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stanley and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith, of Norwich, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stebbins of Greeneville.

Has Long Indian Name

The lake, though it is not known by many, bears the old Indian name of Anchemanconnuck, meaning "Big left hand water." There are three privately owned cottages which are occupied, so including the numerous fishing parties it is very pleasant and lively about here this month.

FARMERS STORING WHEAT TO AWAIT HIGHER PRICES

A total of 181 warehouses, bonded by the state board of agriculture, are bulging with grain, and in addition, a score of federal bonded warehouses are filled to capacity. Approximately 500,000 bushels of last year's wheat still remains in the warehouses, farmers refusing to sell it on a declining market.

Few farmers are selling their entire wheat crop at the present low prices, the state agricultural officials say. Many are keeping the grain in shocks in the fields expecting a better price before threshing.

Life Was a Misery

"Before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was weak and run-down, could not sleep and had troubles which come at my age (forty-three). Life was a misery. Nothing did me any good until I tried the Vegetable Compound. I am on my third bottle and I cannot recommend it too highly. I feel like a new person and I really think I would have been dead if I had not taken it. I think every lady ought to take it at the Change."—Mrs. Eunice M. DARKNESS HALTS IDEALS-THERMOS TILT WITH SCORE DEADLOCKED AT 3-ALL

The Thermos and Ideals played another ball game at the campus last night but did not gain or lose an inch in the City league race. After six innings of play, each of which was jammed full of sweet baseball, Hank Morin called the game because of darkness and the score was deadlocked at 3-all.

Mike Nickerson and Buck Shahan, the latter pride of the Montville Dusty league, hooked up in a pitchers' duel and might still be at it but for the fact that Hank intervened. Buck allowed 6 hits and Nickerson gave five. The Ideal artist, however, had a slight edge in the matter of strikeouts, whiffing five against Nickerson's four.

After two scoreless innings both clubs counted once in the third. The Ideals forged into the lead with a counter in the early fourth and in the fifth the Bottlers went in front with a two run rally. Their lead was not for long, however, as Bernard's pets knotted the count in the early sixth. In their half of the inning the members of the Hastedt-Driscoll combine made a gallant attempt to win the game but a fast double play nipped it. With one away Bill Liberty got a life on Decelles error. Nickerson, the next hitter drove one to Shahan, who tossed to second for the second out and the Thermos pitcher was doubled off first.

The inning previous Carlie Krauss, Thermos shortstop, manuevered a double play, equally as good. With one away he went dep into left to take Decelles' fly and then doubled Buck Shahan off second.

The leading hitters for the night were Normandin and N. Lemieux of the Thermos and Nap Liberty of the Ideals. Each had two hits, one of Normandin's being a double. The score:

Third Place at Stake Tonight

Third place in the City league race is the stake that the Italians and Royals will battle for at the Academy campus tonight. Both clubs have won seven games and lost six and as a result go to work this evening tied all the way around. The victor gets the berth all by its lonesome and closes in on the heels of the Thermos Bottlers, who trail the leading Cits by a single game.

The Italians, who but a few weeks ago were well down the ladder, are in the midst of a sensational winning streak. Since taking on a bit of additional strength they have won three in a row and are confident of taking the Panekmen this evening.

The Royals on the other hand are equally as certain that they have gotten rid of all of their bad baseball and are due to start winning again. Either Eddie Nevins or Tommy Simcox will work for the Polish tonight and Lefty Lucier will be the probable choice of the Italians.

ROTARY CLUB TIES FOR LEAD IN JUNIOR LEAGUE

The Rotary club moved up into a tie with the Duwells for the Junior league leadership last night when they blanked the P. N. A. C. 19 to 0. Both the Duwells and Rotary have won seven games and lost but one, and when these two teams meet next week, all indications point to a great game.

In last night's game, it was merely a question as to how large the score would be after the first inning. The Rotary scored almost at will, counting in every inning, five in the first and second, one in the third and fourth, three in the fifth and four in the sixth.

While the Rotary were piling up runs, Deschamps was holding down the Polish nine to two scattered hits and at no time was there any danger of a score against him.

Austin featured with the stick, collecting four hits out of four times at bat for a perfect day.

Elks vs. Italians Tonight.

Tonight, the Elks and Italian club meet in the Junior league in a postponed game. These two teams played a 3 to 3 tie game a short time ago so another good game should be in store for tonight. The Elks, still fighting for the league leadership, are out to win tonight and will have their strongest lineup for the fray. The Italians however, are sure to furnish plenty of opposition so the Elks will know they have been in a game at least. Probable batteries are Burelle and Angelone for the Italian club and Fuller and Dugas for the Elks. The game is scheduled for 6:30 p. m. sharp.

ENO PITCHES NO-HIT GAME AGAINST PLAINFIELD

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Aug. 19—Walter Eno, of Moosup, pitched a no-hit game against Plainfield here tonight in the Eastern Conn. Twilight league but still was not returned the winner as Clocher, Plainfield twirler, also was in good form. He allowed but two hits and the final count showed a scoreless tie in five innings.

Eno's work was well nigh a masterpiece for he also fanned eight men. Clocher struck out six.

Plainfield plays at Sterling Wednesday evening. Plainfield, Sterling and Moosup each have two postponed games to play and Wauregan has one. The score:

GOSLIN LEADS BROWNS TO VICTORY OVER ATHLETICS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 19—(AP)—With Goose Goslin equalling the world's record of hitting three home runs in one game and on successive times at bat, the St. Louis Browns took the final of the three-game series with the Athletics here today by a score of 7 to 0.

Goslin hit his first home run off Rube Walberg in the fifth inning. In the seventh he hit his second off Eddie Rommel and in the ninth his third, the last with one man on base and accounting for his fifth run driven in. All of Goslin's smashes were hard blows over the right field fence. The score:

RUFFING BLANKS WHITE SOX WITH TWO SCATTERED HITS

NEW YORK, Aug. 19—(AP)—Charley Ruffing's two hit pitching, backed up by Babe Ruth's brilliant fielding, enabled the Yankees to score a 3 to 0 victory over the Chicago White Sox today and make it three out of four for the final series between the two teams.

Ruth played a great game in the field and his two timely hits helped the Yanks score two of their runs. The third came on Kerr's error. Pat Caraway pitched a good game for Chicago and was only one run behind up to the eighth.

Bill Cissell made both White Sox hits, one a double. He was the only Chicago player to reach third base. The score:

INDIANS TAKE BOTH GAMES FROM RED SOX

BOSTON, Aug. 19—(AP)—Wesley Ferrell became the most victorious of American league pitchers here today, by winning his 21st victory of the season at the expense of the Boston Red Sox in the first game of a double header. Cleveland won both games, 7 to 2, and 7 to 3.

After the experienced Ferrell had pitched his mates to victory in the first game an inexperienced rookie, Lawson, performed the same feat for the Indians in the nightcap.

Morgan drove in four runs for Cleveland in the first game and the timely hitting of Averill and Porter were telling factors in the second. The score:

MISS MARLOWE SURPRISES BY BEATING MISS GOSS

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 19—(AP)—Eighteen-year-old Helen Marlowe, of Los Angeles led the California delegation to a series of brilliant victories in the second round of the national women's tennis championship today.

Scoring the first upset of the tournament, she eliminated the veteran New York player, Eleanor Goss, 7-5, 8-6, to gain a place in the third round.

Despite the absence of their two leading players, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and Helen Jacobs, the Californians placed seven of their number among the 16 survivors today. Only two players from California met defeat.

Other sections did not fare so well. The eastern representatives dwindled from fifteen to four, the middle west's representation fell off four to two and the south from two to one.

The foreign contingent, consisting of Betty Nuthall of England and the Baroness Georgio Giacomo Levi of Italy came through with smashing straight set victories. Miss Nuthall defeated Mrs. Ary J. Lamme of Rye, N. Y., 6-1, 6-1.

GIANTS TAKE SECOND PLACE IN NAT. LOOP

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 19—(AP)—The New York Giants moved into second place in the National league today a half game ahead of the Brooklyn Robins, by taking a hard fought game from the Cardinals, 4 to 2, while Brooklyn was losing to Pittsburgh.

The Giants piled up an early lead by scoring three runs in the second inning, then held off the Cardinal assaults by good fielding and some steady pitching in the late innings by Carl Hubbell.

Hubbell drove in the first two Giant runs with a single, coming up after Ott and Hogan had started the inning with singles and Roettger had been purposely passed. Critz's sacrifice sent in the third tally. The fourth Giant run was scored in the seventh on doubles by Leach and Lindstrom.

St. Louis tallied in the third and threatened to take the lead in the fourth but was held to a single run as fine throws to the plate by Ott and Roettger cut off counters. The Cards made three hits and received two walks in this frame

Lindstrom led the Giant hitters with two doubles and two singles in five times at bat. The score:

SWETONIC ALLOWS DODGERS BUT SIX HITS AND NO RUNS

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 19—(AP)—Steve Swetonic pitched his first full game of the season for the Pirates today and scored a shutout victory over the Brooklyn Robins, 5 to 0. Pittsburgh won three of the five games in the series.

Swetonic allowed only six hits and only one Brooklyn runner reached third. Ray Phelps, who started for the Robins, lasted only two innings. Elliott and Moss finished.

A hit batsman, a triple and a sacrifice started the Pirates off to a two run lead in the first inning. They added three more tallies in the second on a triple, a double, a single and a sacrifice. Faced by this lead, the Robins played listless ball and threatened only in the fifth when they filled the bases with one out. The score:

PLENTY OF ACTION THRILLS CROWD AT DANIELSON AMATEUR BOUTS

DANIELSON, Aug. 19—A gallery of fight fans sat out under the stars and clouds tonight to watch a card of amateur bouts at the North street open air arena. In the opening affair Battling Smalzey, Jewett City, 106 pounds, won a decision over Young Lasch, Danielson, 104. This was a fine fast go. A boy named Soup Marion, Jewett City, 104, apparently knowing no rules about the game except roughhouse and wrestling lost to Kid Brouillard, Danielson, 104, in the second round after the referee would stand for no more of Soup's rough-house tactics.

In the third bout Anselm Bernier of Danielson, 126, won a decision over Mickey Tenzar, Jewett City, 128, by a knockout in the second round.

Charles Boulet, 126, of Putnam, had to go fast and did, to beat Kid Frisco, of Webster, 128 pounds in perhaps the most interesting bout of the evening. The fans who come here will be glad to see this pair in action again.

Arthur Miller, 176, Jewett City started out fast against the apparently invincible Russell Martin, 159, of Webster, who has won all of his fights here. Miller has all the appearances of an old-timer and is more or less classy. It went great guns for about two minutes until a couple of socks from Martin laid Miller low but he was game and came back for more but finally went down for a kayo in the second round. Ray Landry, 126, Danielson, paired in the final bout against Young Plasse, 128, of Webster. Landry bored in and fought as he usually does, always active and willing but the Webster boy was a bit too much for him and won by a decision.

CUBS LOSE ONE AND TIE ANOTHER WITH PHILLIES

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—(AP) — Bert Shotten's Phillies knocked a game from the Cubs' lead over the Giants in the National league pennant race today, winning the first game of a double-header 9 to 8, then battled the National league champions to a standstill in a 16-inning after-piece which was called because of darkness with the score 6-all.

Lester Bell, whose batting has been a big help during the last two days, saved the Cubs from defeat in the second game when he got a home run with two on in the eighth to tie the score. From that point on neither team was able to score.

Fidgety Phil Collins pitched the whole of the second game for the Phillies and gave 16 hits, while Bob Osborn and Guy Bush divided the assignment for the Cubs and gave 15 hits between them.

The contest was the second overtime, no-decision affair of what started out to be a five-game series, the second game of Saturday's double-header having gone to a 3-all tie in 11 innings. Tomorrow being an open date in the schedule for both teams, they will use the day to play off the tie.

Long George Kelly celebrated his first day as a Cub by getting five hits in the second game and a pair in the first.

The big thrill was Hack Wilson's 43rd home run of the season which gave him a tie with Chuck Klein of the Phillies, as holder of the all-time National league mark.

SHIELDS UPSETS DOEG IN NEWPORT TOURNEY

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 19—(AP)—Frank X. Shields, young New York tennis player, today shook off his careless court habits and gave the 14th Annual Newport Casino Invitation Singles tourney its first real upset by defeating Johnny Doeg, the Californian Davis cup player, 6-4, 10-12, 6-2.

For four years Shields has failed to perform up to the expectations of his many admirers but today he climbed to the peak of his career and enacted the iron man role that Big Bill Tilden delighted in playing several years ago when he was at the top of his game.

Shields arrived here this morning, a day late, due to his victorious participation in the Maine singles championship, and was forced to play three matches to catch up with the field, which was reduced to the last 16. He first overcame Brainert Whitbeck of New York, 6-1, 11-9 and then eliminated Donald Strachan, Philadelphia, 6-1, 2-6, 6-3, before meeting Doeg, who was seeded third.

Shields played an all round good game to give the seeded list its first denting. Doeg, who can blame his erratic overhead strokings for his surprising defeat, was effective only in the second set, when he overcame a lead of three games to one and then steadied down to square matters by taking the 22 game set. However, left-handed Johnny had a relapse in the finale, when Shields aced him eight times to four, and bowed gracefully out of the singles play.

SUAREZ KNOCKS OUT FLOWERS IN SIXTH

QUEENSBORO STADIUM, New York, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Justo Suarez, an Argentine with a powerful right and left, knocked out Bruce Flowers, New Rochelle, N. Y., Negro, in the sixth round of their ten-round engagement in the Queensboro stadium tonight to gain his third victory in the United States. Both fighters weighed 136 1-2 pounds.

The end of the one-sided bout came one-minute and five seconds after the sixth round had gotten under way and marked a sudden change in the fighting tactics of the Argentine. After using his right to send the Negro to the mat for a count of nine in the second round and again in the third, Suarez suddenly shifted to a left hook two of which drove his Negro opponent back to the ropes and the third of which put him on the mat for the full count.

The crowd of 14,000, the largest ever to pack its way into the Queensboro bowl, rose as one man to cheer the fighting South American.

She spends countless hours in a hot, stuffy kitchen, struggling to cook food on an old fashioned flame type "cook stove" when for just a few pennies a day electricity will do her cooking.

Today's modern home-makers are no longer slaves to kitchen drudgery — they cook electrically—on HOTPOINT AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC RANGES—the modern way.

A HOTPOINT GENERAL RANGE in your home is like having a maid at no cost. Complete meals cook themselves, though you may be miles away from home all day. Your kitchen is cool, clean and comfortable. There is no soot. There are no fumes. Your cooking utensils remain bright and new.

Come in when you are down town today and let us tell you more about electric cooking

MARKET WAS STRONG IN EARLY HOURS, BUT SAGGED UNDER PROFIT-TAKING

NEW YORK, Aug. 19—(AP)—Encouraged by the resistance to bear selling displayed by the market in recent sessions, professional operators who were bullish by inclination and temperament, launched a new bull campaign in today's stock market, but found traders generally unwilling to follow the advance for more than a quick turn.

Although the market rose vigorously during the major part of the day, recording extreme gains of 2 to 9 points in most of the more prominent issues, there was a rush to take profits at the higher levels, and much of the advance was lost before the close, although several shares were up 2 to 6 net. The price index of 90 leading shares gained only 1 3-5 points, but that was sufficient to cancel the meager net losses of the past two sessions and place the index a fraction above the level reached in Friday's brisk rally. Total sales aggregated 1,561,720 shares, about 450,000 more than yesterday.

An unsettling development late in the session was an estimate of steel mill operations appearing on the financial news tickers indicating another slight decline in production, which was a disappointment, in view of predictions that operations would at least hold steady. Furthermore, fresh unsettlement of the commodity markets did not help the bull cause. Sentiment in Wall street was a little more cheerful in spots, for the stock market has given definite evidence of being sold to a standstill during the past two sessions, and some improvement in business after Labor day is regarded as assured.

Credit conditions remained easy, and gave promise of continuing so. The outflow of gold appears to have been checked, for the time being anyhow, and the yellow metal continues to flow in from South America and Japan. Call money held at 2 1-2 per cent all day, but was plentifully available in the outside market at 2, and some money brokers thought the rate was probably being kept at 2 1-2 at the loan desk for fear a less profitable level might prompt withdrawals of out of town funds. At current rates most dividend paying stocks more than pay carrying charges, so barring any alarming business developments holders are not easily stampeded in selling by bear demonstrations.

Such shares as U. S. Steel, American Can, American Telephone, Radio Corporation, International Harvester and Johns Manville rose 2 points or more, only to lose much of their gains, closing from fractions to a point higher. Radio, an active feature, was up only 1-2 at the close. Vanadium was also turned over in large volume, rising about 4 points. It later lost more than half its rise. Columbian Carbon, in which a Boston operator was said to have taken a long position, rose 5 points only to lose to all but about a point of its gain.

Some confusion was occasioned after the close of the market by a denial issued in Washington by Secretary Mellon of published dispatches from Pittsburgh quoting him as saying that curtailed production of goods would without question result in correcting present conditions within a short time. Mr. Mellon said he had made no comment on business conditions. The dispatch from Pittsburgh had been widely quoted in Wall street, and hailed as a bullish factor by speculators for the rise.

Case rose 8, then reacted to close only 2 3-4 higher. Allied Chemical gained 9, and was up 6 at the finish.

Tobaccos were strong for a time, but American Tobacco B, after gaining 4, lost all but a fraction. Some of the utilities maintained their gains fairly well, as did some of the rails. North American, New York Central and New Haven closed about 2 points higher. Eastman Kodak was a firm feature, closed 5 higher, at the top. Fox Film rose 3 points on its earnings statement, wiping out yesterday's net loss, but it later slipped back 1 3-8 from the top.

In the commodity markets, cotton sagged to new lows, then rallied to close 10 cents to $1.10 a bale higher, cancelling about a third of yesterday's loss. Grains were firm for a time, but bearish weather reports were unsettling, and wheat closed about unchanged, and corn about a cent lower.

In the foreign exchanges, sterling cables sagged 1-16 to $4.87 1-16, and the Canadian dollar lost its premium for the first time since July 8. The Brazilian milreis sagged to a new low, while the Spanish peseta rallied.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 19—(AP)—New rainfalls tending to alleviate corn crop distress did much today to pull all grain values down. Despite estimates that North American wheat export business today totaled 2,000,000 bushels, wheat prices temporarily went to within 1-2c of the season's lowest point, and oats reached a fresh bottom level. Under heavy stop loss selling, the corn market dropped to 11 3-8 cents a bushel below recent top figures.

Closing quotations on corn were nervous, 3-8a1 1-8c off as compared with yesterday's finish. Wheat closed irregular at 1-4c net decline to 1-2c advance, with oats 3-8a7-8c down, but provisions showing 2a1-2c advance.

Provisions reflected the circumstance that hog values were the highest today since March, and that cash interests and investors were buying.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Operations for the advance were resumed in popular trading issues on the curb market today, in sympathy with fresh bull activity on the big board, but the advance met with some opposition, and failed to attract a notable following, the day's transfers aggregating only 400,400 shares.

The oil shares were not traded very actively, but generally rallied on private advices from the mid-continent fields that recent apprehensions of a cut in crude prices were unduly pessimistic. Crude oil output was reduced further last week, to the lowest level in recent years. Gulf rallied 3, and Cosden 2 points. Cities Service was an active feature, contrary to dullness elsewhere in the group, and mounted 3-4 to 27 3-4, closing at 27 1-2. Vacuum moved up a fraction, Humble sagged a point in dull trading.

In the utilities, Electric Bond and Share was turned over in heavy volume, rising 2 points to get above 80, only to close at up 1. American and Foreign Power warrants rallied 3, and American Light and Traction, United Light A, Middle West, and St. Regis were firm. American Gas was off a fraction at the finish.

Some of the natural gas issues were active and firm, although gains were limited to fractions. Operations for the advance were resumed in Appalachian, which got above 10. Sponsors of the stock are optimistic as to its prospects, since Texas subsidiaries have been placed on a paying basis. Missouri Kansas Pipe Line and United Gas also moved ahead in active trading, on optimistic expectations for large pipe lines now under construction.

A feature of the industrials was Deere, which jumped 9 points, and closed up 7. Dresser Manufacturing A, rose 3 points. Durant Motors rose 1 1-2 points to 4 1-2, on announcement that W. C. Durant had returned to the presidency, and plans to manufacture the French Mathis car were being completed. National Rubber Machinery again was firm, gaining 2. American Cyanamid B, and Ford, Ltd., were active, gaining fractionally.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Domestic bonds were extensively accumulated today, with best gains by railroad and industrial issues. Although there was a slightly firmer tendency in outside call money there was no slackening in the inquiry from institutional sources, and the gains of the day carried the market to a new high for the year in the averages.

Some issues which reached new peaks in the previous session backslid as holders took their profits. However, bond men report that many are anticipating further appreciation on fixed income securities now in their strong boxes. The dearth of some issues is reflected in the sharp rises which occur on thin sales.

Atchison general 4s, which is heavily held by savings banks and insurance companies erased its former high price on the day's movement. Kansas City Southern Terminal 4s, Missouri Kansas, and Texas 4s, B, Northern Railway of California, Rio Grande and Western 4s, Rutland 4 1-2s, Northern Pacific 4 1-2 and Lehigh Valley 4s, registered new highs with gains averaging a point. Southern Railway 6 1-2s, Union Pacific first 4s, and Jersey Central 5s were conspicuous in the upward movement. Profit taking depressed Western Maryland 5s, St. Paul Union Depot 5s, Canadian National 4 1-2s and St. Paul general 4 1-2s. Cuba Railways continued steadily downhill, dropping 5 1-4 points to reach another new low for 1930.

The bullish trend of equity issues carried stock privilege bonds upward. Atchison 4 1-2s and St. Paul 5s advanced a point each and several other rail utility and amusement obligations appreciated.

The market in utility issues was thin, and bonds of telephone, gas and electric companies moved narrowly. Metropolitan Edison 4 1-2s and Southern Bell Telephone 5s reached new peaks. There was a good market for Brooklyn Manhattan Transit sinking fund 6s. Others were steady to firm.

While the movement of the industrial list was highly irregular, highest grade issues continue to narrow the gap separating them from market leaders, in rails and utilities. Lorillard 5 1-2s, American Smelting 5s established new 1930 highs, and Western Electric 5s and Philadelphia gold 5s, sold at their best figures of the year. Weak spots were Vertientes Sugar 7s, and American Ice 5s, which settled to new lows, the latter on a 4 point loss. Wheeling Steel 4 1-2s yielded 2 points.

Foreign issues were somewhat more active, and narrowly irregular. Royal Dutch warrant 4s made another new high. German International 5 1-2s were firm. Japan 4s, an inactive issue, was strong, while Brazilian government issues weakened. Rio De Janeiro 6 1-2s climbed 2 1-2 points. Several municipal and industrial issues profited from good buying.

U. S. governments were steady in light trading.

Offering will be made tomorrow of $1,660,000 4 1-2 per cent equipment trust certificates of the Central Railroad company, of New Jersey.

The city of Bergen, Norway, plans the sale of $2 680,000 thirty-year 5 per cent gold bonds and will retire the outstanding portion of an 8 per cent issue, of which $4,000,000 were originally marketed.

Paul Robinson

NORTH STERLING

Miss Elsie La Fantasie of Riverside, R. I., spent the week end with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip La Fantasie, of Brooklyn, were callers at the home of W. R. Spooner, Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hansen are entertaining Mrs. Hansen's mother from Brooklyn, N. Y.

It was so pleasant that George Dobson of Clark township, N. J., parked his car under a shady tree and went to sleep in the front seat. When he woke up and started to drive away, the car kind of skittered along the road. Somebody had come along while he was sleeping and stole all the tires off his machine.

Procrastination may also be the thief of a good time.

POETRY

Song of the New World

I sing the song of a new dawn waking,
A new wind shaking the children of men.
I say the hearts that are nigh to breaking
Shall leap with gladness and live again.
Over the woe of the world, appalling,
Wild and sweet as a bugle cry,
Sudden I hear a new voice calling—
"Beauty is nigh!"

Beauty is nigh! Let the world believe it,
Love has covered the fields of dead.
Healing is here! Let the earth receive it,
Greeting the dawn with lifted head.
I sing the song of the sin forgiven,
The deed forgotten, the wrong undone.
Lo, in the east, where the dark is riven,
Shines the rim of the rising sun.

Healing is here! O brother, sing it!
Laugh, O heart, that has grieved so long.
Love will gather your woe and fling it
Over the world in waves of song.
Hearken, mothers, and hear them coming—
Heralds crying the day at hand.
Faint and far as the sound of drumming,
Hear their summons across the land.

Look, O fathers! Your eyes are holden—
Armies throng where the dead have lain.
Fiery steeds and chariots golden—
Gone is the dream of soldiers slain.
Sing, O sing of a new world waking,
Sing of creation just begun.
Glad is the earth when morn is breaking—
Man is facing the rising sun!
—Angela Morgan

Lament Of Sunday Morn

I know not whether I be right
Or whether I be wrong;
All that I know is what I sing,
And this is all my song:
To rise at six on Sunday morn
Makes Sunday very long.

And this I know, that six A. M.
Is not the time to chat
Of where the puppy slept last night,
Or whither roamed the cat.
The time is most inopportune
For talk of this and that.

Let him who has not suffered thus
My drowsy mourning mock—
Perchance his inexperience may
This mystery unlock;
Why little boys on Sunday morn
Wake up at six o'clock.

NEW LONDON PLANS FORMAL WELCOME FOR SIR THOMAS LIPTON ON ARRIVAL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 19—Sir Thomas Lipton, owner of the Shamrock V., challenger for the America's cup, whose racer is being refitted at the plant of the Electric Boat company, Groton, preparatory to her races with either the Enterprise or Weetamoe off Newport next month, is scheduled to arrive in New London tomorrow where he will remain until Saturday when his plans call for the yatchsman to go to Newport. Lipton in New York will board the Erin, his steam yacht, tonight or tomorrow forenoon and come to port to see the racer. Lipton not having laid eyes on the yacht since she left the other side, over six weeks ago. A committee consisting of city officials, members of the chamber of commerce, and the Rotary and Lions' clubs has been formulated as a reception committee to give Sir Thomas a hearty welcome. An endeavor today was made to ascertain the anticipated hour of arrival of Lipton, but without success.

The work of stepping the yacht's mast has been completed and the boat today received a coat of paint. It is expected that tomorrow the Shamrock V. will again take the water after which she will have several trial trips on Long Island and Long Island Sound. Yesterday when the Shamrock V. was hauled out on the ways, yachtsmen an a throng of curious citizens had the opportunity of viewing the boat's underbody. Shamrock V. is a cross between the American boats, Enterprise and Weetamoe, one of which is almost sure to be the defender in the cup races. Shamrock seems to be much chunkier, and in fact much smaller than the American boats, but actually she is not, the appearance resulting from the way she is painted. The Shamrock V. actually is a foot narrower in the beam than the Enterprise and six inches narrower than the Weetamoe. The profile of the Lipton boat's keel is a compromise between Enterprise and Weetamoe, having a little less fore-foot than the former and being less straight from bow to stern pos than the latter. Her entrance is not as sharp as Enterprise's, but sharper than Weetamoe's. It was observed that the bulk of Shamrock's displacement seems to be father aft than is the case with the other boats. The mast appears to be heavier than the sticks in the American boats, but this impression may be altered when the rigging is completed. The staying is rather more complicated than is the case with the American racers.

DON'T be misled into thinking this is "just a habit". Often it is not a habit at all, but is due to worms. They are much more common than most mothers think.

STEAMER BLOCK ISLAND TO BE BURNED THIS WEEK

The steamer Block Island, which was ordered out of commission in 1915 after many years of service for the New England Navigation Co. in waters of this vicinity, will end its days this week when it will be set afire by employes of the navigation company. The vessel is one of the oldest excursion boats in southern New England and was used years ago taking passengers from Norwich to Block Island.

Since she has been out of commission the excursion boat has been tied up at the New England Navigation company's pier in Newport harbor and has been used as a boarding house and mess hall for ship crews. During its 15 years of non-service the boat has become a familiar sight to excursionists bound for Block Island from Newport and its passing will bring an end to a relic of old excursion days.

CORONER HOLDS BOGUE CRIMINALLY RESPONSIBLE FOR AXE SLAYING

By a finding made public late Tuesday afternoon Coroner Edward G. McKay holds Stanley Smith Bogue, 34, criminally responsible for the double slaying at Mystic a week ago of Mrs. Eva Jennings Roberts, 52, and Ole Ostberg, 63. The man and woman were murdered by an axe which, it is charged, was wielded by Bogue.

The double murder occurred Saturday night, August 9, in the kitchen of Mrs. Roberts' home in a lane between the Boston Post road and what is known as Buddington road. The victims died from fractured skulls received when they were hit by the axe.

Bogue, who attempted to commit suicide by slashing his wrists with a razor blade, shortly after the double slaying, is held without bond at the Franklin street jail, New London, on charges of murder. His case will come up for hearing within a few days in the Groton town court before Prosecutor Harry Brogan. David Roberts, husband of the slain woman, and James Collins, a boarder at the rooming house run by Mrs. Roberts, who have also been confined at the jail without bonds as material witnesses in the case, have been ordered released.

Eva Jennings Roberts was the wife of Medrick Roberts at the time of her decease. Mrs. Roberts had married twice. Her first husband was Eugene Jennings and seven children were born to them. Mr. Jennings died and she later married Mr. Roberts. There were no children of this latter marriage. Roberts had been married before but was divorced by his wife.

The married life of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts was not happy, due to the fault of both of them. Mr. Roberts frequently became intoxicated and served time as a result. Mrs. Roberts became interested in other men. Eventually they ceased to live together as man and wife and continued in this relation for about five years.

Stanley Bogue became acquainted with the Roberts family about 1921. At this time he was a chum of one of Mrs. Roberts' sons. He came to live with them as a roomer and boarder and stayed about two years. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts were living together then and there was no improper relation between Bogue and Mrs. Roberts.

Bogue returned to the Roberts household after Mr. and Mrs. Roberts discontinued living together. Mrs. Roberts was nominally Bogue's housekeeper but actually they lived together as man and wife. Bogue became infatuated with Mrs. Roberts and was exceedingly jealous of her casual acquaintance with other people.

About in May of this year, Mrs. Roberts and Bogue moved to the Benjamin farm in Mystic. They occupied a small house on the farm adjacent to the homestead. Bogue hired the place and paid the rent; Mrs. Roberts took care of the house and the meals. Mr. Roberts came to live in the big house and took his meals at the house where Bogue and Mrs. Roberts lived. One of Mrs. Roberts' sons lived there also. About a month ago they took another roomer named James Collins.

Sometime in the early part of July of this year, Ole Ostberg came to visit at the small house. He and Mrs. Roberts became interested in each other. Bogue resented these attentions and told Ostberg not to come to see Mrs. Roberts. He also berated Mrs. Bogue for paying attention to Ostberg. Ostberg worked in Mystic and came to see Mrs. Roberts occasionally.

Bogue showed his displeasure at these attentions on many occasions. He became very angry at Mrs. Roberts on one occasion and struck her. On another occasion, he broke a number of phonograph records, tore his clothes, tore her clothes, and damaged some of the furniture. On occasions he stated that he would beat up Ostberg if he did not stay away from Mrs. Roberts.

On Friday, August 8th, the night before the tragedy, Mrs. Roberts met Ostberg and went to a house in Mystic. They remained there all night drinking and carousing. They were at that house until about 5:30 on Saturday afternoon, August 9th. At that time they were put out of the house by a policeman. They were intoxicated and started for Mrs. Roberts' home. Ostberg had some liquor with him as they went toward home.

Bogue in the meantime had stayed at home. He went down to Mystic Friday night to go to a show with friends. He was looking for Mrs. Roberts while he was in Mystic that night but did not see her. He was up early the next morning and stayed at home all day. He had not worked for two days previous and claimed to have had a cold. Roberts and Collins were at the house about 6:00 p. m. and Bogue was still there waiting for Mrs. Roberts to return. Roberts and Collins left the house about 6:30 to go to New London and left Bogue alone in the house. They went down through the lots as Mrs. Roberts and Ostberg came up the lane to the house.

Mrs. Roberts and Ostberg entered the house and Bogue began to call them down. They argued for some time, Bogue berating Mrs. Roberts for being interested in Ostberg and ordering Ostberg to stay away. They had most of their argument in the kitchen. Bogue sat on one side of the table, Ostberg on the other side, and Mrs. Roberts between them. Ostberg told Bogue he was going to take Mrs. Roberts away and Mrs. Roberts said she was going to leave. After this announcement Bogue became more angry. They argued about this for some time. Bogue then left his chair and went around to the corner of the room near the place that Ostberg sat. He took an axe, which was resting in an obscure corner between a box and the side of the room. While Ostberg sat in the chair, Bogue struck him on the head with the axe. Mrs. Roberts was seated in the rocking chair at the table and Bogue struck her on the head with the axe immediately after hitting Ostberg. Both fell to the floor.

After hitting the two, Bogue closed all of the windows. He went out and locked the front door with a padlock on the outside. He entered the side door and bolted that on the inside. When everything was secured from outside interference, he took the bodies into the cellar through a door in the kitchen. He attempted to dig a hole to bury them, but gave it up because the ground was too hard. He then went to the kitchen and washed the floor.

After placing the bodies in the cellar, Bogue went into his room and took his razor. He left the house by a kitchen window and went to a lot behind the house. Here he attempted to commit suicide by cutting his wrists and throat with a safety razor blade. He was not successful in this, but did cause a deep wound in his left wrist.

Darkness had set in at this time. When Bogue found that his attempt at suicide was a failure, he started to go to his sister's home near Groton. He became lost and stopped at a house on a back road at about 1 a. m. He requested lodging and food. The lodging was refused but food was given to him. His condition was noted at the house, and he told the story of the crime. The police were notified and took Bogue to the scene. There Bogue showed the police what he had done. A note which he had written after the killing, telling what he had done, was found on him.

I am satisfied and find that the death of Eva Jennings Roberts was caused by the criminal act of Stanley Bogue in striking her on the head with an axe, causing fatal injuries and I have so notified the prosecutor of the town court of Groton for appropriate action.

The witnesses examined were: Eugene H. Jennings, Elias P. Jennings, Charles D. Benjamin, Alfred N. Browning, James McDonough, Georgiana C. Spellman, Henry J. Storey, Judson A. Turney, Marian Barnard, Raymond C. Jennings, James L. Colline, Medrick Roberts, Darrell Curry, Stanley Bogue, all of Mystic, and C. E. Crandall and Arthur Whitmarsh, both of Groton.

In his finding on the death of Ole Ostberg, Coroner McKay says:

That the said Ole Ostberg died in the town of Groton on the 9th day of August, 1930, from a fractured skull which injury was received in the town of Groton on August 9th when he was struck on the head with an axe wielded by Stanley Bogue and died instantly. Ole Ostberg was employed in Mystic, Connecticut, from about April of this year until recently. He lived at a hotel alone. He was a stranger in that place and made friends with few people.

Sometime early in July of this year he came to visit at the house of Mrs. Eva Roberts, located on the Benjamin farm in Mystic. He repeated these visits and he and Mrs. Roberts became interested in each other. At that time Mrs. Roberts was living with one Stanley Bogue. Bogue resented the attentions that Ostberg was paying to Mrs. Roberts and they had a few arguments about it.

During the time that Ostberg was calling at the Roberts home Bogue had shown his anger in many ways. On one occasion he struck Mrs. Roberts. On another occasion he broke a number of phonograph records, tore his clothes, tore her clothes, and damaged some of the furniture. On occasions he stated that he would beat up Ostberg if he did not stay away from Mrs. Roberts.

(The remainder of the finding is identical to the finding in the death of Mrs. Roberts.)

GREENEVILLE MARKET AND BARBER SHOP BROKEN INTO BY THIEVES

Thieves broke into the Greeneville Public market, No. 460 North Main street, and a barber shop, No. 257 Central avenue, conducted by Wilfred Lemoine of No. 14 Howard street, either late Monday night or early Tuesday morning. About $35 worth of merchandise was taken, $10 worth of cigarettes from the meat market and nine razors from the barber shop. The breaks were discovered by the proprietors when the places were opened Tuesday morning.

Entrance to the barber shop was gained through a side window in an alley way, which separates the Lemoine shop from the Johnson block. The window was opened by means of removing the screen and forcing open the safety lock. The thieves got into a room in the rear of the shop and made their way into the meat market through a small window in the building.

The police were notified of the breaks and are conducting an investigation. Boys are thought to have been responsible for the breaks.

HEALTH BULLETIN WARNS AGAINST STRAY DOGS

Beware of stray dogs says the weekly bulletin of the state department of health. The bulletin continues:

"Dog days" are approaching—that period of the year when we are told to beware of the "mad" dog. That advice is good but it is just as applicable in January as in August for "dog days" have nothing to do with rabies and dogs may "go mad" or develop rabies at any season of the year when bitten or in contact with a rabid animal.

No human deaths from rabies have occurred in Connecticut since 1917 but within that time in the nearby states of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York and New Jersey over 70 persons have died a most horrible death from this disease. This fine record for Connecticut has been maintained only after a tremendous amount of effort, time and money. Since 1905 the Connecticut State Department of Health Laboratories have examined heads of 1449 suspected animals sent in by dog wardens, health officers and veterinarians and have found 712 animals to be suffering from the disease. In each instance the commissioner on Domestic Animals is immediately informed and his prompt and efficient work in quarantining and supervising the infected animals has kept the disease under close control.

Out of the state dog tax Connecticut provides free preventive treatment to all persons bitten by rabid animals. This antirabic or pasteur treatment consists in the use of a vaccine which has saved many Connecticut residents from disease and death: for rabies or hydrophobia always results in death if a person after being bitten shows symptoms of rabies. There is no known cure for rabies after symptoms develop. Not only persons who are bitten by a rabid dog should take treatment but persons whose hands have become soiled with saliva or other secretions. The virus may find entrance to the human body through an abrasion in the skin too tiny to be noticed.

Makes Good On Checks.

Charges against John Simonton of Deep River of issuing worthless checks were dropped at New London when Simonton made good on the amount of the checks and indicates that the return of two checks totalling $415.23 marked no funds was due to a misunderstanding on his part.

Simonton is the father of Robert Simonton, also of Deep River, who was convicted in the New London police court several days ago for violation of the automobile laws for which he was fined $200 and costs. The elder Simonton paid the judgment, amounting to $215.23 with one check and gave Attorney Morris Lubchansky, counsel in the case, a check for $200.

The checks were returned and a warrant was issued for Simonton's arrest and served by a state trooper of the Westbrook barracks.

Simonton declared that he did not anticipate that the checks would be cashed for several days and that he had planned to deposit enough money to cover them in the meantime. He is a painter at Deep River.

Attended Golden Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Brinkmann, Miss Dorothy Brinkmann of Thames Terrace, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Jerome and Master Laurence Jerome, and Mrs. Cora Botham of Uncasville, have returned from attending the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Crabtree of Gardner, Mass. Ten members of the May club of Norwich also were present. The happy couple, who are the parents of Mrs. Alice C. Brinkmann, have lived all their fifty years of married life in Gardner and have made many warm friends in that time. They were very fortunate in having all of their five children, ten grandchildren and one great-grandson present. The guests were served a wedding dinner at the Colonial hotel and there was a reception afternoon and evening at their home. They received many gifts of gold and other gifts as well.

"DRIPPING WET" PLANK IN ILLINOIS DEM. PLATFORM

Demands Repeal of the Volstead Act and Enactment of Legislation Legalizing Light Wines and Beer—The Wet Plank Was Presented After a Bitter Denunciation of the Liquor Laws by the Party's Senatorial Candidate, James Hamilton Lewis.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 20.—(AP)—Denunciation of prohibition; demand for repeal of the Volstead act; the Jones 5 and 10 law; the Illinois "search and seizure act," and enactment of legislation legalizing light wines and beer, were salient points of the platform adopted at the democratic state convention today.

The "dripping" wet plank, sponsored by members of the powerful Cook county group headed by Anton J. Cermak, was presented after a bitter denunciation of the liquor laws by the party's senatorial standard bearer, James Hamilton Lewis.

"Prohibition," he said, "has deprived us of character as 'citizens of a state' and made us 'subjects of a province.' Such tyranny it was that parted us, as a country, from England."

Some opposition to an unequivocal anti-prohibition platform, had been voiced by down-state leaders in committee but the differences were ironed out and the vote of approval was unanimous.

In equally vigorous language, the platform condemned the campaign expenditures of Ruth Hanna McCormick, Lewis' opponent.

"We believe," the platform read, "that the senate's verdict against the sale of senate seats to the highest bidder, confirmed by the court of public opinion, will be re-affirmed at the polls in November.

"The precedent established by the United States senate in cases involving Vare, Smith and Newberry indicate that the republican nominee for senator from Illinois will not be seated, even if she were elected."

The platform assailed the republican party for the tariff and unemployment. The tariff section read in part:

"We denounce the republican party for its action in saddling additional burdens on the farmers of America by a vicious tariff measure which was recently passed at a session primarily called for relief of the farmer. We denounce it for deceiving those who trusted upon it."

SUES HIS FORMER WIFE FOR $1,000,000 DAMAGES

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—(AP)—Frederick L. Thompson, artist and designer, has filed suit in supreme court for $1,000,000 damages against his former wife, Mrs. Caroline G. Thompson, and Col. Horace J. Brookes, of Martha's Vineyard, Mass. The suit results from his arrest on charges of attempted murder of Mrs. Thompson last fall.

Thompson said he was acquitted of the charge by a jury in Edgartown, Mass., after he had spent two months under observation in the Massachusetts hospital for the criminally insane at Bridgewater.

The artist set forth in his complaint his health was impaired by the trial and that during the proceeding he lost a contract to paint 81 murals for the Oklahoma state capitol. He further alleged Brokes threatened to put him in jail for life unless he discontinued a suit for $500,000 damages, alleging alienation of affections on the part of Brookes.

TOWN WAS BURNED BY CHINESE COMMUNISTS

HANKOW, Aug. 20—(AP)—The torch of communism flared again today in China, to burn the town of Wusueh, 37 miles from the Yangtse river city of Kiukiang, with its large foreign settlement.

A red band charged down through the hills about Wusueh, looted its population of 6,000 and ruthlessly destroyed the town, made famous by the resistance there of the Taiping rebels more than eighty years ago. The Yangtse narrows at his place, and across it the Taiping religious fanatics stretched great chains, blocking passage of the imperial fleet.

As the communists approached, refugees streamed out upon the countryside, fearing for their lives and abandoning their property.

A Japanese gunboat was ordered to Wusueth to protect foreigners. The town is a market for rock salt mined nearby.

ABANDON THE SEARCH FOR VAN LEAR BLACK

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—(AP)—The shoreward sea lanes along New Jersey's coast, capped by high waves which billowed out into the deep, refused today to yield to searchers by air and water the body of Van Lear Black.

The hunt, pressed through every daylight hour from the time the Baltimore publisher was lost from his yacht Monday evening, was virtually abandoned at noon today, and tonight even the last of the coast guard boats had quit the scene of search.

There remained one meager possibility, that some small freighter or fishing boat, unequipped with radio, might have picked up the publisher, who was an excellent swimmer, after he fell from his yacht. But it was a hope too slight to be entertained seriously.

RAIN POWDER OF NO USE WITHOUT A "SQUIRTER"

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Aug. 20—(AP)—An attempt by the Alexandria chamage mounting into thousands of dollars, in this vicinity by means of rain powder is being held up by lack of a "squirter".

Two hundred pounds of powder, imported from Santa Fe, New Mexico, is available alone with an airplane to carry it aloft to spray upon the clouds.

But the chamber of commerce has nothing to use as a "squirter".

The agricultural department was consulted regarding the use of apparatus it employs to shoot powder at boll weevils from airplanes. All were in use in the cotton belt.

A search is being made elsewhere and meanwhile Alexandrians are hoping mother nature will send a plentiful supply of rain of her own accord.

MAN KILLED BY GRAIN ELEVATOR EXPLOSION

BALTIMORE, Mr., Aug. 20—(AP)—On man was known to be dead and another was missing, late today following a series of dust explosions which wrecked a Western Maryland railroad grain elevator, and caused damage estimated by the manager at $250,000.

HOW PRICE OF MILK WAS BOOSTED IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(AP)— Small neighborhood grocers today testified large New York milk companies prevented them from selling milk cheaply even though it was available and they could do so at a fair profit.

Samuel Volkman, of Brooklyn, said at a state investigation into alleged price fixing that he stopped taking milk from the Brooklyn plant of the Dairymen's league when an independent dealer offered him inducements permitting him to lower his price but that the independent dealer was "chased out of town."

"I was buying milk of Samuel Adler," he said, "at six cents a quart and so could sell it for nine. But Benny Sacks of Sacks Dairy products, owned by the league, came to my store when the head man for Bordens in Brooklyn, took the nine cent sign out of my window and told me I would buy league milk or I'd be sorry."

A dozen other grocers from Brooklyn, Manhattan and the Bronx testified that on Aug. 11 the price of their milk, for which they had been paying from $3 to $3.80 per 40 quarts, was raised to $4 to $4.40.

CHICAGO MAN BENT ON COMMITTING SUICIDE

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—(AP)—John Bur, having twice failed to kill himself, is still determined.

He has made his will. It is in a whisky bottle which Bur carries in his coat pocket.

Bur was poised to leap into the Chicago river today when Officer Frank Clark snatched him back and took him to jail. No sooner had Bur been locked up than he tried to hang himself with his belt.

Foiled again, he denounced the law for interfering with his inalienable right to die if he wanted to, and he said that when and if—he got out, he would carry out his intention.

If he persists there at least is the will in the bottle, and a will in a bottle is quite rare.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—(AP)—The Kuo Min News agency, representing the Chinese national government in the United States, said tonight that victory was in sight for the nationalists and that a complete reorganization of provincial governments was planned following conclusion of the campaign against a northern coalition.

Wang Chung Huin, president of the Judicial Yuan, cabled the agency of the reorganization plans and added that China soon would be reunited. He said that the Chinese, furthermore, would have complete sovreignty in their country, nearly all foreign powers having agreed to abolition of extra-territoriality.

DOYLE CLEARED OF TWO COUNTS OF PERJURY

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(AP)—A federal jury today cleared Dr. William F. Doyle of two counts, charging perjury in swearing to his income tax reports for 1927 and 1928, but could not agree as to a count alleging evasion in his return for 1929.

Federal Attorney Tuttle immediately announced the evasion charge would be laid before another jury at a second trial.

The charges related to a period when Doyle, former fire department veterinary, was making a fortune as a pleader for applicants before the city board of standards and appeals.

DAMAGE BY CLOUDBURST IN WATERBURY LAST NIGHT

WATERBURY, Aug. 20—(AP)—Damage mounting into thousands of dollars, was caused here early tonight by a cloudburst which inundated streets, parks, lawns and gardens, stalled motors of automobiles and virtually brought all kinds of vehicular traffic to a standstill. Union Labor Leader Shot Dead In Chicago

Another Man Was Wounded —Were Fired Upon From a Curtained Automobile.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—(AP)— Charles H. Mulcahy, 38, prominent local labor leader was shot to death and Bernard Ruberry, 35, a companion, was seriously wounded in what police described as a labor war flare-up today.

The victims, business agents of the Chicago Journeymen Plumbers' union, were shot down as they alighted from a car at the site of a high school construction project. Although no one who would admit witnessing the shooting was found by police a search was begun for John Wilson and Albert Courchene, employes of the company holding the building plumbing contract.

Police believe Mulcahy and Ruberry had planned to halt work of union plumbers because the project had not been approved by the labor organization.

CARDINAL O'CONNELL ADDRESSES THE K. OF C.

BOSTON, Aug. 20. — (AP) — The Knights of Columbus, assembled here for their 48th annual supreme convention, heard Cardinal William O'Connell this afternoon for the second time since the convention started.

An executive session was made public during the cardinal's speech. The prelate told the Knights that "the welfare of the world is not depending on any one set of people—we must all work together."

"We must arouse ourselves to the fact that we are needed in life," he continued. "And that there is room for work among all, Jew or Gentile. The Knights of Columbus is not only a religious organization, but a patriotic one, giving service to God, to church, and to country."

The cardinal endorsed the annual report of Supreme Knight Martin H. Carmody, of Grand Rapids, Mich., particularly that part which dealt with the importance of the lay apostolate.

Earlier in the afternoon, the delegates visited Cambridge and Harvard. There, they were addressed by Mayor Richard M. Russell, who said: "The Masons the Elks, and other organizations should fall in line and work hand in hand with the Knights of Columbus to exterminate the abuse of the God-given right to serve in public office without subjecting himself to the slandering tongue."

UNDERTAKERS CLASHED OVER POSSESSION OF BODY

FRANKFORT, Ky., Aug. 20.—(AP)—Difficulties between two Lexington undertaking firms over possession of the body of Walter Downs, Fayette county constable who died Monday night at Lexington, ended in a compromise in Franklin circuit court here this afternoon.

The compromise was reached by the attorneys and their clients, after Judge Thomas B. McGregor heard arguments in an injunction proceedings brought by Kerr Brothers, who applied for an injunction ordering the undertaking firm of Anglin and Boden to turn Downs' body over to them.

Under terms of the agreement Kerr Brothers will be given the corpse and the funeral services will be held at their parlors. Anglin and Boden, having supplied the coffin and embalmed the body, will be paid $576 for their services by the administratrix, Mrs. V. F. Wilcoxson, sister of Downs, out of a United States veterans' insurance policy left by Downs. Kerr Brothers will be paid for their services from what is left of a $900 fund which Downs specified in a note found on his body should be the cost of his funeral.

YACHT ENTERPRISE WINS FIRST OFFICIAL TRIAL

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 20.—(AP)—Enterprise, sailed by Harold S. Vanderbilt, again demonstrated her supremacy in light air today, defeating Weetamoe, the Morgan-Nichols candidate, in the first of the official trials, for selection of the defender of the America's cup.

In the other match race of the day, Yankee, sailed by Charles F. Adams, secretary of the navy, ran away from Whirlwind, the Thorne-Hammond entry. Whirlwind finally blew out her mainstail and was towed home. But at the time of the mishap the Boston boat had a comfortable lead. Yankee's time for the 30-mile course was 26 seconds better than that of Enterprise.

Today's race was over a 30-mile leeward-windward course. While the start was in a light wind from the northeast, the breeze freshened towards the close, reaching a maximum velocity of 16 1-2 miles an hour.

A STEADY SLUMP IN PANAMA CANAL TRAFFIC

PANAMA CITY, Aug. 20—(AP)—The Steady slump in Panama Canal traffic since the first of the year was interpreted today as a reflex of the general business depression by Seymour Paul, chief of the bureau of statistics of the Panama Canal.

Mr. Paul's statement added that the reduction was reflected in nearly all lines, shipments to and from Europe having fallen off as well as those to and from the United States, trade to and from the west coast of South merica also was distinctly lower.

WICKERSHAM CRITICISES LAW MAKING BY CONGRESS

Denounced the Jones and Dyer Acts—Asserted That the Making of Felonies Out of Minor Breaches of the Law Blurs the Distinction Between Serious and Minor Crimes—Questioned the Efficacy of Legislative Mandates Bristling With Penalties For Disobedience.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20—(AP)—Chairman George W. Wickersham of President Hoover's law enforcement commission today defended regulatory legislation "to supress acts and habits injurious to the country's welfare" and attacked the Jones and Dyer acts because "they make felonies of petty violations." His address was delivered before the 53rd annual convention of the American Bar association.

Devoting only a small part of his speech to prohibition the chairman expressed no opinion on the dry law, but recalled that the commission was unanimously opposed to the theory of the Jones law. He said:

"We thought it unsound to make felonies of pretty violations of this or other criminal laws. It confuses the public mind regarding offenses by blurring the distinction between serious crimes and minor breaches of the statute law. Moeover, the federal courts are not equipped for the administration of police laws. They have no proper machinery for dealing with juvenile offenders.

"The theory of our constitution left the ordinary police powers to the states and therefore did not contemplate, nor has congress provided a system of interior courts and magistrates. This has been brought home particularly in proceedings under the Dyer act making it a federal offense to take a stolen automobile from one state to another. To a large extent those who are brought before the federal courts for violation of this law are mischievous boys, who ought to be well thrashed and sent home, instead of being branded as felons.

"It must be confessed," observed Mr. Wickersham, "that the general attitude of mind of the average American is not lawabiding. Perhaps this is not unnatural. With 48 states, besides the federal congress, grinding out laws annually, or biennially; with statute laws already in existence filling some 1,500 volumes with some million and a half pages, any general acceptance of statute laws as imposing a moral obligation on the citizen could hardly be expected."

Recalling the restrictions which the American people imposed upon themselves during the war in response to requests of Hoover, then food administrator, Mr. Wickersham stated "with proper guidance, an extraordinary degree of co-operation with authority in securing general observance of statutory requirements can be developed in the American public. The art of suggestion may be more potent than legislative mandates bristling with penalties for disobedience."

The chairman recited the many obstacles in the way of the commission, chief among these the lack of adequate crime statistics in the United States, and discussed the prevailing spirit of lawlessness as well as the paradox which he said was presented by liberty and the law.

"There can be no individual right to elect what laws one will or will not obey," he said, adding that "good citizenship must acquiesce in the law as it is for the time being."

Dealing with the lawless acts of government officials, the chairman told the bar members that "a basic difficulty with much of the administration of justice lies in the use of political influence not only in the selection of prosecutors, court officials and judges, but in the performance of their duties. This is perhaps the most pregnant source of the failures in our system of criminal justice; yet, possibly, it is the most difficult to appraise and demonstrate.

He suggested that in the treatment of crime appeals to the divine grace might be more efficacious than psychiatric analyses.

"The commission must determine so far as it may, what are the causes of crime," he said, "it will of course be recognized that there is no one definite, ascertainable influence which may be said in itself to cause criminal conduct. Physical and psychological conditions—endoctrine glands, for example—may account for much anti-social conduct. Influences surrounding child life; treatment of a first offender by governmental authority—all enter into the problem."

DECLINES TO WITHDRAW DRY LAW REFERENDUM

CHICAGO, Aug. 20—(AP)—The American Bar association, opening the general sessions of its 53rd annual convention today, refused by a vote of five to one to withdraw its current referendum on repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The lawyers—more than 2,000 of them—from all parts of the country—also rejected a recommendation that they oppose farm relief, and heard Chairman George W. Wickersham explain the progress of President Hoover's law enforcement commission.

The convention was barely through the preliminary courtesies of welcome addresses, when Judge James F. Ailshie of Cour D' Alene, Idaho, attacked the prohibition referendum as a political question upon which the Bar association should not commit itself. He introduced a resolution demanding an immediate withdrawal of the poll without canvassing.

Former President A. L. Newlin of the association declared the referendum could not now be withdrawn since more than 1,500 ballots already had been circulated among the members, and he moved the Ailshie resolution was out of order and unconstitutional. President Henry Upson Sims, presiding so ruled.

FOLLOWERS HAVE CONFIDENCE IN AIMEE MCPHERSON

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 20.— (AP) — More than 100 leaders of Angelus temple today adopted a resolution of confidence in their evangelist pastor, Aimee Semple McPherson, while Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, her mother, declared stories of Mrs. McPherson's illness and asserted blindness to be "just blah."

Mrs. Kennedy said the evangelist was recovering from a "face lifting" operation at a Malibu beach cottage. "It was necessary to bandage her whole face and I think this is where the blindness story started," she continued.

Indication that all might not be entirely peaceful at Angelus temple because of developments of the case was given by "Sister" Mary E. Sullivan, however.

Sister Sullivan told the gathering of leaders that "Aimee's prison girls are all giving her support. They all are praying for her, but I am having a hard time keeping them from forming a league against Ma Kennedy."

The announcement was greeted by applause and cheering. Sister Sullivan refused to answer newspapermen's queries concerning the identity of the "prison girls."

At the beach cottage it was variously stated Mrs. McPherson was suffering from a face lifting operation, a nervous collapse, blindness and need of a rest. Mrs. McPherson herself was quoted as saying:

HUNT FOR ANOTHER ZUTA DEPOSIT BOX

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—(AP)—Police investigating the murder of Alfred J. Lingle, set out tonight on a hunt for another of the safe deposit boxes of Jack Zuta, slain vice monger who was accused of having instigated the killing of the reporter.

The raiders, who refused to make known their destination, were accompanied, as in their previous forays, by Municipal Judge John H. Lyle, who signed the search warrants. They declined to say if the box sought is believed to contain $150,000 worth of unset diamonds, to which they were led by notes already found.

A representative of an eastern jewelry firm, from which the jewels were reported stolen, was called in for possible identification purposes, however, leading to the belief that the gems were the objective of the search.

ARRANGING CREDIT FOR DROUGHT STRICKEN FARMERS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20. —(AP)— A proposal to establish state or local credit corporations to arrange loans to drought stricken farmers through intermediate credit banks at a maximum interest of 6 per cent was advanced at the initial meeting today of President Hoover's national drought relief committee.

Banking representatives on state relief committees now being organized throughout the drought area were called to meet here next Tuesday to put the financial program in more definite form.

Meeting at the white house the committee went over the situation with the president and appraised the relief facilities of each agency represented. All members were present except Henry M. Robinson, Los Angeles banker.

Secretary Hyde, the chairman, announced it also had been decided to use immediately for seed loans the $800,000 remaining of $6,000,000 fund appropriated at the last session of congress for relief in more than a dozen states.

ANOTHER TAMMANY OFFICE-HOLDER RESIGNS

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—(AP)—Already under suspension as a city official, threatened with contempt of court proceedings, and involved in an investigation ordered by Governor Roosevelt, Martin J. Healy, Tammany district leader, resigned today as deputy city commissioner of plant and structures.

Shortly before the resignation was handed to Mayor James J. Walker, Healy, Mrs. George F. Ewald, and Thomas T. Tommaney, sheriff's office clerk, for a second time refused to testify before a federal grand jury about $10,000 Mrs. Ewald gave Tommaney for Healy shortly before her husband was appointed to a magistracy.

They refused on the ground that to testify might tend to incriminate or degrade them. Immediately they were taken before a federal judge and United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle requested they be declared in contempt of court. The judge ordered briefs submitted tomorrow and said he would make his decision Friday.

MUCH LIQUOR SEIZED IN AMSTON MILL RAID

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 20.— A daily flow of from 40 to 50 barrels of alleged Canadian Ale into Massachusetts cities was suddenly checked this afternoon when six federal agents, under direction of Chief Stanton L. Briggs of the Connecticut prohibition department, assisted by Deputy Sheriff Harvey S. Collins of Columbia struck at the source in the old Turner silk mill in Amston. The unexpected appearance of the officers precipitated three of the four attendants into flight, but they were nabbed as they began crawling through a window. The four gave their names as: Joseph Davis, 72 Cherry street, Malden, Mass.; Jacob Levine, 37 Linden Park street, Roxbury, Mass.; George Brown, 178 Broadway, Chelsea, Mass., and Alfred Miller, 318 Farmington avenue, Hartford. They were taken to the Willimantic lock-up and held for hearing before U. S. Commissioner Earl Mathewson at Norwich, at 11 o'clock Thursday forenoon. An automobile parked in the mill yard and registered under the name of Murray N. Silverman, of Amston, believed to be one of the men arrested under a fictitious name, was seized along with thousands of dollars worth of equipment and 500 cases of bottled liquor.

The establishment, described by the officers as a "wildcat" brewery, was one of the most complete ever taken by enforcement officers in the state. It occupied an entire floor in an addition of the former silk plant and there was every evidence that it was operated on a large scale. The beer was made in a huge vat measuring 10 by 20 feet and eight feet deep with an auxiliary copper tank. Over two tons of ice, said to have been purchased in Willimantic, was used daily in the cooling system, while for heating, a regular mill boiler was used. There was a fire in the boiler at the time of the raid, which was staged at 3:30 o'clock, and other evidence that business in general was humming at the plant. The 500 cases of finished product seized was in bottles, labeled "John H. R. Molson Canadian Bitter Ale," an attractive label leading consumers to believe that they were getting the "real stuff." Each bottle was nicely wrapped in corrugated pasteboard. Chief Briggs stated that insofar as he could determine, it was the first time since prohibition that the wrapping process was found in use in the illicit beer business in Connecticut. The equipment included over 1,000 empty bottles, thousands of the ale labels and wrappers, numerous capping machines and other paraphernalia necessary to the large illegal industry. Several hundred pounds of mash and malt were confiscated.

An investigation conducted by Chief Briggs prior to the raid revealed that practically all of the beer output of the plant went to Massachusetts, being delivered there in truck loads on an average of four times a week. Owing to the already crowded condition of the federal storehouse where seized liquor and equipment is kept in the local post office building, today's seizure was turned over to the United States marshal and shipped to New Haven by truck. The Turner mill building is located about three quarters of a mile from the Amston railroad station on the main highway to Colchester. It is owned by the Ams estate.

"BOSSY" GILLIS MAY SPEAK IN WILLIMANTIC SEPT. 28

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 20—The famous Andrew J. "Bossy" Gillis, mayor of Newburyport, Mass., of which city he is also the "bad boy," will probably address a public audience in a local theatre under the auspices of the Lions' club, it was announced today. Seeking more troubled waters over which to paddle his own canoe in typical style, "Bossy" Gillis is now a candidate for the state senatorial nomination on the republican ticket. The Lions' club, through a committee consisting of Harry Kaufman, chairman; John R. McCarthy and Carl E. Rice, hopes to complete arrangements with the Bay State mayor next week. As an added feature to the address by "Bossy" it is planned to have a concert by the Willimantic Glee club and other forms of entertainment, the proceeds of the evening to be devoted to the club's work among the local blind. Mayor Gillis is said to be greatly interested in Lionism and in early communications consented to come here for a nominal expense. Tentatively the date of his appearance has been set for Sunday, September 28.

RELATIONSHIP OF HOLY SPIRIT TO CHURCH

WILLIMANTIC CAMP GROUND, Aug. 20.—The classes carried out the educational program Wednesday forenoon under their various leaders.

"This Is My Father's World" is the hymn the procession of more than 30 children were singing as they marched across the ground at 9:10 to 9:15 this morning, led by Mrs. J. M. Shaw, their leader, entering the tabernacle for the chapel service at 9:15. Dean Pennepacker presided. "The Old Rugged Cross" was sung by four girls. Rev. R. J. Martin, pastor at Bryantville, Mass., was the speaker. His subject was "The Place of Suffering in Christian Experience" and his address was founded upon the story of Paul's visit to Lystra and his healing of the cripple as recorded in Acts, the 14th chapter.

Dr. Birney's address at 11 o'clock was based upon the relationship of the Holy Spirit to the church, which was presented by a Scriptural figure as "the Body of Christ." He said that the "Body of Christ" bears the same relationship to the Holy Spirit as the human body bears to the human spirit. He said that once he was pounding nails and accidentally hit "the wrong nail," (presumably his finger). His wife afterward reproved him for "making so much fuss" and said she would not have done so intimating that only men and not women mind such a little thing. "But" said he, "my body is twice as large as hers and she could not realize the extent to which the whole 200 pounds of my flesh could feel that hurt." So he urged that all the members of the Body of Christ must suffer when one member suffers. He urged that as one's body is under the control of the human spirit so every real member of God's church must recognize and submit to the control of the Holy Spirit.

Miss Mayo's class at 1:30, as on Tuesday, attracted a good audience of spectators and the extemporaneous addresses of five of her pupils gave an interesting exhibition of the value of good speaking. Her lecture on Wednesday covered among other things some interesting matter about "gestures."

The Woman's Home Missionary society had charge of the program at 2:15. Miss Lottie Ketcham, of Providence, was the speaker. Miss Ketcham was a missionary to Alaska some years ago but now is in charge of the social center at Silver lake, Providence. Her address was divided equally between the two interests. She told interesting stories about Alaska and her experience there and describe every graphically the needs of Silver lake.

The clergymen on the ground enjoyed a quiet hour in conference with Dr. Birney at 3:30, Wednesday.

Dr. Birney's topic Wednesday evening was "The Song of Moses and the Lamb." His messages are growing in strength and interest from day to day.

Miss Marjorie Stephens, who has been an active worker on this ground for many years, is absent this year. Her many friends will be interested to learn that she is at Camp Hoover, Song lake, Tully, New York, where she is counsellor at a Girls Scout camp, Pixie group, 10 and 11 years of age.

The Uncasville house is in charge of Mrs. Agnes Phillips, of New London. Mrs. W. W. McIntosh, of New London, who has been staying here, has returned to her home.

F. L. Geer, the caretaker of the ground, is in his tenth year in this position. He, with his wife and his daughter, Miss Mildred, reside in the dwelling at the entrance of the ground and the people who come here from year to year are the recipients of many courtesies which they show in meeting the needs of the visitors.

Mrs. Charles Clark and son, Darwin Clark, of Eastford, and Mrs. Carrie F. Miller, of Pomfret, are occupying a cottage on Haven avenue. Mrs. Miller is the wife of the late Rev. John Miller who, for many years, was active on this ground as president of the Stafford Springs House association and leader of its prayer meetings.

DECATEAU FINED $50 ON LIQUOR CHARGE

DANIELSON, Aug. 20—Hearings were given to a number of liquor and motor vehicle law violators at a session of town court this morning at which Deputy Judge Francis presided. Herman Decateau of Killingly Center arrested by state officers in a raid Friday evening, entered pleas of guilty to charges of owning and keeping and sale of intoxicating liquors and was fined $50 and costs on the first count and given a suspended jail sentence of 30 days, on the second.

Joseph Madigan, of Waterbury, arrested Tuesday was presented in court by Sergeant G. L. Gardner of the state police, on a charge of operating a motor vehicle without an operator's license. He was found guilty and fined $1 and costs. Victor Brunelle of Danielson was presented on a charge of overloading a commercial vehicle. Charges against him were nolled upon payment of costs.

A death in Providence today, was that of Miss Grace Lillian Fiske of Gloucester who died at a Providence hospital following a long illness. Miss Fiske was 47 years of age. She was born in Gloucester and spent practically all of her life there. Her father was Jonathan Fiske and her mother was Lillian Saunders who were lifelong and well known residents of Gloucester. Miss Fiske is survived by an aunt, Mrs. Leon Dierce and three cousins, who reside in Foster, R. I.

Principal Ernest P. Warren, of Killingly High school, is interested in placing three girls of high school age in Danielson homes where they may earn their board by part-time work and at the same time attend high school. Mr. Warren has applications of three girls who have applied to him, asking that he assist them in finding such a home. In past years hospitable Killingly residents appreciating the ambitions of such young women have enabled them to obtain a secondary education by accepting them into their homes for the school year. Three have applied for such placements so far this year, and Principal Warren is anxious to hear from Danielson and Killingly families interested, before the beginning of the fall term of school, which opens next month.

Germaine Meurnier of Franklin street, for the past several years manager of the Gulf Refining service station at Putnam, has received a promotion in the company in the form of a transfer from the managership of the Putnam station to a position of the same capacity at a larger and more developed station in Willimantic. Mr. Meurnier has taken over his new duties in Willimantic and has been succeeded at Putnam by Theodore Reeves of the borough, who has served as manager of the local Gulf station on Main strete for the past few years.

Of interest to football fans, is the announcement by the board of managers of the professional football team, the Providence Steamrollers, of the signing up for another year of Arthur V. "Pop" Williams, well known gridiron ace, who lives in Danielson. Williams' name will appear in the line-up of the national league team for the third consecutive year. He will report at the Cycledrome in Providence, for practice on September 8 at which time preparations for the first game—a practice tilt—to be played on September 15, will be made.

Williams began his football career at Killingly High school and his work as a ground-gainer was instrumental in bringing the Quinebaug Valley league championship to the local school in different years that he schooled there. He continued to build up his reputation in this field while at the Connecticut Agricultural college at Storrs. Scouts of the Rollers signed Williams up three years ago and his eiffcient work in the back field has brought him continued recognition from the followers of the professional sport.

A continuance until September 5 was granted by Deputy Judge Charles Francis of town court, to George D. Charron of Plainfield, who was arrested Sunday by County Game Warden Thomas Daniels of Plainfield, and presented in court Tuesday morning. Charron was charged with having used abusive language when accosted by Warden Daniels and was also presented on a charge of fishing with a line having more than two baited hooks. He was released after furnishing bonds of $100.

Albert Rickey of Danielson represented Killingly at a meeting of old time fiddlers, which took place today in South Foster, R. I. There was considerable interest turned on the session of the fiddlers of yesteryear who delighted a large audience when the series of musical debates started.

Danielson followers of the rod and gun will be treated to some excellent hunting this fall, when the hunting season is officially opened. The woods will be expectionally well stocked with birds, many of which were released in this territory this week by County Game Warden Daniels. During the few remaining weeks of the close of the season, Warden Daniels will make several other releases of birds in the various game patrols in this portion of the county.

The passing of four passenger trains in the daylight hours through Danielson, on two days each week, are creating scenes reminiscent of a time when this town enjoyed a comprehensive programme of rail passenger service. The trains are fast expresses, which run between New York and northern New England summer resorts. Two trains go north on Mondays and make return trips on Fridays. At present Danielson is without rail passenger service, as are other communities situated on the Norwich and Worcester branch of the New Haven road.

A number of Danielson people were in Putnam today where they attended the formal opening of the new home of the Cargill Trust company.

Miss Elizabeth Dunn represented the local telephone exchange, at an employees general board conference held Tuesday at New Haven.

MANY INSPECT NEW HOME OF TRUST CO.

PUTNAM, Aug. 20—The splendor of the architecture and decoration of the new banking home of the Cargill Trust company was viewed for the first time by the public today when the doors of the institution were opened at three o'clock. During the afternoon and in the evening until nine o'clock, President Byron D. Bugbee and members of the board of directors, other officers and employes were busily engaged in the receiving of large numbers of guests. The atmosphere was pleasant and the coutesies extended visitors impressed the onlooker with a homelike feeling. Guests strolled liesurely through the building continuously during the inspection hours, admiring the beauties and fine appointments of the structure.

The huge steel vault was the center of attraction. Its romy interior, in which every inch of space is utiliezd, like the rest of the building stands as a symbol of security and a monument to its designers.

The lobby and the offices of the president and treasurer were replendent with baskets of flowers, which were the congratulations sent by other banks in the city and state.

In the balconies on the mezzanine floors, were seen other floral tokens of esteem. The directors' room on the west mezzannie floor was utilized as a setting for the orchestra of five pieces, which played under the direction of William Tasilo of Hartford. The orchestra was accompanied by a singer of unusual talent—Miss Sadie eYllen, soprano of Hartford. Miss Yellen is well known to Connecticut's radio audience, she having made numerous appearances before the michrophone. The musical group rendered many selections, which were presented in symphonic arrangement.

At four o'clock this afternon the final business transaction in the modest quarters in the old Thompson bank on Union street, which have been the home of the trust company for the past six years, was completed. At nine o'clock Thursday morning the bank will commence business in the elaborate new and modern building.

While Putnam slept, employes of the Cargill Trust company transferred funds and valuable documents from the vault of the Union street bank to the new vault in the new Main street banking home today. The boxes of currency and bags of silver were carried from the old bank to the new under the protection of a squadron of state officers of the Danielson barracks, working under the direction of Sergt. George L. Gardner. The officers in addition to their side arms, carried riot guns. The transfer of the money was carried out quickly and systematically. Officers were stationed at strategic points along the route and policemen accompanied each truck as it left for the depository in the new building with its valuable cargo. Local police assisted Sergt. Gardner with the work.

A meeting of the town school committee was held Tuesday evening at the law offices of Torrey and Geissler. Aside from confirming the appointment of Miss Lydia P. Tollander of Norwod, Mass., as supervisor of music in town schools, to succeed Mrs. Ernestine Wheeler of Taunton, Mass only routine business was transacted. The building committee reported on the damage caused when lightning struck the Israel Putnam school last Saturday, during a thunder storm, and an order for repairs was issued. John H. Bulger, chairman of the committee, reported that extensive renovations in all of the schools have been made during the summer months, placing each building in serviceable condition.

County Agent Raymond E. Wing of the Windham county farmers association gives notice of a poultry trip to be held on Tuesday. According to plans, poultry men of New London and Windham counties, who are coperating will gather at Central Village at 10:30 o'clock (D.S.T.). The farm of Thomas W. Moore of Central Village will be visited, after which the group will leave for Wildwood park. In the afternon the poultry farms of J. Z. LaBelle at Ballouville, Arthur E. Whitehouse at Attwaugan and the Houghton and Hale farm at East Putnam. The purpose of the trip is to familiarize poultry raisers with the modern methods being employed by these successful raisers and also to help solve many of the problems confronting the smaller growers.

Agents of the United States department of agriculture engaged in the search for the ravages of the Japanese beetle, reported today that they have discovered no trace of the insect in the territory hereabouts, since they began their inspection last week. The work of the inspectors consists of touring the yards and gardens of homes where examinations of plants likely to be infested by the pest are made.

Lieut. Allen A. Thayer, 13th Inf. U. S. A., stationed at Fort Ethan Allen at Winooski, Vermnt, this week received notification from the war department at Washington, that he would be transferred to foreign service in December and will be assigned to duty with regular army forces at Hawaii. Lieut. Thayer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Thayer of King street. His grandfather is Colonel Henry J. Thayer of King street, a retired national guard officer.

THOMPSON MAN FINDS $50,000 IN OLD BARN

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Aug. 20—An unusual and amaing discovery was made Monday by John Hoenig, owner of the Carlton farm in East Thompson. While cleaning up around his barn, Mr. Hoenig came upon a bundle of Colonial bank notes which have a face value of $50,000. The notes at the present time are of no monetary value, according to a collector and authority on ancient currency. However, the bills issued by the Massachusetts Bay colony, are certain to net the owner of the lot a small fortune since it is believed collectors who collect old currency will make an effort to procure them. Hoenig was unmoved when he made his discovery, because of the antiquity of the money. On the notes dates back to 1790 and others are believed to be older.

The presence of the money is accounted by a story which has been handed down by old residents of Thompson, who were not surprised when Hoenig unearthed the box of treasure. According to the tale, the Carlton place in colonial days, was situated on the route of the Boston-Hartford turnpike. At one time a large shipment of money, said to have been around $350,000 was shipped over this route under the protection of a small troop of colonial soldiers. The guard, so the story goes, was attacked by Indians and renegade whites in East Thompson. Before the skirmish ended, the shipment of money was buried and a map of its location was made. The drawing was never found, although it is still believed to be in existence.

The value of the bills at the present time has been estimated by one collector as ranging from 25 to 50 cents each, although it is possible that some lover of such rare money will offer a greater sum in order to acquire the lot.

The notes are printed on various grades of paper. Some are thing and nearly transparent, while others, printed on a god quality of paper, have managed to weather time exceptionally well. The paper, according to one authority, represents a promise to pay on the part of the bank, municipality or state issuing then. Years ago they were used as a medium of exchange due to the absence of metal.

BEES SWARMING PLANS RUDELY DISTURBED

Somebody has lost an evidently fine and extra large colony of bees. The long line, thin in some places and rather bunched up in other parts of the flight, passed over upper Hill street a little after five o'clock Wednesday. When above the Connecticut electric sub-station near the Ashland mill, the queen evidently decided that there, among the poles, transformers, and long rows of petticoat insulators, would be a good place to swarm. Watchers on the ball ground saw the long line close-up and prepare to settle into the new quarters. Off in the west banks of black clouds were forming with an occasional roll of distant thunder. While the bees were circling, as they sought out the most likely place to alight, one of the electric men unlocked the gate, and threw in his breaker switches to try out the lightning arresters. The dazzling light of the arc as the current ran over the cut-out wires caused a strikingly peculiar action on the part of the bees, that were now closed up together resembling an animated ball, as big around as a cart wheel. At the first flash they separated, filling the air for an area of twenty feet. The queen seemed to decide that transforming plants were not suitable places to swarm, and the whole lot, several thousands in number, made off, double quick, across the pond.

Monday morning, August 25, the Jewett City Savings' bank will open for business in its new home. Banking hours 9 a. m. to 3 p. m.; Saturday 9 to 12.—adv.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the reception to be given Rev. John J. McCabe this (Thursday) evening held a final meeting Wednesday night.

Travelers along the country roadsides are noting the unmistakable signs of the advancing season in the liberal showing of the early fall flowers. Joe Pye weed, iron weed, and boneset, with a dozen species of golden rod present a beautiful color display.

In the Tadpole pond is to be seen one of the biggest growths of button-bush to be found anywhere in this section. Not to be measured by single bushes, it is rather to be computed by the acre. Every year this persistent shrub appears to encroach more and more on the open water surface of the famous Tadpole. It seems to be its constant endeavor to keep away from mankind, thus it blooms profusely in these great swampy areas. Few flowers in all the local list have a more delicate fragrance than the Tadpole water lily and button-bush.

On both sides of Main street, incidental with other finishing touches to the new road, the cement walks are being replaced, or new ones are being built to replace gravel.

In an exciting game Wednesday afternoon between the Aspinook Sluggers, Jrs., and the Tadpole Rough Necks, the Sluggers nosed out in the ninth, when Luty won the game with a home run. Score 14 to 13. The Sluggers line-up was: Wakely c, L. Peppin p, Larrabee 1b, Ray Peppin ss, Rodgen lf, Checkers 2b, Dengy 3b, Chokeybay rf. Tadpole Rough Necks—Patchy c, Luty p, Pecks 1b, Klick ss, McKenna 2b, La Bonty lf, Fogarty 3b, Jackie cf, Archie rf. The heavy stick work was credited to Luty, Pecks, Jackie Larrabee and L. Peppin.

Mrs. John Shea, a former resident here, now of Greenville, was a visitor at Mrs. John Blake's on Mechanic street, Tuesday.

Concert To Be Friday.

There will be no band concert at Ashland Park tonight (Thursday) as the Ashland Boys' Band will play at Friday night's Water Carnival instead.

Only a few more entries for the water program were received Wednesday but these run the total to over seventy. In the juvenile class the Boys' Band entered a team in the relay race, which makes five teams to start in this event.

The names of Mat Solenski, Betty Strickland, Blackie McGrudder, Joe Zubrowski and Hanson are the latest additions.

Doc Gingras has been named as starter of the swimming races and Pete Ku[illegible] and Henry Field have been placed in charge of the boats which will patrol the course during the program. They will pick their own assistants to watch over the safety of the swimmers.

Fred Kusek, Rene Brochu and Raymond Jarvis will be the judges.

For the benefit of the contestants the information has been given out that the dressing rooms and shower baths in the clubhouse will be available to all. Friday evening and all prizes will be awarded immediately following the final event on the program. Distribution of these prizes will be in charge of Harold Tomlinson, treasurer of the Ashland club.

Now comes the news that among the added features at the water carnival will be the appearance of a steam boat on Ashland Reservoir, something which not even the oldest inhabitant can recall as ever occurring before.

ENFORCING HIGHWAY LAWS

In the interest of greater safety in the highway, the cooperation that is being given by the several New England states in the Save-a-Life campaign should be productive of good results.

Much satisfaction is to be felt from the statement of the motor vehicle commissioner that the enforcement is going to be continuous and that the "procedure during the last two weeks of August will point the way to practice that will be lasting."

It is the case in too many campaigns that a fine effort is undertaken, kept in force for a fortnight possibly and then forgotten. That happens quite generally with the result that those who happen to violate the regulations during the period of keen attention are penalized, but those who do the same thing a few days later get away without even a warning. They have ignored the whole purpose of the campaign and by their acts created the impression in their own minds, and possibly others, that the regulations never amount to anything anyway.

Those who use the highways to any extent can appreciate the need of respect for the ordinances, signs, systems and lights. When it is set forth that motorists will be required to refrain from cutting in and out on hills and at curves and other dangerous places, that while lines laid down by the highway department must be respected, that motorists must keep to the right of them and that parking regulations must be observed it is apparent that the correction of certain bad practices is aimed at. Further there are those who think nothing of passing on hills, or curves, who have no hesitancy in throwing someone else into a jam and possibly an accident in the exercise of bad judgment.

The increasing number of motor vehicles and the too large number of accidents make it evident that such conditions should not prevail. Those who have no consideration for the rights of others and are unwilling to conform to regulations which they have helped to make necessary are aimed at by the campaign now underway and it ought not to be necessary to bring them before some court in order to have them realize it.

NEW ENGLAND BEEF

Frequently the question has been asked as to what can be done with the idle land of New England. It cannot all be used for industrial activity. There are vast areas that are most available for some form of agricultural activity and yet it is not employed intensively in that direction.

Whether there is a chance to utilize part of it for the raising of beef is an interesting question which is being worked out at the Connecticut Agricultural college. Texas steers have been brought here and are being raised in the belief that the result will be worth while and stimulate interest in that direction.

There were the days when much beef was raised right in this very locality. Western steers were brought here, placed on the pasture land and marketed at the proper time. It was a profitable business at one time and it is not improbable that the college experiment will show that it can be profitably revived.

To say the least it is an effort worth making. If beef can be raised in New England it should mean another source of income from the farm land and it should mean a use for much of that grass and hay which now goes to waste because with the increase in the number of motor vehicles there is a decided decrease in the demand for it. It might easily mean that those who have a good stand of grass would have no difficulty in disposing of it, which would be quite in contrast with the experience of some land owners who not only have been unable to sell the grass but have found it impossible to get anyone to cut it in order to have it.

With New England acres lacking for some use the raising of beef, or even the raising of sheep, would make a marked change in the situation. If the eyes of the New Englanders can be opened to this possibility it will mean the rendering of a most valuable service to this part of the country, and for that reason the complete story of the experiment at Storrs will be awaited with unusual interest.

NORTH CAROLINA'S LYNCHING

The governor of North Carolina has reason to feel disturbed over the lynching of a Negro which occurred near Tarboro, and when he declared that it is "a disgrace to North Carolina," and "a black blot on a fine record which the state had made for nearly a decade and of which its citizens were justly proud," there was ample justification.

North Carolina is in close proximity to other southern states where less attention has been paid to the prevention of lynchings. It has stood for the enforcement of the law instead of mob rule, and it has done so for so many years that it was regarded as a fixed policy among the people as well as the authorities.

When, however, the Tarboro mob upset the labored efforts to keep that state in the right channel, the governor showed no more indignation than was to be expected. When he added that everything would be done to bring the lynchers to justice he displayed the logical attitude and in the interest of law and order it is to be hoped that the efforts will be successful.

The crime for which the Negro was lynched was no trivial one. If he were guilty he certainly needed due punishment, but he was entitled to a trial and there was no reason to believe but what he would have been properly dealt with by the courts next month. For the mob to take the case into its own hands simply meant that it trampled the law of the state under its feet. It showed just as much disregard for lawful conditions as did the alleged acts of the black man. They refused to give North Carolina a chance to uphold its laws and in so doing placed a stain upon the name which officials and the public had been establishing for the past ten years.

From the manner in which the lynchers are sought it will be possible to tell just how extensive is the sentiment in their behalf. If the sentiment of North Carolina exerts itself and insists upon the detection and conviction of the participants in the Negro's murder it will furnish the best of evidence that that state frowns upon mob rule and is unwilling to countenance any single outbreak that may occur.

THE HOSPITAL APPEAL

The appeal which is being made for financial assistance for the Backus hospital is one in which Norwich and the surrounding towns are bound to be keenly interested.

The maintenance of a hospital, modern and up to date in all particulars, is an asset to any community. It is in fact an institution of vital concern and upon which more and more dependence is being placed from year to year.

When the executive committee of the hospital sets forth its financial position, its needs, the steadily increasing use that is made of it and the problems with which it is confronted at the present time, there cannot fail to be appreciation of such a clear explanation of the situation and a recognition of the duty of the community under the circumstances.

It is quite evident that a hospital which is not sufficiently endowed to take care of all requirements must depend upon public support. This is particularly true when it is realized that so much of the service that is rendered is furnished far below the actual cost. Thus the appeal that is being made to the people of Norwich and neighboring towns cannot fail to arouse the necessary interest and the proper response on the part of those who are so directly concerned.

The hospital is an institution in which there is a common interest. The best service and the best facilities are demanded. It must be prepared to deal with any and all cases and it is impossible to overlook the fact that there is a community responsibility in keeping it up to the proper standard as to equipment and efficiency. Likewise it is also important that it meet its expenses. The worthiness of the cause justifies the appeal. It is one of those efforts which deserves to go well over the top.

DISCIPLINING DRY AGENTS

Some time ago it was stated by Director Woodcock of the prohibition enforcement service that agents would be held responsible for the use of their guns. He was speaking following one or more shootings in which the use of firearms was not considered justified.

Within the last few days Director Woodcock has announced the penalization of two agents for the manner in which they have made use of their guns. They had not done any shooting but they had drawn them in the course of discussions and altercations without justification and he makes clear that he does not intend to tolerate any such conduct on the part of law enforcers.

It is a very easy matter to abuse the authority with which an agent is vested. Much resentment has been aroused because of it in the past and it is the apparent purpose of the director to see that conditions do not return to those of previous days. He is keeping a close check upon the acts of his agents, giving heed to and investigating complaints and calling his men to account when the situation requires. By so doing he is giving more assurance to the public that it will not be mistreated and informing the overzealous agents that their greatest service to the work of enforcement lies in escaping rather than inviting the discipline to which some have been subjected.

Guns have been given to dry agents for self protection. It is not expected that they will take life or threaten those of the public with whom they come in contact without due cause. It is quite apparent that the berth of a dry agent is not always a happy one but that furnishes no justification for improper use of firearms or the drawing of a gun when the officials authority is asked for.

CUPID ON THE LINKS

"In the woodsy area of the Country club a young man was assisting a young woman out of a bright yellow roadster as caddies ran up to take their golf bags. It's presumptuous of me," she was saying, her beautiful gray eyes looking up at him through long back lashes, "I oughtn't to clutter up a golf course when I can't play golf. You've got to drive off first."

"Anything you say," the young man beamed, as they headed for the first tee and went directly to the sandbox.

Deliberately he placed the ball, took aim, swung his driver. Away spun the white speck skimming over the creek and up the hill. "No wonder you're champion of the club," she told him admiringly, "I can't play with a champion. Let the caddy put my bag into the car."

"Nothing of the kind," he objected, taking the driver her caddy offered, placing it into her hands. "Firm stance, now; left arm straight; eye on the ball; easy, swing back—let the clubhead lead; down now, snap it." The head of her driver hit loose ground behind the tee sifting drab earth over the ball.

"It's no use, Archibald," she smiled up at him, the gray eyes just as sweet; the lashes just as long. "I'm no sport. I can't hit a golfball. I can't even swim—afraid to take my feet off the bottom. I'm a coward. A dunce."

The caddies had walked on in the direction of the next hole. Other players were several holes ahead. However, to be certain no one would overhear, the young man glanced about before saying: "Would you call that clover blossom a coward because it couldn't be a cornstalk? Would you call that squirrel a dunce because he avoids the swimming pool?"

"If I'm to be compared to clover and squirrels I'll play golf," she vowed.

"Annabel," he asked, looking around again for safety, "do you know why I brought you out out here today?"

"To play golf."

"To test your reactions. Of all the things I don't want in this world it is to marry a girl who rides the same hobbies I do. I play golf and swim—to get away from things. When I marry I'll share everything but my hobbies."

"You talk as if you might be contemplating matrimony."

"My word, Annabel, I've thought about it so long and dreamed about it so much. I'm taking it for granted. That benden-knee stuff went out with crinoline."

He walked slowly along beside her, the first dry leaves of fall crunching beneath their tread. On the rustic bridge spanning the creek he steadied her arm more firmly than was absolutely necessary. His caddy had gone on to the next tee; hers was searching the creek for her ball. "If I had to play golf in fear of being overtaken by a wife on the green, suggesting we better not play another hole because the oven had been set to have dinner right now, or that it looked like rain and the windows had been left open—I'd—well, I'd give up golf."

Her caddy had found her ball and was placing it upon the fairway near the bank of the creek. "Let's see," she calculated, taking the iron club her caddy held out for her, "now I lie three—one into the water and one to lie out." She fanned the ball, then sent it twenty feet or so almost in the direction it should have gone.

"Annabel," he said, when he had placed the clubs in the rumble seat and had climbed in front beside her, "you've taught me something."

"Not about golf," she laughed.

"Yes, about golf. You've taught me I don't care as much about it as I thought I did, or rather that I don't love golf the less, as the poet said, I love you more. Why, if you were at home—our own home—and I knew you were waiting dinner for me I'd be so anxious to get there I might spill my clubs on the way and never miss them. I feel mean because I made you try so hard this afternoon to prove you aren't the meek little clover blossom you really are. You just naturally weren't made from a sports mode—you're made to wear a hostess gown and sit at the piano."

"Archibald, you sound mid-Victorian. If you must sit and listen, why then sit and listen to the radio," she told him impishly, as he switched on the ignition and pressed the starter. "I may not have time to touch the piano because I am going to practice golf and swimming all day every day, and I'll be dead tired every night. You see, the man I'm engaged to does both, and always planned to be a real pal to my husband."

The young man blanched in spite of his deep suntan. "Engaged?" he breathed. "To whom are you engaged?" he managed to ask—desperately.

"To you, silly." The young woman smiled up at him while he glanced about instinctively to make certain they were not being observed.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20—About the only thing resembling a presidential boom discernable on the political weather map in August was the Frank Roosevelt movement in the democratic camp.

It had much substance to it.

You found it discussed by political writers not only in the great New York dailies, but all over the country. The only person observing utter silence about it seem to be Frank Roosevelt himself.

All this was before the late September democratic state convention in New York even had been called. That its main business would be nomination of Governor Roosevelt to succeed himself was a foregone conclusion.

And the New York political writers found it expedient to write that when Al Smith, Roosevelt and Johnnie Raskob held a get-together conference long before convention time, one of its purposes was to arrange that Al put Roosevelt in nomination when the time came.

Turn About

That would be a fitting gesture, no doubt. Who does not recall that Roosevelt dubbed Smith "the happy warrior" of politics in his speech of presidential nomination at Houston in 1928.

Or who with political memory can forget the picture Roosevelt presented at the New York endurance contest in 1924 when he also nominated Smith to top the ticket.

Without doubt Al would most gladly return the compliment, and do a good job of it, if so desired when the democrats meet for a "Roosevelt day" in the state. That's what the convention will amount to by all accounts.

The odd thing about it is that virtually every Washington politician to whom the Bystander talked about it seemed to feel that if Smith did make the gubernatorial nominating speech, it would merely be a preliminary gesture.

He would be scheduled to repeat two years later at a democratic national convention. That's how even republicans in Washington seem to feel about the Roosevelt boom.

Early Bird

It is not often that a presidential boom gets launched by the "outs" in national politics before the bye-elections results can be counted.

After the "off-year" voting, presidential lightning rods spring up in every direction.

But this notion that Frank Roosevelt might be the democratic standard bearer in 1932 got going as far back as 1928. The Bystander heard it at Houston and heard it again in New York election night when Roosevelt's victory in the gubernatorial contest was reasonably clear.

As a matter of fact, unless rumor has been seriously at fault all these months, it was Al Smith who nominated Roosevelt for governor that time. He was drafted against his will, without his knowledge, in a desperate attempt to save New York's electoral vote for Governor Al.

So he ran, and won in "a hoss race" as Roosevelt himself described it. He won more than he then realized.

Stories That Recall Others

Willing to Oblige

"That's a pretty bad cold you have, old man. What are you doing for it?"

"Today I'm doing what Jones told me to do. It's Simpson's day tomorrow and the next is Brown's. If I'm not better by Sunday, and if I'm still alive, I shall try your remedy. Just write it down on this card, will you?"

Keep It Numb

One evening at the dinner table Jerry's father was discussing business matters with Jerry's mother. Suddenly he turned to Jerry. "What we've just been talking about is a secret," he said. "Can you keep a secret, Jerry?"

"Sure," answered Jerry. "I never told mother about you breaking her vase last week, did I?"

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Impy Learns From Timmy

Always be prepared to learn;
The wise will never knowledge spurn.
—Old Mother Nature.

Two odd little cousins sat on the old stone wall in the midst of the Black Shadows. They were Impy the black Chipmunk and Timmy the Flying Squirrel. Impy should have been at home in bed. Yes, sir, that is where he should have been. But he liked to be out in the early evening and it was all on account of that black coat of his. It gave him a feeling of safety which he would not have had in the usual striped coat of the Chipmunk family. Until Timmy had suddenly landed beside him, Impy hadn't known that he had such a cousin.

"I've seen my cousin Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel and my other cousin Chatterer the Red Squirrel. I have seen them many times. Why have I never seen you before?" said Impy.

Timmy chuckled. He seemed to be full of chuckles. "I've seen you before," said he.

"I'd like to know when," cried Impy.

"Several times," replied Impy. "I've watched you when you didn't have the least idea I was anywhere near. That's what comes from having the right kind of eyes for seeing at night."

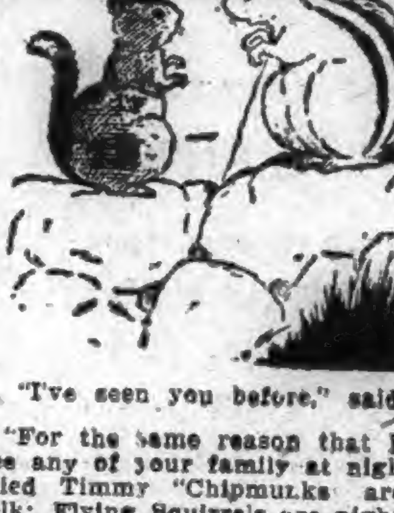
Impy leaned forward and looked closely at Timmy's eyes. "They are large," said he. "Do you really think you can see better than I can?"

"I don't think anything about it; I know," replied Timmy. "Do you see that beetle over there crossing that stone?"

Impy looked where Timmy pointed, but he saw no bettle. In fact, he could do little more than make out the outline of the stone. "I don't see any beetle," said he, "and I don't believe you do either."

Instead of replying, Timmy suddenly darted forward and in a moment he was back. He had a large beetle. "Here it is," said he, and proceeded to pound it on the stone on which they were sitting. Then he ate it and smacked his lips. Meanwhile, Impy was feeling very foolish. He realized that Timmy really had seen that beetle and that, therefore, Timmy's eyes must be better than his own.

"Why have I never seen you in the daytime?" Impy asked.



"I've seen you before," said he

"For the same reason that I never see any of your family at night," replied Timmy. "Chipmunks are day folk; Flying Squirrels are night folk."

"Can't you see in the daytime?" asked Impy.

"Yes," replied Timmy. "But the light hurts my eyes. I don't like it. So I sleep through the day and come out when the Black Shadows arrive. When it is time for jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun to climb up in the blue, blue sky in the early morning, and the Black Shadows are hurrying back to the Purple Hills, I go home to bed. But aren't you taking a chance? One who can see no better than you can should not be out at this hour. Supposing Hooty the Owl should come this way."

"I've heard of him," said Impy. "Can he see as well as you can?"

"Just as well," replied Timmy. "I don't know but that he can see a little better. I have to watch out for Hooty the Horned Owl and Spooky the Screech Owl every night, just as you have to watch out for members of the Hawk family during the day. If you'll take my advice, cousin, you won't venture far from your doorstep after shadow time."

YOUR HEALTH

Hemorrhoids

By Frank D. Jennings, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute.)

Hemorrhoids or "piles" are nothing more nor less than varicosities (like varicose veins on the legs) of one of the circular veins which surround the lower end of the rectum. Of course, they may become complicated by fissures (cracks in the mucous membrane), fistulas (false passages) or other inflammatory conditions, or they may split open and bleed. When we hear of "bleeding piles", "itching piles", etc., we may be sure that some complication of the primary condition is present.

When men began to walk upright one of the penalties they incurred was liability to hemorrhoids, for, in this position, the entire weight of the abdominal organs press down into the pelvis instead of being supported by the front wall of the body and the lower ribs, as is the case with the four-footed animals.

If we look over the conditions which predispose to the development of these troublesome little tumors, we see what must be done to prevent them. The diet must be laxative and must contain enough fruits and fresh vegetables to prevent constipation. Too much mustard, ketchup spices and such "hot" things will irritate the rectum.

Long hours on the feet, without lying down for a few minutes to rest, bring heavy pressure to bear in this region; and this is, of course, especially true in pregnant women.

Strong purgatives also cause trouble, because they result in "straining," with consequent congestion. Plenty of fruit and, if necessary, a little mineral oil are much better.

Another matter of importance is the thorough cleansing of the anal region after going to the toilet. It should also be thoroughly washed at least once a day.

It is very dangerous to look upon every troublesome condition about the anus as "nothing but piles." It may be only that but also it may be an abscess, a fistula, or even the first and curable stage of cancer of the rectum. All who think they have hemorrhoids should see a doctor at once, and let him decide.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

"Why I Believe in Prohibition"

Mr. Editor:

Allow me to quote Henry Ford's views on prohibition, as told to Stanley High:

"You want to know why I believe in prohibition?" he asks. "The answer is out there"—pointing toward the window. "I believe in prohibition because I believe in the new industrial order that America is creating. Booze is as much out of place in that new order as a horse and buggy in downtown Detroit—and a lot more dangerous.

"The horse-and-buggy order is gone and liquor had to go with it. Society could take chances back of a dashboard that it can't afford to take behind a steering wheel!

"Well, if we want our streets lined again with shops that do that kind of business, we shall have to put up our automobiles and go back to hitching-posts. Automobiles won't go straight unless they are driven straight, and they don't know the way home. An industrial order that has discarded reins, dashboards and a team that knows the way home can't afford to line its highways with 'regulated liquor shops'—not with a forty horse power motor under the toe of a drinking citizen.

"Oh yes, you don't need to remind me that there are still some drunks. They are very rare now. So rare that we comment on them. And the wets tell us that we can eliminate the few remaining drinkers we have by increasing the accessibility of the thing they drink!

"The public demand for sobriety—and that is all that prohibition is—has always gone hand in hand with the responsibility of power. Even in the old liquor days when we put a man in charge of a locomotive, we demanded that he be sober.

"The demand of 'cocktail society' that its 'personal liberty' be not infringed doesn't impress me either. There is no high social sense in back door consultations with bootleggers. That portion of 'high society' that buys bootleg liquor is just a part of our underworld. Real high quality society long ago decided that its drawing rooms were not to become successors to the abolished saloon.

"The rank and file of American women know what they know. Hardly a family that did not offer its sacrifice of poverty, shame, moral death on the altar of liquor. Hardly a woman in America who does not intuitively know that liquor is her enemy. The women know! They started this work of prohibition. They finished it. They will see it through."

Speaking of closing time, Mr. Ford said, "And they will go home. If the wets had their way, those men would run a gamut of retail liquor shops. A lot of those men would stop. And they would stay long enough to make their home-coming a very different matter from what it is now. It is more important that these men should get home sober and with their week's pay than that an irresponsible minority of society drinkers should be guaranteed the 'right' to stock their cellars without embarrassment.

"In the third place, with regulated liquor traffic doing business along our highways, the continued use of the automobile would be impossible. If I knew of one good thing to say of liquor, I would say it. But a lifetime of observation of its destruction amongst friends and acquaintances and workingmen leaves me not a single word to say in its behalf.

"Who is for prohibition repeal? I don't seem to recognize, among our noted repealers, any names that are representative of the service ideal in business or in politics or in any other walk of life.

"The 'me first' crowd don't disturb me in the least. Prohibition in the constitution is notice that we are going to remove another disease from our country. And I expect to live to see the work fully accomplished."

Anyone wishing to read the whole of this fine article will find it in Christian Herald issue of August 16th.

The 18th amendment does not take "away the control of individual personal habits (that do not violate anyone else's rights)" because under existing industrial conditions no one can drink liquor and operate a motor vehicle without "violating someone else's rights". In other words as the man said to his one-time friend—"Your liberty stops where my nose begins."

Personal indulgence seems to have taken the place in the world of self-sacrifice or self denial with many people.

ROAD MEN OF 55 NATIONS TO STUDY BUILDING METHODS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Expressed in many languages, the common theme of good roads for all the world will be studied this fall in Washington by road builders from 55 countries attending the sixth international road congress.

The highway conference will be held October 6 to 11, at the invitation of the United States government, with an object to continuing studies begun in Paris in 1908 and later conducted in other world capitals.

It is expected by Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the bureau of public roads and secretery-general of the American organizing commission, to be more representative than the preceding congress.

A particularly large representation is expected from the Latin-American republics, for whose benefit papers prepared for the six questions of the agenda are being translated into Spanish for the first time. The material for discussion also is being prepared in German, French, and English.

Construction and maintenance and and traffic and administration will comprise the two sections of the agenda. Under the first heading road men will tell of results obtained in their countries by use of cement, bricks and other artificial paving.

COMMERCE CHAMBER MEMBERS ADOPT THREE AMENDMENTS TO BY-LAWS

By a vote of 51 to 3, the members of the Norwich chamber of commerce have adopted three changes in the by-laws, according to an announcement made Wednesday at the chamber offices. The amendments provide for an important change in the method of appointing secretaries for the chamber. Under the old by-laws, the secretary was named by the executive committee of the chamber, subject to approval by the board of directors, the executive committee fixed the secretary's salary and the secretary served at the pleasure of the committee. Under the amended section the board of directors name the secretary and fix his salary, the secretary to serve at the pleasure of the board.

The articles, as amended now read as follows:

Section 2, Article 3—At the September meeting, prior to the election of directors, the president shall open the meeting for additional nominations, from the floor. All directors, however nominated, shall be elected by a majority vote of the members present at the annual meeting.

Section 3, Article 5—The secretary shall be appointed by the board of directors who shall fix his compensation and he shall serve during the pleasure of the board.

Sec. 2, Article 6—The president and two members of the Norwich chamber of commerce, not directors, but chosen by the directors, shall constitute a committee on committees which shall appoint all committees, excepting the executive committee, subject to confirmation by the board of directors. The executive committee shall be appointed by the board of directors at their first meeting after the annual meeting and its members shall be chosen from among the officers and directors of the chamber.

ISSUE APPEAL FOR W. W. BACKUS HOSPITAL

An appeal for financial aid for the W. W. Backus hospital is being mailed to citizens of Norwich and surrounding towns by the executive committee of the hospital. Accompanying the appeal letter is the following statement:

The William W. Backus hospital is an institution of public service ready at all times to open its doors to the sick and injured of Norwich and neighboring towns, without respect to race, religion or ability to pay.

It is not privately owned, nor is it municipally supported. The executive committee give their services gratis, and the superintendent and nurses are not highly salaried.

Only once in the thirty-eight years of its existence has the Backus hospital appealed to the community for funds. That was in 1923 for the building of the nurses' home. However, in these latter years of higher costs the endowment is beginning to prove inadequate, and a certain deficit is accruing each year.

The executive committee realizes that this should not go on and they have decided upon the plan in operation with many other hospitals of appealing to the community which the hospital serves for subscription help.

In addition, funds are needed for new equipment and improvements of all sorts. This is quite essential in order to keep pace with constantly advancing hospital standards, and to maintain our rank as a Class A hospital.

The immediate needs are for a new operating room, kitchen and laundry. All money subscribed, over and above the current expense need, will be applied on this improvement fund.

The financial status of the hospital is briefly as follows: The maintenance cost for last year was $150,901.90. The income from patients was $90,155.51. The difference between these two amounts represents the free and less-than-cost service of the hospital.

It will readily be seen that without the endowment it would have been necessary long ago either to increase very greatly patient fees, or to ask for more than $60,000 in subscriptions, or to close the hospital. However, the endowment yielded last year $45,480.70, and the state appropriates $8,500 so that the additional amount required is reasonable.

The cost per day of the care of each patient is $5.14. In 1924 it was $3.93. House patients pay only $2.50 per day so that their care is given at less than half its cost to the hospital.

The community is fortunate in having a hospital of the size and standing of the William W. Backus hospital. It has beds for 110 adult patients, 15 children and 25 babies. The daily average for last year was 79, so that the capacity is not strained, and no one fails of admission.

There are 53 nurses, graduate and students, in regular attendance. The new nurses' home accommodates 55.

The service of the hospital increases steadily from year to year. In 1920 there were 1,376 patients treated; in 1929 there were 2,320. The number of days treatment more than doubled in those nine years.

The sum of $20,000 in subscriptions is urgently desired for the current fiscal year. About $8,000 or $10,000 will care for the current expenses over and above income from endowment and the state appropriation. The balance will be used toward a fund for a new elevator, kitchen, laundry and operating room. Of course an over-subscription would be welcome.

NORWICH ROTARY CLUB ENJOY LUDLOW OUTING

About 35 members of the Norwich Rotary club were guests of William H. Oat, former Rotarian, at "Ludlow" the summer home of Mr. Oat in North Stonington, on Wednesday. The meeting of the club was held at noon with a delicious luncheon of chowder, salad, cold meats and watermelon being served. The meeting was conducted by Dr. R. R. Agnew who presided in the absence of Harold D. Larrabee, president of the club. During the luncheon there was a very humorous talk by James C. Higgins of North Adams, Mass. Mr. Higgins quoted largely from the newspaper poets of today and yesteryear in a very interesting manner.

After the luncheon the afternoon was spent in various ways, some electing to play croquet, some indulging in bridge and others in just enjoying the beautiful North Stonington scenery.

THE HOTTEST PLACES ON THE EARTH

America's hottest is not so hot.

When heat waves scorch the Middle West, sear the Imperial Valley and bake the East, it is hotter somewhere else.

In Massawa or Timbuktu, Sind or In Salah: that is where the fahrenheit frolics, mercury picks the high notes, and the sands of the desert grow cold only toward midnight.

"If you send someone to Massawa," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its Washington, D. C., headquarters, "you can be sure you are sending him to the hottest place on earth.

"Massawa is hot because it is on the Red Sea; not because the sea is red, because it isn't red, it is blue like any other sea; but because the Red Sea's shores simmer under the sun, fall, winter, spring and summer.

"It is never cold in Massawa. Nor even cool! Massawane have to do all their shivering at 70; the thermometer goes no lower.

"There are cities that run higher temperatures; Massawa's maximums reach about 105. But for all-year consistent, steady, fever heat, the Eritrean port take the palm. Its mean temperature, that is, the yearly average, January to December, night and day, is 86 degrees fahrenheit!

"Parched Massawa is east of Suez, one of the first thirst-raising stops 'on the road to Mandalay' which is itself no summer resort. Mandalay and Rangoon, too, may be cool 'when the dawn comes up like thunder,' but the mercury has hit 110 by noon in Mandalay while Rangoon, with a humidity level of 93, is the wettest large city in the world. Mandalay's all year temperature average is 81.9 degrees, hot enough and some to spare by comparison with Yuma, Arizona, an American hot spot with a thermometer average of only 71.

"Yet the United States, along with its golf records, skyscraper records, and flag-pole sitting records, held the heat record of the world until sizzling Azizia won it. Death Valley's 134.1 degrees stood as the hottest ever recorded until 1925 when the little village of Italian Tripoli with the hot name topped it with 136.4 degrees fahrenheit. However, other parts of the Sahara have reported temperatures, unofficial, as high as 154 degrees!

"India's high temperatures are notorious and the worst of them are to be found in Jacobabad, in the desert of Sind. No place in the world probably has longer, hotter summers than Jacobabad, where the average temperature for May is 95 degrees; June, 99; July, 96, August 93.

"India studied the problem of how to be cool in a heat wave centuries ago and solved it with the punkah, the forefather of the electric fan. Punkahs are huge flaps hung from the ceiling and ceaselessly swung back and forth by a servant who sits outside the room monotonously pulling a rope.

"Another native device to defeat the heat is conspicuous at Hyderabad where a visitor arriving in summertime sees what appears to be a flock of card tables flying over the city. On second glance it develops that the 'card tables' are not flying but are mounted at crazy angles above the roof tops. The angles at which the tablelike squares hang are not so crazy as they look. Each tilts in the same direction, which is toward the prevailing wind. Hyderabad's theory is that the wind, striking the ventilator, will be deflected into an open shaft leading down into the house. The city lies in the desert which cools off quickly at night at which time the 'card tables' are expected to serve another purpose, that of encouraging a draft that will carry the hot air up the shafts and out of the houses.

"But the Far East's age-old methods give way before the Occident's latest inventions. The King of Siam has ordered a refrigerating device which will make his palace in the Tropics as cool as an American motion picture theater."

THE VERDICT

When my friend, Jerry MacArthur, wishes to tell me some important bit of news, or to confess some sin or error he has committed, he always begins by asking me some strange apparently irrelevent question. This time he dug down into the archives of history and art.

"Do you know much about the sphinx, Bill?" he asked as we traveled the well-worn way of the suburbanite to his place of business; "she is a woman, isn't she?"

I nodded in assent. "I think she is," I replied.

Jerry continued: "She's supposed to harbor a secret behind an inscrutable smile, isn't she?"

"I think so," I returned. "I believe its the sphinx—or is it Mona Lisa?"

"Well, I don't know as it makes very much difference. Both of them are supposed to be women, and I'm not a bit surprised. There's my wife, for instance—"

I let my paper drop to my knees. "Oh," I said, significantly. "It's something about Bernice!"

"Yes, and pumpkin pie. She's just learning to bake. She never had the chance when she was young, and since she worked at the office the first two years of our married life she's never had the time to try her luck before."

"I suppose her first pie was a flop," I interrupted.

"Well, no, I don't think so. To tell the truth, I didn't eat very much of it. Naturally, I just took it for granted it was from the bakery and I only ate two bites. Bernice was sitting opposite me smiling—a sort of expectant, inscrutable smile, a Mona Lisa effect, you know, waiting for me to start on a psalm of praise to the merits of that pie—and I didn't!

"I pushed the pie aside instead and started to read the evening paper. I just wasn't hungry for pie that night. I suppose the reason for that was the fact that I had more than my share of pumpkin pie that day. I had been particularly hungry for pie for a long time so at 10 o'clock I slipped away from the office down to the lunch counter and had two pieces and a cup of coffee.

"For lunch I ordered two more pieces and then, not to be outdone by my previous record, I excused myself from the office again about 3 o'clock and stocked up on two more pieces.

"On the way home from work a sort of depressed feeling began to steal over me. I can't exactly describe the sensation but it was anything except delightful—"

"Now if Bernice had run into me as I entered and had thrown her arms around me and had said: 'Dearest, I have made my first pie. I want you to tell me all about it. I do hope you'll like it!' Why then, things would have been easy for me. I would have eaten that pie! And I would have given it a fair verdict, too, bringing out its good points just as strongly as I dared. Bernice is a sweet kid and I wouldn't have hurt her feelings for the world.

"But this was a surprise pie. And Bernice just sat and watched me all through supper time. Her smile was —she was smiling like, you know, like—"

I nodded and rose to reach for my hat as we were entering the terminal. "And then," I finished, "the little wife cried and you have felt like a brute ever since."

"Exactly," my friend replied sadly.

"Well, how goes everything today?" I asked Jerry the next morning as we again made ourselves comfortable for our Chicago-bound trip.

Jerry looked at me dully.

"Did you say it was the sphinx or Mona Lisa who has the inscrutable smile?"

"Why?" I evaded.

"Well, last night we had pie again," explained my friend. "And as I naturally hadn't been stocking up on pie all that day, I ate it with a relish. Bernice smiled when I asked for another helping.

"'You seem to like it pretty well,' she said, smiling like—

"Yes, yes, go on," I encouraged him.

"'Why honey,' I replied enthusiastically as I cut into my second piece, 'it's a wow! The crust is just right —not too tough and not too rich and the pumpkin is spiced perfectly. To tell the truth it's the best pie I've ever eaten! I can truthfully say that it is fully as delicious as the pies mother bakes.'

"'Well, I'm not a bit surprised,' Bernice responded with a twinkle in her eye, 'this is one of your mother's pies. She sent it over by Eloise this afternoon!'"—Chicago News.

OPPORTUNITY NOW FOR REDUCING NEXT WINTER'S FOOD BILLS

Sugar and Fruit are so Low in Price That Home Preserving is Most Profitable

Every housewife has the chance to "get ahead" financially next winter by putting up fruit now. Fruit is in abundance everywhere and sugar is at a "rock-bottom" price.

A little concentrated effort will result in a cupboard well stocked with canned fruits, jellies, jams and relishes from which one may draw freely throughout the winter months.

Since fruit belongs in the diet, and should appear in some form every meal, the economy of a home supply is readily apparent.

Menu planning is much easier when preserves, jellies, jams and relishes are within reach. Meats and fish are much more appetizing with a tart-sweet jelly or sweet pickle as an accompaniment. And there is nothing nicer than crackers, preserves and cheese for dessert. A bit of sweet makes the meal complete. The Sugar Institute.

HAGEN SHOOTS BRILLIANT GOLF TO LEAD FIELD IN WESTERN OPEN

INDIANWOOD GOLF CLUB, Orion, Mich., Aug. 20—(AP)—Reports of Walter Hagen's complete downfall from the ranks of golfdom's mighty appear to have been grossly exaggerated.

The once royal flush of the links, minus an important golf crown for the first time in 17 long years, spiked those reports for once anyway today, when he swept over the Indianwood Golf club course with a bristling record-smashing 67, five strokes under par, to lead a field of 142 in the qualifying round of the western open golf championship.

Not only was the total a course record but it marked the second day in a row that the "Haig" toured the course in the sixties. He carded a 66 in practice yesterday but the score was not accepted as a record.

Sir Walter's great round gave him the lead by one stroke over another far-famed stylist, Johnny Farrell, of New York, and a three shot lead over Charles Guest, Detroit professional and present southern California open champion, who finished third.

On his record-breaking round today, Hagen played a flawless game except for his second shots, had they been a trifle stronger, he might have trimmed even three or more strokes from his advantage over par.

All told, he speared an eagle, three birdies, and played all the remaining holes with one exception perfectly. His one "bad hole" came on the short 13th where his approach landed short and his eight fot put for a par three stuck on the lip of the cup and refused to sink. Hagen's eagle came on the first hole, a 460 yard stretch. A 30 foot down hill putt accomplished the trick.

Today's qualifying round, staged for those who failed to place among the low scorers in the 1929 tournament, turned out to be something of a "joker", except for Hagen's return to form. Out of the 14, who tried, 121 qualified by shooting 84's or better. Among the "big shots" who were not forced to qualify and who will open their first drives in tomorrow's first 18 hole round of the 72 hole medal fight for the title, were Tommy Armour, of Detroit, defending champion; Horton Smith and Gene Sarazen, of New York; Ed Dudley, of Wilmington, Del; Jock Hutchinson, Harry Hampton and Al Espinosa, Chicago professionals; Densmore Shute, Lima Ohio; Henry Cluci, Stratford, Conn., and Emmet French, Southern Pines, N. C.

Farrell, who, like Hagen, was forced to qualify because he did not compete last year, had rounds of 33 and 35 today and let the field until Hagen posted his score among the final finishers. The former national open champion snared two birdies and one eagle. The eagle came on the first hole like Hagen's and was speared by a 40-foot putt. Johnny muffed par by one stroke on but one hole—the 434 yard sixth, where his second landed in a trap and took the extra toll.

Because of the big room for qualifiers there were no upsets today. Charles "Chick" Evans, Jr., of Chicago, former champion, qualified easily with a 74 as did Tony Manero, New York professional and runner up in the recent St. Paul open, who tallied a 75.

Other low scores today were:

Johnny Fiscer, Fort Thomas, Ky., amateur 71.
Emerick Kocis, Detroit, 71.
Al Watrous, Detroit, 71.
Jimmy Noonon, Chicago, 72.
Al Marchi, Urbana, Ohio, 72.

Cards by Hagen and Farrell, in the 18 hole qualifying round:

Par out 543, 434, 444—35.
Hagen out, 333, 434, 444—32.
Farrel out, 3433, 435, 443—33.
Par in, 445, 345, 435—37—72.
Hagen in, 434, 435, 435—35—67.
Farrell in, 345, 345, 434—35—68.

REDS BREAK LOSING STREAK TO BEAT BROOKLYN TWICE

CINCINNATI, Aug. 20—(AP)—The Reds broke their long losing streak today by extending Brooklyn's series of defeats and sent the Robins deeper into third place in the National league standing with a pair of 2 to 1 defeats in the two games of a double header.

Brooklyn's loss was not as serious as it might have been, for both of its rivals, Chicago and New York, were defeated and the Robins fell back only a half game in the pennant chase.

Benny Frey got the best of Old Adolfo Luque in the first game, holding the Robins to five hits while Cincinnati made a little better use of seven blows. The second contest was a draw battle between Ray Kolp and Ray Phelps until the ninth inning when another pitcher, Red Lucas, came in as a pinch bitter with two on base and doubled to drive in Heilmann with the winning run. NEW YORK LOSES THROUGH FITZSIMMONS' WILDNESS IN 7TH

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20—(AP)—Fred Fitzsimmons' wildness in the seventh inning, today cost him a chance for his ninth straight victory and cost the New York Giants a chance to make a big gain in the National league pennant race as the Cardinals won the final game of the series, 5 to 4.

Fitzsimmons made a wild pitch in the seventh which allowed the tying run to score and the Cardinals put over the winning tally in the same inning when Catcher Hogan dropped a throw. Hogan tried to block Jimmy Wilson away from the plate as he tried to score on Adams' grounder but the rival catcher catapulted himself against Hogan who lost the ball in the collision.

The Giants took an early lead by bunching hits with an error and a sacrifice for three runs in the second inning. But George Fisher returned these tallies when he batted for Bell in the fifth and hit a home run with two on base.

Although defeated, the Giants gained a half game on the Brooklyn Robins, who lost two to Cincinnati. The score:

Nebraska's greatest export income comes from lard.

Tony Bernard, the "bad boy" of the City league is defiant.

In fact, Tony doesn't care who knows it either. Tony, who has been a thorn in the collective sides of the arbitration board, is under the impression that he's up against a cold deck.

The crafty pilot claims that in more ways than one he has been given the muddy end of the stick to hold. For example; The other night when Tony's team was playing the Thermos the Ideals were not provided with a water bucket, yet the Thermos had one.

Then again the Thermos was allowed to use a player not in uniform yet when Tony goes out on the coaching line he is ordered off unless he has a hat on.

And when the league supply of balls runs out Tony is asked to throw in a ball that belongs to his team. Now Tony is going to defy this arbitration board and make 'em like it.

The crafty manager of the Ideals said last night that he was going to put a pitcher in tonight's game that never played in the league before. This new player doesn't have the approval of the board to pitch—and the league emphatically states that a new player must be approved by the board.

How the board is going to treat Tony tonight is a matter of speculation. Will they order him off the lot for insubordination or will they allow the game to go on and then make the score to suit their fancy.

Can you imagine Officer Luke Riley escorting Tony to the gates and telling him to be on his way? I can't but that is what is liable to happen tonight if reports are true.

You folks better be at the game tonight if you want to see some fun. That's a tip, and you can depend on it.

PHILLIES DEFEAT CUBS IN PLAYOFF GAME; GET 5 HOMERS

CHICAGO, Aug. 20—(AP)—Philadelphia sprayed Wrigley field with home runs today to defeat the Cubs, 10 to 8, in the playoff of their twice tied game. The defeat, did not damage the National league champions' lead over New York, which lost to St. Louis, 5 to 4.

Although the Cubs peppered Ray Benge for 17 hits to 13 obtained by the Phillies off Lynn Nelson and Bob Osborn, the easterners mixed in five home runs. Davis got two, the second one with a pair of runners on, while Chuck Klein, Frank O'Doul and Don Hurst got one each.

Al Shealy pitched the last inning and a fraction and held the Phils hitless, but the Cubs could do no damage to Benge in the final stages.

Chicago won three of the five game series, which with three out of four over Brooklyn, and a whole series over Boston, gave the Bruins 10 victories in 13 games of the home stand. The score:

"Y" Closes Season Tonight

Tonight's game in the Junior league will be between the P. N. A. C. and the Y. M. C. A. This marks the last game for both teams and is the last chance for the "Y" to come through with a victory, they previously having lost every game. The "Y" should be given credit however, for the way they have appeared for all their scheduled games and if they play as well tonight as they did Monday night, when they held the Italian club down to a 4 to 1 score, the Polish nine should find plenty of opposition. Probable batteries are Mercik or Watters and Kozlowski for the P. N. A. C. and Rusillo or Senesk and Stephano for the "Y". The game is scheduled for 6:30 p. m. sharp

ROYALS RETAIN THIRD PLACE IN LEAGUE BY BEATING ITALIAN CLUB

By virtue of their 3 to 1 win at the Academy campus last night the Royals broke the three game winning streak of the Italians and kept their hold on third place in the City league chase.

Once again, hits were at a minimum, the pitchers once again grabbing off all of the glory. Tommy Simcox and Rabbitt Gauthier, two of the most effective slow ballers in the circuit, hooked up in a duel and Tommy outgeneraled his more youthful rival. In the seven innings of play the "old master" gave but three scattered hits while Gauthier's allowance was six. Simmy whiffed an even half dozen against Gauthier's five.

Although the score was close and the game at times was fairly excitable there were a number of misplays, both clubs contributing their share, each having five.

The Royals counted their first run in the early half of the opening frame and added the other two in the third, three muffs figuring in the latter scores. The only Italian run was the result of a hit, two errors and a sacrifice and came in the second inning. Eddie Hamill and Natorsky, second baseman and shortstop on the Royal nine, respectively, led the hitters with two apiece, one of Natorsky's being a double. The rival third basemen, Cummings of the Royals and T. Kegler of the Italian club, featured afield with several brilliant stops. The score:

Ideals Play Smokers Tonight.

Tony Bernard's Ideals and the Smokers go on exhibition at the campus this evening. Although neither club has any chance to cop off the league pennant they are traveling at a fair clip right now and should put on a nice performance. Both showed once this week, the Smokers against the Royals and the Ideals with the Thermos. As will be remembered the West Siders won their game and Bernard's pets played another tie game with the Bottlers.

After all there really is some importance attached to the outcome of tonight's game inasmuch as the loser drops into the cellar. The Smokers are the present tenants but can move out by upsetting the gasmen.

Good old Bob Shaw will probably get the Ideal pitching assignment with either Butsy Weisgraber or Magnan the Smoke Shop starter. There is a possibility that Zip Gero, who on Monday beat the Royals, may get the call.

ELKS SWAMP ITALIANS IN JUNIOR GAMES

The Elks defeated the Italian Young Men's club in Wednesday's Junior league game, whitewashing them 13 to 0. Earlier in the season, these two teams battled to a 2 to 2 tie score, but it was a far different story last night. The Elks had no trouble with the combined offerings of Angelone and Burelle, the two Italian pitchers, while Fuller held the I. Y. M. C. batters completely in check, allowing them but five hits. An odd feature of the game was that only three assists were turned in by both sides combined, one by the Elks and two by the Italians, most of the outs being outfield flys and strikeouts.

After scoreless first inning, the Elks collected seven runs in the second on six hits, a walk and a hit batsman. They added three more in the fifth and a like number in the sixth, bringing their total to 13.

Bamber and Hamill led the Elks with the stick with three hits out of four times at bat, while Wilk and Peltier and Peltier of the Italian club, each garnered two hits out of as many trips to the plate.

SIMMONS IMPROVES AVERAGE BY CLOUTING FOUR SINGLES

Al Simmons clouted his way back into Big Six prominence yesterday although he could not improve his standing in the sextet. The only American league member in action, Simmons did almost enough hitting for the three, getting four safe wallops in five trips to the plate. He improved his average by five points, bringing it up to .384.

Chuck Klein, in fourth place ahead of Simmons, gained a point with a homer and a double in four times up, going to .391. The two leaders, Bill Terry and Babe Herman, again lost ground, Terry dropping a point to .409 with one hit in four attempts and Herman slipping down four to .395 as he hit only once in seven trips to the plate. AL SINGER SIGNS TWO CONTRACTS WITH GARDEN

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—(AP)—Al Singer, world's lightweight boxing champion, today signed two contracts with Madison Square Garden corporation, one to meet Jimmy McLarnin, in a non-titular bout at the Yankee stadium, September 11 and the other to defend his title against Tony Canzoneri, in the Garden arena on November 14.

Hymie Caplin, manager of Singer, signed for the young Jewish champion for both of the bouts while McLarnin is expected here from Vancouver, B. C., about the 28th of the month to officially sign his part of his contract. Frank Bruen, general manager of the Garden, said however, that McLarnin had agreed to the fight and that they would meet at 142 pounds with each fighter taking a cut of 25 per cent of the gate receipts.

The bout with Canzoneri, former featherweight champion, will be the first championship contest for Singer since winning the title from Sammy Mandell in the Yankee stadium, last month. Sam Goldman signed for the Italian scrapper today.

Three sheep judging schools have been held by the University of Tennessee this summer.

DEFEAT OF SARAH PALFREY IS UPSET IN NAT. TENNIS

Leading at 4-1 in the final set, the little Brookline, Mass., stylist suddenly weakened under a steady fire from the racquet of her western rival, Dorothy Weisel of Sacramento, and went down to unexpected defeat by scores of 6-2, 6-8, 6-4.

In the previous set the eastern player had turned the tide after facing match point twice and apparently was well in command of the situation when she struck an unaccountable slump. Her shots missed the lines buried themselves in the net with the result that her imperturbable opponent took five straight games for the match. In those fatal five games, two of which were won at love, Miss Palfrey was able to score a total of just three points.

The result was set down as a major upset although Miss Weisel has been playing brilliant tennis in her first trip east.

OKLA II WINS FIRST LEG IN DEEENSE OF TITLE

SOUTHPORT, Conn., Aug. 20—(AP)—After sailing bow to bow down the home stretch at the close of a thrilling race, the Okla II, defending champion, sailed by Joseph F. Watkins and Miss Ruth Bedford, nosed out the Jessica, of the Peconic and Gardiner's Bay Yacht club fleet by a scant half length this afternoon to capture the first race of the Atlantic coast star class championship series over the course off Southport.

The 1929 champion, representing the Pequot Yacht club, staged a brilliant finish in defeating the Jessica, sailed by David Roberts. These two yachts pulled away from the rest of the field after rounding the final mark and battled on even terms down the home stretch. Each skipper attempted to get the lead and a great "luffing" battle started. Clever sailing by Watkins and Miss Bedford gave the Okla a scant lead which it barely held to the finish.

TILDEN BEATS SUTTER IN BRILLIANT MATCH

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 20.—(AP)—The top-ranking William T. Tilden, greatest showman that American tennis has produced in a half-century, today put on one of the most amazing exhibitions of his colorful court career when he defeated the rising young Clifford Sutter of New Orleans, intercollegiate and eastern grass court champion. The score was 7-5, 4-6, 6-3, 2-6, 8-6, and Tilden thus entered the quarter-finals of the current Newport casino invitation tournament.

The seven-times national champion, who has been limping about with a painful hip injury during the past week, dramatized his match with the Louisianan youth, who was the party of the second part recently when Tilden upset the tennis world by defaulting from the eastern grass court championship after being annoyed by a few hostile spectators.

When Tilden withdrew from the courts at Rye, N. Y., he was hopelessly trailing young Sutter. During today's match, however, he revealed enough of his old-time form to convince most of the gallery that he could defeat Sutter, a capable youth who has not yet acquired a good finishing stroke, in straight sets. Yet Lanky will, to give the gallery a thrill, allowed this match to run through five exciting sets before he called upon his wonderful assortment of strokes to clinch the victory.

The Ideal of a Craftsman

In every age men have striven with untiring patience for the achievement of an ideal. The name "STRADIVARIUS" on a violin immortalizes a master craftsman who lived true to his ideals.

Making a cigar of the finest quality was the ideal upon which in 1874, at Manchester, N. H., Roger G. Sullivan—starting with one cigar maker—founded 7-20-4. Today because of its ideal quality, 7-20-4 has grown to the largest hand-made cigar industry in the World.

Quality workmanship and the finest tobaccos are traditional with 7-20-4. The unswerving tenet of its founder—to keep faith with the public—has remained unchanged for over half a century. It is this firm principle which today refuses to alter that method of manufacture which has made 7-20-4 Cigar—FAMOUS FOR ITS CHOICE QUALITY.

WESTERLY

SEVERAL MATTERS DISPOSED OF IN PROBATE COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Aug. 20—An adjourned session of Westerly probate court was held Wednesday morning by Judge Edward M. Burke when the following probate matters were disposed of by the court:

Estate of William Barnes. On petition for probate of estate of testator, will was read and proved with witnesses to the will, Sheffield Green and Lillian K. Green, appearing to testify. At request of Attorney E. Butler Moulton, representing some of the heirs-at-law, the case was continued to the regular session of Sept. 2. By the will, $1 was left to each of the brothers, Jerry, Albert and Orsemas, the latter also being deeded a wood lot off the Boston Post road. Antique furniture was bequeathed to Mrs. Edris Tillinghast Datson and all the rest and residue of the property to Howand Barnes, a nephew.

Station Agent James J. Flaherty returned to Westerly Wednesday morning from a short visit to Pawtucket, R. I., and Boston. In assuming his duties as Westerly agent he made trips about the Westerly property of the New Haven road and inquired of the personnel and those allied with Westerly train services as to their duties and their equipment.

A party of Norwich motor tourists to Canada with Joseph Amantia of Westerly, as driver, who arrived in Montreal on Tuesday, left that city on Wednesday on their way to Quebec.

Mr. and Mrs. Raoul Bellefeur, formerly of Norwich, on a two weeks' vacation from his duties with Aetna Life Insurance Co., are at Misquamicut.

Herbert Macomber of New York, formerly of Westerly, is at Misquamicut and Watch Hill.

With the refusal of the Westerly town council to sanction the calling of a special Westerly financial town meeting to make available funds for grading work, and other similar operations around the new Westerly Junior High school building in process of erection off Highland avenue, the Westerly highway commission has directed the highway department, Engineer A. L. Leon, to do all possible in making the site approachable by highways with what funds are at hand. Efforts are now being directed in forwarding the work on Highland avenue so that in the spring of 1931 when the new junior high school is ready for occupancy that there will be no delay upon the part of the highway department.

The plan of the highway commissioners is to put their big shovel to work and bring the street down to its grade so that this fall and winter the water department of the town of Westerly, as well as the South County Public Service company, may do their work. That is the biggest part of the job anyway, and if this work is out of the way by the early spring and the ground is settled, there will be no difficulty, the commission feels, in getting the road in shape and surfacing the road after the financial town meeting in February.

But first of all they are anxious to take care of the water. Ninety feet of drain has been laid and the work is to progress as fast as possible toward Granite street.

The gas, water and sewer connections are already made with the school by Park avenue.

The expense for the town of bringing the road down to grade is not great but it must be done before all the sub-grade work can be done. Highland avenue will be a new street from Park avenue through to Granite street.

Monday the big shovel of the town started in on the Granite street end of the street to excavate. After the street has been brought down to grade the sewer work which will go lower than the culverts, will be started.

The problem facing the highway department is how to take care of the water from the new junior high school property. It will be necessary to bring most of the water through a drain on Highland avenue toward Granite street. It will go into the drain which runs the whole length of the hill with the surplus water running down the gutters in the street as it does now when that drain is filled up.

This drain runs through to the river and by taking the water down Granite street, it is believed no trouble will be caused with the brook which runs through the park as the water will not enter it. However, the highway department has not made any final decisions as yet in regard to these drains.

Sheriff Frederick T. Mitchell is the host today to a party of Westerly friends at the Rhode Island Republican club's annual meeting and outing at Crescent park, on Providence river.

Miss Dorothy R. Wilcox, assistant librarian at the Westerly Memorial and Public library, returned Tuesday evening from a six weeks' library course at Columbia University, New York city.

A hit-and-run driver in a car of Maryland registration, who was wanted by the state police of the Westbrook barracks of the Connecticut state police was stopped by Pawcatuck Police Patrolman Simeon Shortman as the auto came through the New Haven Railroad underpass at West Broad street Tuesday morning. The driver was held for an officer of the Groton barracks who turned the man over to the officers of the Westbrook barracks.

EXTRA MILEAGE

. . . because it is distilled in vacuum

There are many brands of good lubricating oil on the market. Use any one of them, keep your crankcase full, drain and refill regularly, and your motor should be safe from needless wear.

Oils made from pure Pennsylvania crude, of course, offer advantages that cannot be refined into or blended into oils made from cheaper grades of petroleum. A refiner's specification has much to do with the lubricating value of the oil. Still more important is the way he refines his oil. No one can add lubricating value to the oil contained in petroleum. But often much of this lubricating value is cooked away.

Years ago Pennsylvania Refining Company engineers set out to perfect a refining process that would not cook the life out of the oil. Their answer was the exclusive Penn-Drake process which subjects the oil to heat only fifteen seconds, a milder heat than boiling heat, made possible by distilling under vacuum, where ordinary processes often parboil the oil for thirty-six hours.

You will agree that they have produced a double-value oil when you try Penn-Drake. Buy it where you see the sign of the first oil well.

PROFESSIONAL OPERATORS PUSHED PRICES UP 1 TO 3 POINTS YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—(AP)—Strenuous efforts to make a bull market were pushed forward by professional operators in today's stock market, with a tinge of cheerfulness in the weekly steel trade reviews and firm commodity markets helping the cause.

The advance encountered considerable opposition, however, and confirmed bears hammered at some of the oils, coppers and specialties. Nevertheless, a long list of important shares closed with net gains of 1 to 3 points, with a few specialties up 4 to 20. Trading about approximated yesterday's pace, with total sales of 1,817,580 shares.

Omission of dividends by Shell Union and Warner Quinlan prompted selling of the oils, but reduction of Hudson Motors annual rate from $5 to $3 was less drastic than expected, and some short covering developed in the motor group.

"Iron Age" placed steel mill operations at 63 per cent of capacity, a gain of 1 per cent over last week, and the first upturn reported by this publication since the week after the mid-year closings. "Steel" pointed to firmness in the scrap market, with an advance of 50 cents a ton at Pittsburgh, as of favorable augury. The demand for structural steel, and for steel for railway equipment, ship building, pipe lines and machinery shows a little more activity, while inquiries from automobile manufacturers remains light. Both U. S. Steel and Bethlehem rose more than 2 points, but lost part of their advance before the close.

The coppers were depressed by continued slackness of demand for the red metal. Producers and consumers appear deadlocked over the price, which continues 10 3-4 cents bid and 11 asked. Kennecott sagged 2 points to a new low for the present stock, and Federal Mining, a comparatively inactive issue, most of which is held by American Smelting, sold at 115, the lowest in three years, and off 35 from the last transaction. Other soft spots included the safety razor stocks, recently strong on merger rumors. Auto Strop lost about six, and Gillette half as much. In the oils, Royal Dutch, which controls Shell Union, recorded a new low, as did Warner Quinlan.

Diamond Match was a buoyant feature, rising 20 points in a small turnover. Case gained 7, Warren Brothers and International Business Machines 4. Stocks closing 2 to 3 points higher, included Loew's, Radio Keith, United Aircraft, American Tobacco B, American Telephone, American Power and Light, American and Foreign Power, Columbian Carbon, Westinghouse Electric, Paramount and American Can.

The commodity markets were generally firm, with the exception of sugar. Refiners cut the price of granulated .15 of a cent to 4.35 cents a pound. Bullish weather and better prices in foreign markets influenced a rise of 1 1-2 to 1 7-8 cents in wheat and 3 1-8 to 3 7-8 in corn. Hog prices were quoted at Chicago at the best levels since August of last year. Cotton fluctuated rather erratically, but was well bought on declines, and closed 45 to 55 cents a bale higher.

Standard Statistics company estimated that farm income would show a reduction of about 12 per cent from last year, but pointed out that this would be less than a half the drop experienced in 1921, and added that it should not prove an insurmountable obstacle to trade recovery. Unofficial information reaching Wall street regarding mail order sales has been a little more favorable of late.

Foreign exchanges were inclined to ease. Sterling cables slipped off a little early in the day, but returned to $4.87 1-16, unchanged from yesterday. The peseta again sagged.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug 20—(AP)—Speculative operations in the curb market today concentrated on extending the advance and met with a moderate degree of success.

Utility issues continued to attract the greatest portion of the buying, and the net gains of the group ranged from a small fraction to 1 and 2 points at the close. While harboring soft spots, a miscellaneous group of industrials showed strength, with Translux and Durant Motors the featured shares in the low price securities. Trading was moderate with total transactions approximating 875,900 shares.

Electric Bond and Share extended its gain on the present advance, 1 7-8 and at one time crossed 82. American Gas and Electric was depressed about 2 points during the early trading but finished 1 point net higher. American and Foreign Power warrants rose 1 1-4 in sympathy with the stock. Niagara Hudson Power, fluctuated narrowly, finishing 1-4 about the previous final. Among the less active utility issues, Electric Power and Light warrants, International Utilities A, and Tri-Utilities, gained a point or more. Louisville Power and Light preferred reached a new 1930 high, with a gain of 2 1-8.

Petroleum issues were quiet. Cities Service was stable, and closed 1-8 higher. Weak spots were Standard Oil of Ohio, off 1 3-8, and Gulf Oil which sagged 2 3-8 in a thin market.

Translux was a speculative favorite of the day's session and advanced 1 1-8 on a large turnover. Durant Motors also was very active, its return to the list of active stocks being coincident with yesterday's announcement that William C. Durant has resumed the presidency of the company. Fluctuating narrowly, it closed steady.

Lehigh Valley Coal and Navigation moved up 2 1-4 points showing a reversal of its recent trend, and other strong spots among industrials were U. S. Gypsum, United States Dairy A, Hires company A, Wheatsworth and Great Atlantic and Pacific, with gains of a point or two. Pacific Finance, sagged to a new low.

Investment and holding companies were little changed. Goldman Sachs was firm, gaining 1-4. Pennroad and United Founders were steady.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—(AP)—Easier money rates failed to stimulate activity in the listed bond market today, and high grade issues fluctuated narrowly, in dull trading. The greatest improvement was among second grade railroad bonds and some inactive issues which have a good rating.

The buying was for straight bond issues of domestic corporations and despite the firm trend of stocks, most of the active convertibles and warrant bonds, sagged at the close. The foreign market was quiet, and United States governments were neglected.

The volume of trading, fell below the previous days of the week which have been nothing exceptional. Call money dropped on the New York Stock exchange to 2 per cent after holding at 2 1-2 since August 11, while time money held unchanged.

Improvement in railroad obligations helped many issues which are more or less inactive. Bonds selling at new 1930 peaks included Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisiana general 5s, Brunswick and Western 4s, Canadian National Railways 4 1-2s, Chesapeake and Ohio 4 1-2s, Grand Trunk, Canadian 6s, New York and Connecticut 4s, New York Central debenture 4s, Wabash Des Moines divisional 4s and Kentucky Central 4s. Scioto Valley and New England 4s re-appeared in the trading to rise 2 3-8 to a new peak. Seaboard Airline adjustment 5s, dropped 6 points, Cuba Railway 5 and 6s, 4 and 2, respectively, all to new lows.

American Telephone bonds were active in the utility group and sold slightly under their previous highs, ruling steady. Brooklyn Union Elevated 5s and Pacific Telephone 5s advanced 1 point to new 1930 highs. Detroit Edison collateral 5s were active and firm.

Fisk Rubber 8s, White Sewing Machine 6s, and Lehigh Valley Coal 5s, were soft spots in the industrial group. Union Oil 6s were strong, gaining a point, and Childs 5s, made another new high. Amusement warrant bonds were weak, Loew's 6s and Pathe 7s, receding 1 3-4 points each.

Renewed interest was displayed in French 7 1-2s, and the bond sold within a small fraction of its recent new high. Belgium 7s were active and firm, Poland 7s, German 5 1-2s, and Japan 5 1-2s, were in demand.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 20—(AP)—Corn led an upward flight of grain values today. Authoritive estimates that United States wheat, oats, rye and barley supplies this season lumped together with corn, were 435,000,000 bushels short of the actual disappearance of these grains last season did much to bring about the soaring of prices. It was also pointed out that in addition to the shortage of grain, there have been immense losses in potatoes and other root crops as well as sorghums, and forage, and that wheat and rye were approximately 50 cents under prices of a year ago with corn and oats 10 cents under.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled, 2ca2 7-8c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Wheat closed firm 1 1-2ca2c up, oats 1 1-4a1 1-2c advanced, and provisions varying from 2c decline to a rise of 27c.

Provisions reflected the jumps in hog values and also in grain.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—(AP)—The governing committee of the New York Stock exchange today, granted the petition of members to close the exchange August 30, the Saturday preceding Labor day. The action assures the exchange of a three day holiday for Labor day.

The American Austin Car company as of June 30, had on hand unfilled orders for 184,117 cars, the retail value of which would approximate $81,930,000 Samuel Vallance, vice president said. Normal capacity is figured at 60,000 vehicles annually and the orders on hand June 30, were equal to more than three years production. Steps are being taken to speed output.

Winthrop W. Aldrich, president of the Chase National bank, today was elected director of the American Telephone and Telegraph company. W. Cameron Forbes, recently made ambassador to Japan, resigned as a director.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, August 20—(AP)—Treasury receipts for August 18 were $7,787,586.08; expenditures $10,036,836.88; balance $99,431,829.36.

PROPAGATION WITH LEAVES USED ON SWEET POTATOES

AUBURN, Ala.—(AP)—A new method of propagating sweet potatoes by using leaves, of the plant, or part of the leaves, has been discovered here by Dr. C. L. Isbell, horticulturist of the Alabama experiment station.

The new method, Dr. Isbell believes will mean bigger and better yams since the commercial value of the plan appears to be greater than any method yet discovered, except the old bedding method. He has been successful in getting six different types of leaf cuttings to regenerate roots quickly.

Officials believe this is the first time the leaf method has been used.

LOWER EUROPEAN POSTAGE URGED TO AID BUSINESS

PARIS (AP)—Lowering of international postal rates through organization of a European postal union is being sought in France.

An increase in letter correspondence will result from lower postal rates, it is believed, leading in turn to further development of commercial relations and business.

A special committee has been formed in France to work toward this end, operating under the auspices of the semi-official French committee on economic and customs problems.

TO PROBE COTTON LOSSES BETWEEN FIELD AND GIN

STONEVILLE, Miss.—(AP)—Reputed cotton losses of "50 to 75 million dollars annually between the field and the gin" will be studied here by the United States government.

A cotton experimental plant to cost more than $100,000 will be built here.

Machinery will be installed for conducting experiments along scientific lines. It is the plan of the government to discover where the loss occurs and to suggest remedies.

Would Burn Worthless Stock

CARSON CITY, Nev.—(AP)—George Wingfield has offered to buy 10,000,000 shares of mining stock and $390 in outlawed notes held by a defunct bank. He promised to pay $100 for the worthless papers if the court would permit him to make a bonfire of it.

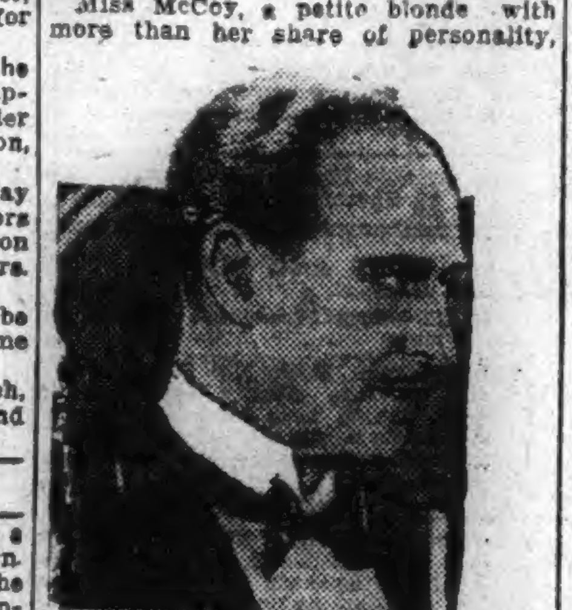
ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theater

Frances McCoy, otherwise known as "the real McCoy," who portrays a vivacious role in "Wild Company," Fox movietone all-talking frama of human emotions, is a recent discovery by Fox Films. She was found singing and dancing in one of the gilded night clubs of New York, but her experience has not been confined to cabarets.



Miss McCoy, a petite blonde with more than her share of personality, was for some time a singer with Art Landry and his Band and appeared at the Palace theater in New York, the goal of every ambitious actor and performer. Nor is she without motion picture experience as she appeared in several two reelers in a New York studio.

Palace Theater

A double-feature bill which is extraordinary because of the contrast in the productions opens today at the Palace theater with the showing of "Shooting Straight" a thrilling drama with Richard Dix and "Dancing Sweeties," a story based on modern youth starring Sue Carol and Grant Withers.

"Shooting Straight" marks the return of Richard Dix in the roles which made him famous. For some time he has played in comedy parts and this picture gives him an opportunity to do some more of the red-blooded, two-fisted acting that seems to fit him more aptly.

Richard Dix is supported by Mary Lawlor, a new star who is a beautiful blonde newly arrived from the musical stage of Broadway. The two are said to form a most effective combination.

Youth and song and dance are the chief features of "Dancing Sweeties," a Warner Brothers' fast moving story of a dance mad generation. Two new song numbers, "Kiss Waltz" and "Hullabaloo" are sung in this production for the first time.

"Dancing Sweeties" tells the story of a young husband who, after marriage, could not resist the lure of the dance halls. But, like all husbands who go out once too often he was taught a sad lesson which showed him that if you haven't sown your wild oats before you are married you can never sow them at all.

FINGERPRINTS HEREDITARY, CRIMINOLOGIST BELIEVES

IOWA CITY, Iowa —(AP)— It won't be long until science will be able to remark that Junior has his daddy's eyes, his grandmother's nose and his mother's fingerprints, Dr. John A. Larson, University of Iowa psychiatrist and criminologist believes.

And when that time comes, Dr. Larson says, danger of another Watkins-Bamberger baby mix-up will be almost wiped out.

Dr. Larson is the inventor of a new "single point" system of classifying fingerprints, and he is also credited with perfecting the first working model of the "lie detector" now used in Chicago and elsewhere for examination of suspected criminals.

Though science has not yet discovered accurately just what features of a fingerprint pattern constitute its "dominant" and "recessive" hereditary factors, Dr. Larson is convinced that there are such inherited characteristics, just as facial or bodily configuration among blood relatives betray family kinship.

CHICLE FOREST LABORERS FIND AGED MAYAN RUINS

CHICAGO —(AP)— The gum-chewing power of American jaws is one important aid to uncovering archeological mysteries of ancient Mayan civilization in Yucatan, says J. Eric Thompson, assistant curator of the Field museum.

America's demand for chewing gum, he says, is the impetus that sends thousands of "chicleros," or native laborers, into chicle forests for sap from which gum is made.

As these sap harvesters return with their burdens, they frequently have tales of discovery of Mayan ruins to tell archeologists.

Roy Smith, Chico, Cal., cripple, has attached an auto horn to his crutches to help him through traffic.

POETRY

To Venus

So you're the famous Grecian jane
That people rave about?
Well, kid, as critic I maintain
Your type's long since passed out.
Suppose you diet eighteen days
And exercise with care,
Massage your map with beauty clays
And permanent your hair;
Then amble down and buy a suit,
Silk hose and undergarb,
And don a rope of oysterfruit,
Sweet mamma! You're a darb.
Now ditch your sandals for some kicks
That hoist your hoof a bit
And you'll make Flo's crew look like hicks.
For, baby, you've got IT.
The sheiks will open up their yaps
And speak of "Cat's Meow,"
And some of these collegiate chaps
Will roll their glims—and how!
A mighty gang will watch your gates
That they may lamp your charms,
But listen, cutie, modern dates
Require that you have arms.

—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sky Traffic

There was traffic by land and traffic by sea
To cover the whole round earth,
And now in this day and age of ours
Sky traffic has had its birth;
Up in the air, so high, so high,
Making a mock of the birds that fly,
Leaving no track in a trackless sky—
Sky traffic!

We have sailed to the East and sailed to the West
From England to far Cathay,
Our trains may run to the mountain's crest,
But lords over all are they—
They who go sailing, serene and high,
Finding a path in the pathless sky,
Watching the stars and the moon go by—
Sky traffic!

—Margaret H. Tomkins in the Detroit News.

STATE FUR FARM PLANNED BY TAR HEEL OFFICIALS

RALEIGH, N. C. —(AP)— North Carolina may undertake a state farm for the propagation of fur-bearing animals.

Col. J. W. Harrelson, director of the department of conservation and development, and State Game Warden C. H. England are considering the proposition, they have announced.

Although the state still realizes $2,000,000 a year from the sale of wild animal pelts, the industry has decreased considerably during the last several years. Types of valuable fur-bearers that now are extinct or have been greatly decimated, would be raised on the state farm and released in sections where they once thrived.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Parker Stamp Works, Inc., Hartford.

The Parker Stamp Works, Inc., is the outgrowth of a business founded by Thomas M Parker in 1871.

Mr. Parker was a native of Cape Cod, and a descendent of one of the original settlers of Falmouth, Mass., where he was born. As a boy he settled in Boston, learning his trade as an engraver. He came to Connecticut in 1870, starting business in Willimantic supplying the thread mills with various kinds of stamps and marking devices. He remained there, however, for but a year when he moved his business to Hartford and started under the name of T. M. Parker, at No. 71 Asylum street where the business remained continuously until 1924.

In 1918 Mr. Parker's health failing, the business was sold to Howard L. Bitter, Mr. Parker agreeing to stay with Mr. Bitter for one year. After the latter's control of the business, the name was changed to Howard L. Bitter operating as Parker's Stamp Works. In 1924 the business outgrew the premises and was moved to the Billings & Spencer company plant at Park & Laurel streets where splendid floor space was available.

The company then went into the intensive production of steel stamps. The latest type of special machinery was added and attention was centralized on the production of steel stamps in quantity and all types of marking devices. The corporation now has one of the most modern plants with floor space capacity of more than 12,000 square feet and are now among the largest manufacturers of steel stamps, hub dies and embossing dies in the United States.

The business was incorporated in 1922, the present officers being: Howard L. Bitter, president and treasurer; A. G. Russell, vice president and factory manager; Kelsey F. Lingo, secretary.

SPEAK-EASY KEEPERS TURN $2,100 INTO NEW LONDON CITY TREASURY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 20. — The treasury of the city was enriched $2,100 today as a result of the series of liquor raids yesterday afternoon when 11 speakeasies were raided upon evidence furnished by a trio of professional stool pigeons imported here by a detective agency. Most of the accused proprietors and proprietresses of the speakeasies pleaded not guilty, but the evidence of Herbert Gray, Thomas Clemons and Edward Allen was such that there was no doubt as to the guilt of the accused and fines were imposed in these cases. The evidence-suppliers told of having gained admission to the speakeasies through John Harrington, a laborer, and to having purchased many drinks of liquor. Harrington was in court for the purpose of giving added testimony, but he was not put on the witness stand. Uliana Shiribecki, 110 Potter street, was fined $200 and costs. Andrew Villano, 42 Division street, where a still was included in the seizure of the raiders, was fined $300 and costs. Nicholas Stamatin, 334 Bank street, proprietor of a pool room, $400 and costs. Feodor Sach, 137 North Bank street, $100 and costs. Matrona Rutsko, 137 North Bank street, $400 and costs. John Gentilella, 45 Truman street, $200 and costs. Helen Petrusky, 206 North Bank street, $400 and costs. Albert Goodwin, 25 Lewis street, $200 and costs. The cases of Joseph Stamion, 78 Potter street, and John McElhaney, 9 Pearl street, were continued until tomorrow. The case of Ignatz Dombroski, 73 Shaw street, was continued to Friday.

Stricken On Street.

Richard Davidson, 19, of 15 Blackhall street, was stricken with a fit while walking on Federal street this forenoon. In falling, Davidson's head struck the sidewalk and he sustained numerous lacerations. He was taken to Lawrence-Memorial hospital, where he will be a patient for a few days.

Mrs. L. T. Sherman, 75 Beckwith street, reported to the police this morning that while shopping in a State street store, her pocket was either picked or her purse containing $20 worked from the garment which held it. Sergeant Samuel Hick made an investigation.

Wilbur Hamilton, colored, residing at 66 Bank street, reported to the police last night that while walking on the westerly side of North Bank street and in the rear of the Savings Bank of New London, where construction work is in progress, he came in contact with iron girders that were stored on the sidewalk and with no danger light existing to warn pedestrians of the danger. The police had a red light installed at the danger spot for the remainder of the night. Hamilton said that he suffered injury to his abdomen and that he would obtain treatment at the office of a physician.

The store in the Harris building, long vacant, has been leased by T. Roschman, of New York, and he will shortly establish a line of business there. The store is being made ready for occupancy about September 1.

MARTIN AND RYAN HELD FOR SEPTEMBER TERM OF COURT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 20—Joseph Martin, 31, and John F. Ryan, 41, both of New York, who describe themselves as being clerks, were in the police court today charged with attempted theft in endeavoring to rob a passenger on a New Haven railroad train by picking his pocket. Through counsel, Martin and Ryan pleaded not guilty after Judge Daniel M. Cronin overruled a demurrer entered by counsel. There is little doubt that Ryan and Martin are a pair of professional pickpockets. After exhaustive testimony, principal among which was that of Inspector Lawrence of the force of special agents of the railroad, who effected the arrest of the crooks, probable cause was found and Martin and Ryan were held for trial at the September term of the superior court. In default of a surety on their respective bonds of $1,000 the pair were committed to jail until the first week of September when court convenes.

Inspector Lawrence in testifying stated that he had been detailed to duty in this city because of reports being made to the railroad that pickpockets were operating among passengers. Last Saturday he was on the platform when the train due here from Boston at 1:11 arrived and there were many passengers awaiting its arrival. Most of the passengers were to board the coaches, which were on the rear end of the train and Lawrence mingled with them, at the same time paying particular attention to Martin and Ryan. Martin ascended the steps of the coach just in advance of an aged male passenger and Ryan was immediately behind the latter. Just as the platform of the car was reached by the passenger, Martin jostled the aged man, causing the latter to be forced against the side of the car and into the stranger's left hand trousers into the stranger's left hand trouser's pocket. Lawrence seized Ryan and at the same time gave the alarm the pickpockets were operating among the passengers. With the officer's request to railroad employes to seize Martin and Ryan were taken to police form as Lawrence held fast to his prisoner. Martin was grabbed by employes of the road and turned over to Special Agent Harold Swanson. Both Martin and Ryan were taken to police headquarters where they gave fictitious addresses and told various stories as to the object of their visit to New London. Their statements were undoubtedly false and they were held for trial. In the meantime a check-up of the prisoners was made by the New York and Pittsburgh, Pa. departments which resulted in it being determined that Martin had been arrested 21 times and Ryan 18 times by the New York police on various charges of theft and Martin had a long police court record in Pittsburgh. In the court room today was a man who claims that Ryan robbed him recently by picking his pocket, but the testimony of this prospective witness was not taken.

Lawrence Newman, of Gilman, Vt., was arrested this afternoon, charged with parking his automobile in restricted area on Golden street. He posted a bond of $2 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow.

FINE FOR HARRY HICKS— SEVILLE CHARGE NOLLED

Harry Hicks, colored, of 28 Moore court and Anderson Seville, colored, of New York, and both employed at Fishers Island, were in the police court today, charged with the theft of six railroad tickets of the issue of the New Haven railroad from New London to New York and of the value of $27.30. The charge against Seville was nolled as Hicks assumed all responsibility for the theft. Hicks was fined $10 and costs. Hicks and Seville are employed at Fishers Island and recently it was discovered that tickets had been stolen from the ticket office. The number of the tickets was supplied the ticket agent at New London and last evening when Hicks presented the tickets for redemption, he was arrested, with Seville, for the ticket seller summoned Special Agent Sergeant John McGrath. At police headquarters, Hicks was emphatic in his denial of the commission of theft and declared that he had found the tickets and when he did not find an owner for them he endeavored to negotiate them by attempting to receive their worth in cash at the ticket office in New London, inasmuch as he believed that the railroad had received the money for them and that he was within his rights to seek the amount paid for the tickets. After being released on bail last night and prior to the convening of the court, Hicks admitted the theft and exonerated Seville of being connected with the stealing of the tickets, but Seville was with Hicks when the latter attempted to obtain the purchase price of the tickets, so both were arrested.

ROBT. KEYES RECOVERING FROM SUDDEN FAINTING SPELL

Robert Keyes, 197 Connecticut avenue, one of the most widely known musicians in the city, was stricken with a fainting spell this forenoon as he walked along Lincoln avenue. At the corner of Williams street, he collapsed and fell semi-conscious on the sidewalk. Pedestrians and motorists went to Mr. Keyes' assistance and he was conveyed to his home where he responded to medical treatment. Mr. Keyes will be confined to his home for a few days, after which it is anticipated, that he will suffer no ill effects from the attack.

Was Driving Stolen Car

James Byrnes, 16, of Hartford, was arrested in Rhode Island, just east of Westerly last night by Rhode Island state police, charged with the theft of an automobile. He was brought to New London by State Police Officer Frederick Johnson, of Groton barracks, charged with the theft and was locked up at police headquarters for the night. This afternoon an officer of the Hartford police department came to New London, for the auto was stolen in Hartford, and took Byrnes back to that city for trial. Byrnes stole the automobile Tuesday afternoon and while speeding along the Boston Post highway he attracted the attention of an officer doing patrol duty. The officer held up the driver and discovered that Brynes was driving a stolen car.

FATHER OF CHARLES REED DOUBTS SON'S SUICIDE

NEW LONDON, Aug. 20.— Charles Reed, father of Edward C. Reed, 20, of New Britain, an optician, is greatly vexed because of the statements relative to the son's committing suicide at New London police headquarters by hanging Sunday afternoon last. From the utterances of the father, it is possible that he may seek to have an investigation made with a view to determining whether the son actually caused his self-destruction or if death resulted from other than natural causes. The father of the young man evidently has been misinformed as to the details of his son's death for there is not the slightest doubt that the young man ended his life by hanging while in a cell at police headquarters. Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman, by his return on the death certificate, makes affidavit to that effect. At least four persons witnessed the cutting down of the body after it was found suspended from the cell by the belt the young man wore and as many more witnessed the efforts of the medical men and fire department by means of a pulmotor to produce resuscitation. The father of the youth has made it known that he is not satisfied with the explanation by the New London police of his son's suicide and that he will await the verdict of Coroner Edward G. McKay, of Norwich, before taking action, if any. The parent apparently takes issue with the police because the body was embalmed a short time after it was found and intimates that the youth might have been beaten by an officer before being locked up.

When the secretaries of the chambers of commerce of New England meet here at the Norwich Inn, Sept. 12 and 13, for a conference, a programme of entertainment will be presented by the local chamber, the acting secretary, Miss Mary Bunday, has announced. It is tentatively planned to take the secretaries on a tour of inspection of the submarine base at Groton, and give them a trip in one of the submarines. A concert programme by the Norwich Symphony orchestra, Dr. Frank Drago, director, is also being arranged.

POLICE WATCH TRAFFIC IN SAVE-A-LIFE CAMPAIGN

In accordance with the save-a-life campaign being conducted by Connecticut in cooperation with other New England states, perfect performance in traffic on all highways of the state is now being required by all city and state police.

City enforcement is under the supervision and direction of local police. Three state departments, police, highway and motor vehicle, are cooperating in plans for regulations on the state highways.

Enforcement will be continuous and, according to Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel, the procedure during the last two weeks of August will point the way to practice which will be lasting.

Every safety rule set up for the protection and convenience of traffic participants will be enforced. On the open highways, motorists will be required to refrain from cutting in and out on hills and at curves and other dangerous places. White lines laid down by the highway department must be respected. The police will insist that motorists keep to the right of these lines. Parking regulations must be observed.

In city traffic, enforcement will require obedience by motorists to lights, signs, systems and ordinances. Pedestians will also be required to observe the regulations in force for their safety.

The commissioner, in discussing traffic on state highways said that better judgment will be demanded in all cases of passing from the rear. Any operator who goes on the left side of the highway to pass another car assumes a responsibility because he is in the right of way of vehicles coming from the other direction. If he does not know enough to select a good place, where he can be sure he will not be caught by a vehicle rightfully on its own side, then he is unfit for operation on the highways and ought to be taken off.

"Another serious traffic offense is bad parking of vehicles in the wrong places. Possibly it would not be according to law to say that a man who parks a vehicle in a place and in such a manner as to put others in danger is reckless, but he is committing a stupid act and creating a hazard which did not exist before. It is good evidence of unfitness. Parking on curves or near the top of a hill is forbidden. In actual practice there ought to be no parking on the traveled part of the highway.

REVISED STATE LAWS READY FOR DISTRIBUTION

Announcement was made Wednesday that distribution of the revised laws of the state, the 1930 revision of the general statutes will begin next week. The index which is being printed in a separate volume, is not expected to be ready for distribution until October, but with each set distributed before the index is ready there will be a reference pamphlet which will show the section numbers of the 1930 revision of the various parts of the 1918 revision and the public acts adopted since that codification. This plan was adopted first with the 1918 revision, when the printing of the index was delayed also. The reference table, as was the case in 1918, will be incorporated in the index volume.

The 1930 revision becomes effective Sept. 1 and prior to that time a special copy will be certified to as the correct version of the laws of the state by William L. Higgins, secretary of the state, and deposited in the state archives. Secretary Higgins' certification will be printed in the copies for general distribution.

While the revision commission by condensation, combination and by repeal of some 150 obsolete laws by the 1929 legislature upon recommendation of the commission, has reduced the number of sections of the statutes from 6,726 in the 1918 revision to 6,573 in the 1930 revision, the number of pages has increased. The increase in the number of pages is accounted for in part by the number of lengthy laws which must be included as the result of legislative action since 1918, by the increase in the number of interpretative decisions of the courts which are noted volume, and by a change in the type in which these notes are printed to make this matter more readable.

The commission, in accordance with the act providing for the revision, has eliminated from the general statutes such old laws as are essentially private acts. "Many of these statutes," it is pointed out in the preface to the 1930 revision, "fix dates for the various steps in the assessment of taxes and in the holding of and preparation for elections in certain communities." These acts, while eliminated from the general statutes, are not repealed. They are listed in the reference table and will be printed again with the 1931 special laws.

PETER NAWROCKI ARRESTED AFTER AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

As an aftermath of an automobile collision at the Yantic flats about 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, Peter A. Nawrocki, of Yantic, was arrested by State Police Officer Hoxie of the Groton barracks on a charge of violation of the rules of the road and ordered to appear in Norwich city court this (Thursday) morning.

A machine operated by George E. Myra of 30 Grosvenor avenue, Hartford, which was traveling toward Colchester, was forced off the highway, it is said, by a car driven by Nawrocki and crashed into a telephone pole, snapping it off in the middle. Mr. Myra's daughter, Jean, a passenger, received lacerations about the face and according to the state police was attended by the W. W. Backus hospital and then discharged. The machine was badly damaged.

FUNERAL

Mrs. William Witter

Burial services for Ellen A. Campbell, wife of Dr. William Witter of Derby, Conn., formerly of Greeneville, were held Wednesday at noon at the family plot in Yantic cemetery. Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, pastor of the First Congregational church, conducted the service, which was attended by many relatives and friends. There were beautiful floral tributes. The local arrangements were in charge of Undertaker C. A. Gager. The funeral services were held Wednesday morning in Derby.

Dominick Falcone and William Mallinson, both of Norwich, charged with violation of the liquor laws, had their cases continued to Sept. 4, when they were presented before U. S. Commissioner Earl Mathewson here Wednesday morning. The accused were arrested by federal agents.

The annual market value of 4-H club members' products is more than $15,000,000.

NEW LONDON COUNTY BOYS JOIN IN TWO DAY DAIRY JUDGING TRIP

Thirty boys, representing the 108 members of the 13 4-H dairy clubs in New London and Tolland counties, will start a two-day judging trip today (Thursday) under the direction of Randolph W. Whaples of Norwich and Donald C. Gaylord of Rockville, club agents for New London and Tolland counties. The purpose of the trip is to select the six highest club members from these two counties to represent their respective counties at the state exhibits which will be conducted in connection with the Middlesex County 4-H club fair. The first day will be spent in judging the prize cattle in the Connecticut Agricultural college herd at Storrs. Thursday night will be spent at the college.

On Friday, the club members will judge Guernseys at the farm of J. T. McKnight in Ellington, Holsteins at the Gardner Hall farm in South Willington, Ayrshires at the farm of Henry Gunther in Vernon, and Jerseys at Burnap Brook farm in Andover.

Some of the club members have been carrying on dairy work at home and own from one to five animals each. The other counties of the state have already conducted their judging trips or are doing so this week.

Many new classes have been added to the state club exhibit this year for the further encouragement of 4-H club members to do more and better work. Probably the most interesting innovation is the style dress revue contest. The girls competing will appear in costumes which they have made and selected themselves. The winner will be awarded a trip to Chicago. More than 50 girls are preparing for this contest.

Other new classes include: An archery contest, a barnyard golf contest, a one-act play contest, a 4-H orchestra contest, and a hand wrestling contest. Federal Treasury's Daily Financial Statements Give Slight Hope For Continuing the Lower Level of Income Tax Rates Next Year—Customs Receipts and Income Tax Collections Are Falling Behind Last Year's Returns—Expenditures During the First Six Weeks of This Fiscal Year Are Higher Than Those For the Similar Period Last Year

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21—(AP)—Slight hope for continuing next year the lower level of income tax rates now in effect was held today by treasury officials after a preliminary survey of the 1930 returns.

The treasury's daily financial statements show dwindling collections and increasing expenditures to such an extent that the tax experts believe it will be impossible to recommend to congress a repetition of the emergency one per cent reduction put into effect this year.

Unless congress takes some action at the short session beginning in December, the permanent and higher schedule of income tax rates enacted in 1928 goes back into effect on this year's income, upon which taxes are to be paid next year.

Secretary Mellon is saying nothing about the prospects pending a study of the more complete returns which will be available in the fall, but it was indicated he shares the view of the experts that continuation of the reduction is unlikely.

Last December, congress quickly approved the recommendation of Mr. Mellon for a $160,000,000 cut in this year's income tax. That was just after the collapse of stock prices on the New York exchange and at a time when the government was looking for means to stimulate business.

However, the reduction was made to apply only on taxes paid during 1930.

Customs receipts and income tax collections are falling behind last year's returns since the opening of the fiscal year July 1. Figures as of Tuesday, August 19, showed collections this fiscal year of $45,912,850 on customs as compared with $85,778,694 a year ago and $41,664,996 from income taxes, compared with $52,015,423.

Returns from miscellaneous internal revenue taxes, which were not affected by the emergency reduction for this year, showed a slight increase over last year's collections from this source. Meanwhile ordinary government expenditures during the first six weeks of this fiscal year are higher than those for the period similar last year. All of which contributes to treasury pessimism over the changes of continuing the lower tax schedule.

DENIAL MADE BY GOV. CARLTON OF FLORIDA

TALLAHASEE, Fla., Aug. 21—(AP)—Governor Doyle E. Carlton tonight expressed complete surprise and said he knew "absolutely nothing" about an attempted interview with him by some unidentified party, evidence of which was found today in the deposit box of Jack Zuta, slain Chicago gangster.

"I know absolutely nothing of anything of that sort," the governor said, when the Associated Press read him the dispatch about the finding of a letter and a telegram in the Zuta strong box.

The purpose for which the interviews were to be obtained was not stated, but in a postscript, the writer urged "that your friends in Chicago send expense money" and added "have already arranged for all publicity and press relationship necessary for their real estate promotion in whatever they wish."

Both the letter and the telegram were signed by "Ben". The telegram, dated Aug. 28, 1929 at Orlando, Fla., was addressed to Frank Gross, Gary, Ind., and said:

"G. E. McCaskill will be appointed to a recess appointment by Governor Carlton and will be sustained in the senate in 1931 (cq). He is certain to hold office until then and July (cq). O. Thompson will be judge of the criminal court instead of Tom Norfleet. Have interview with governor Saturday afternoon."

Accompanied by an expert of the bureau of agricultural economics and an assistant from his office, the secretary planned to tour the drought stricken territory near Washington for several days. He was expected to return the first of next week.

It was said at the secretary's office he had not contemplated extending his trip beyond Virginia and West Virginia at this time. He is making the trip by automobiles, and had made no engagements for conferences.

YACHTING CAP FOUND OFF NEW JERSEY COAST

POINT PLEASANT, N. J., Aug. 21. —(AP)—A yachting cap answering the description of that worn by Van Lear Black, Baltimore publisher lost from his yacht off the New Jersey coast Monday night, has been found by two fishermen.

The men picked it out of the water 10 miles off Point Pleasant and turned it over to police. Coast guards are patrolling the beach on watch for Black's body. They believed a strong northeast wind blowing today might bring the body to shore.

The cap bore the insignia of the New York Yacht club, of which Black was a member. It was new, of expensive make and of a size believed to be Black's.

ALLEGED MUSICAL PLAY BURLESQUED KING CAROL

The play was entitled "His Majesty in Swimming Trunks," and its hero was "King Carol the 23rd of Montaina."

The king in the play has countless amorous adventures at a popular resort.

The Rumanian minister found that this hero "bears an unmistakeable likeness to King Carol II." The director of the Arena theater agreed to alter the dialogue and other details.

DEATH OF DEAN OF THE COMEDIE FRANCAISE

MARSEILLES, France, Aug. 21—(AP)—Eugene Silvain, dean of the Comedie Francaise and celebrated actor contemporary of the late Sarah Bernhardt died tonight at his villa in Saint Cyrles Secques, department of war.

He was 79 years old and made his debut on the stage more than half a century ago. During his career in the House of Moliere, as the comedie is called, he scored many triumphs in the classic repertory, including "Le Cid," "Polyeucte" and "Le Misanthrope."

Silvain was stricken with partial paralysis and temporarily deprived of speech last week. His wife and son were at the bedside when he died.

TESTIMONY OF TRIBUTE LEVIED IN FLOUR TRADE

NEW YORK, Aug 21—(AP)—Witnesses testified today that Daniel Richter "muscled in" as head man of associations practically controlling the flour business in New York, levied tribute on both jobbers and truckmen and when his mandates were disregarded, gangsters armed with iron bars, meted out punishment.

Richter himself was called to the stand by Deputy Attorney General William B. Groat, Jr., who is conducting the state investigation into food prices, but refused to waive immunity and so was not examined.

Today's session opened on a sinister note, when Groat cleared the hearing room in the attorney general's office on the ground that a previous witness had been intimidated right in the room and made afraid for his life.

"This witness was told to keep his mouth shut just before he took the stand," Groat said, "I don't know yet who it was that threatened him and I won't put the witness on the stand to question him because he has told me he fears for his life."

The hearing was adjourned until Monday to permit Groat to make a personal inspection tomorrow and Saturday of the upstate milk shed in connection with an allied inquiry.

WILD GAME THE FOE OF FARMERS IN EAST AFRICA

NEW YORK, Aug. 21— (AP) —Declaring that "farmers and wild game cannot live together," George Agnew Chamberlain, author and former American consul in Portuguese East Africa, asserted that wholesale slaughter of wild animals in the African jungle is a result of their depredations on crops.

Ostensibly in an effort to exterminate the tsetse fly, bearer of sleeping sickness, the Union of South Africa has permitted settlers in Zululand to kill off so many animals that some species are no wsam to be practically extinct, and naturalists, both in Europe and in the United States, are protesting.

Mr. Chamberlain, who was American consul in Portuguese East Africa for seven years, believes the real reason for killing off the wild game is not that the animals carry sleeping sickness germs, but that they eat the farmers' crop.

BODY OF MISSING MAN WAS FOUND IN GARAGE

KENT, Aug. 21—(AP)—A search which started late last night, resulted this morning in the discovery of the body of Lero J. Gaines, prominent Kent real estate and insurance dealer, in a small garage near an untenanted cottage by Pine Plains and Millerton, N. Y. Though no official verdict has yet been given out, it is believed that he committed suicide.

The body was found shortly after 5 o'clock this morning by Gaines' son, Leroy, Jr., and James Barry, of Kent. Gaines had driven his car into the little garage and, tying the door shut with a piece of rope had left the motor of his car running, causing death from carbon monoxide fumes.

DEATH OF THE LAST OF THE LUMBER BARONS

MANISTEE, Mich., Aug. 21. —(AP)—Charles F. Ruggles, 84 years old, known as "the last of the lumber barons," died at his home here tonight. He had extensive timber interests in many parts of the United States.

The passing of Mr. Ruggles marked the end of perhaps the most picturesque career in the history of the American timber industry.

Although a multi-millionaire, with property in California, Florida, the Carolinas, and other sections of the country, his life was simple to the point of eccentricity. He lived alone in small quarters over his office, prepared his own meals and did his own cleaning. He never married. He wore moccasins and never had a necktie under his long beard.

While living in this manner in this small city of northern Michigan, the old lumberman took an intelligent and active interest in the affairs of the world. It was revealed two years ago that he founded and financed the American Judiciary society for the purpose of eliminating delays in law. The revelation was made in a letter of appreciation written by the late Chief Justice Taft.

Last winter Ruggles was involved in a $5,000,000 litigation with John F. Rademaker, whom he had made his portege 40 years before and who had become wealthy as a partner of his patron in the timber and salt business. The case was settled after several days of testimony in court, during which the story of the long friendship between the two men was told by both.

Ruggles was born in Maine. He came to Manistee 64 years ago.

SAYS C. G. BOAT REFUSED TO SEARCH FOR BLACK

NEW YORK, Aug. 21—(AP)—Captain John Kelley, master of the yacht Sabalo, from which Van Lear Black, Baltimore publisher, disappeared at sea Monday night, today told officials of the Steamboat Inspectors service that a coast guard boat failed to aid in the search when requested.

Testifying at a brief inquiry into the accident to the publisher, Captain Kelley said the patrol craft came alongside of the Sabalo during the hunt and its officers inquired the reason for the lighted searchlight. He said he told them he had lost a man overboard and asked them for help.

"They simply snapped off their light," Captain Kelley testified, "and I got no reply. Then the boat faded away into the distance."

Captain Randolph Ridgley, commander of the New York division of the coast guard, expressed surprise at Kelley's statement. He said vessel CG-WGT, in charge of Boatswain R Anderson, twice went to the Sabalo for the express purpose of lending assistance but could not learn from the yacht at what point the accident had happened. Anderson then concluded he was not needed, Captain Ridgley said.

YACHT SHAMROCK V. HAS ARRIVED AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 21—(AP)—Shamrock V, Sir Thomas Lipton's fifth challenger for the America's cup reached the scene of the international yachting classic this evening in tow of the Erin, the doughty Irish knight's private yacht, on which he was aboard.

The slim green hulled challenger glided into Brenton's cove, to a mooring nestling among the four prospective defenders as whistles shrieked and thousands lined the shore to bid her welcome.

Five navy seaplanes furnished an aerial escort up the harbor and three coast guard boats paced her, one before and two in her wake.

OBITUARY

William Stephen Van Rensselaer

NEW YORK, Aug. 21—(AP)—William Stephen Van Rensselaer, capitalist, former diplomat and member of one of the oldest families of New York, died today. He was 44 years old.

He was one of the incorporators of the Equitable Safe Deposit company and for three years beginning in 1925 was third secretary of the American embassy at Rome.

Bingham In Chicago For Nat'al Air Races

CHICAGO, Aug. 21—(AP)—The war birds of America are flying to town to pick peace time bones with the war birds of Europe.

From the decks of the navy's airplane carrier Lexington at San Diego come 19 planes of the "High Hat" or Red Ripper squadron. Eighteen fliers from the marine base at Quantico dropped in this morning. Selfridge Field, Mich., and Langley Field have groomed crack squadrons to represent the army in the ten days of aerial acrobatics and speed contests that will feature the national air races opening at Curtiss Reynolds airport Saturday.

Five European nations have sent noted military fliers for the aerial field day. The list includes Lieutenants Richard L. Atcherley and Rupert Preston of England; Lieut. Marcel Doret of France; Capt. Friedrich Loose of Germany and Marshal Pietro Colobo of Italy; all reached Chicago today.

The identity of Poland's representative remains a mystery. The Polish war ministry has informed race officials only that one of its most distingfuished airmen will take part.

President Hoover's good will message and greetings for the national air races will be flown here from Washington tomorrow by James G. Doolittle, former army pilot. The message is addressed to Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, president of the National Aeronautic association.

Senator Bingham flew to Chicago, accompanied by Porter Adams, former president of the National Aeronautic association. Tomorrow night the senator will preside at the annual banquet of the association, when a diploma of honorary membership will be presented to Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, the guest of honor.

Chicago-bound from the four corners of the nation are other fliers, men and women, competing in derbies. The derbies had their starting points in Long Beach, Cal., Seattle, Wash, Hartford, Conn., Miami, Fla., and Brownsville, Texas. Another is to start tomorrow from Washington D. C., with women as pilots, while the principal derby of the mail—the non-stop from Los Angeles—will take place next Wednesday.

Fliers from Hartford are competing over a 1,170 mile route through New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, and are due in Chicago Sunday. They stopped overnight in Syracuse, N. Y. Entered in this competition are Lee Brusse of Glendale, Calif., Henry A. Little, Jr., of Philadelphia; Verne Roberts of Moline, Ill., Charles Meyers of Cleveland, O., and J. Wesley Smith of Philadelphia.

The birth of the baby girl was officially attested by John R. Clynes, British home secretary, who had been waiting at nearby Airlie castle for some weeks.

The baby becomes the fourth in succession to the British throne. She takes rank after her uncle, the Prince of Wales, her father, and her four-year-old sister, Princess Elizabeth.

The joyful tidings were announced to the public by a huge beacon on top of Hunter's Hill, overlooking Glamis castle, and the news went blazing over the countryside in the traditional Scottish fashion—columns of smoke and fire. It went even to Lossiemouth, where Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald is spending a holiday.

These beacons, which once were symbols of war and harbingers of sorrow, have taken on the opposite meaning with the passing of the centuries and their message today was one of peace and happiness.

Six Men Went Down With British Yacht

Commodore H[illegible] D. King, M. P., Wa[illegible]ng the Men to Peris[illegible]

FOWEY[illegible]ll, England, Aug. 21 —(AP)—Th[illegible]on yacht Islander, wrecked [illegible] jagged rocks of Lantivet [illegible] night in a violent storm which [illegible]d the English south coast, car[illegible]mmodore Henry Douglas King[illegible]rominent member of parliament, [illegible] five other men to death.

Those on shore while the yacht was breaking up believed they had heard cries of women and children aboard but so far as can be learned only men occupied the vessel. Other reports said the bodies of two children had washed ashore, but officials stated tonight that this was untrue.

Those aboard with Commodore King, who had chartered the Islander August 9 for a vacation cruise, were Commander Searle of Berwick on Tweed; Surgeon Captain A. R. Brailey, Dunmow, Essex; Captain Glazebrook of Bishop, Stortford; Harry Lucas, captain of the yacht, and his 17-year-old brother Walter.

The yacht, owned by Lieutenant Colonel John N. Diggle, had been participating in regattas of the Royal Yacht Squadron along the English south coast. When the boat reached Lantivet Bay last night it encountered the storm and piled up on the numerous rocks of the bay.

Great waves punished the craft and it soon went to pieces.

Since Fowey is a coast guard station, members of the guard tried to rescue the marooned party. Some fired lifelines across the doomed craft, and others went down the 265-foot cliff overhanging the scene and attempted to get to the boat. Both efforts were futile because of the tremendous seas and the rocking of the Islander.

Commodore King was a noted soldier and politician, formerly aide-de-camp to King George and conservative whip of the house of commons in 1921. He was 53 and was a sailor until 1899, then went into law and politics.

ALABAMA REPUBLICANS TO SUPPORT SENATOR HEFLIN

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 21—(AP)—The general election in Alabama next November will find only two tickets in the contest for state and senatorial offices, the state republican convention meeting here today having decided it would not be "expedient" for that party to nominate candidates.

A resolution providing for the elimination of a state party ticket this year was adopted unanimously after speakers had declared their intention of supporting Senator J. Thomas Heflin and Hugh A. Locke, independent candidates for senator and governor, in opposition to the regular democrats.

Delegates from strong republican sections of the state declared the party "owed Heflin a debt" for his part in the Hoover campaign in 1928, and one expressed the opinion that the election of Locke, with the aid of the republican vote, would "tear up" the democratic party for 50 years.

Senator Heflin and Locke were excluded from participation in the democratic primary August 11 because of their activities against Alfred E. Smith in 1928, and are running on a Jeffersonian democratic ticket.

ROCKEFELLER, JR., PLACED 200 MARRIED MEN AT WORK

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 21.—(AP)—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., tried to relieve the unemployment situation here today by placing 200 married men at work on his estate in Pocantico Hills and in the town of Mount Pleasant.

A decision to start now on projects planned for a year and two years hence was reached after an appeal was made to Mr. Rockefeller by Supervisor Charles J. Marasco of Mount Pleasant in behalf of the unemployed. Mr. Rockefeller said he did not know so many men were out of jobs here.

The 200, it is believed, are virtually guaranteed work during the coming winter, and it is expected additional projects costing more than $1,000,000 will start as soon as the engineering department of the huge estate can plan the work.

The construction of a larger lake to guard the estate against another water shortage will be the first project. Others planned or under consideration are: Ten houses for employes, miles of new roads, and a magnificent new school house.

GLADYS O'DONNELL AHEAD IN WOMEN'S AIR DERBY

AMARILLO, Tex., Aug. 21.—(AP) —Aided by a tail wind, Mrs. Gladys O'Donnell, of Long Beach, Calif., today added to her lead in the national women's air derby, from Long Beach to Chicago.

Mrs. O'Donnell averaged nearly 170 miles an hour from Lubbock, Tex., to Amarillo, her elapsed time totaling 42 minutes and 11 seconds for the 120 miles. Mrs. O'Donnell won both legs of today's flight, speeding from Roswell, N. M., to Lubbock in 1 hour, 3 minutes and 41 seconds.

The leader said she loafed along today after observing that Marjorie Doig, of Danbury, Conn., in second place, was detained at Lubbock by a flat tire. Miss Doig, who finished second in today's first lap, and fourth in the Lubbock-Amarillo hop, retained her second place position in total elapsed time, but trailed Mrs. O'Donnell 33 minutes.

SEES SERIOUS DEFECTS IN AMERICAN BANKRUPTCY LAW

Solicitor General Thacher Condemned the Law Before the American Bar Association—Described the Statute As One "Perfectly Designed to Encourage Dishonesty"—Affords Persons Who live Beyond Their Means On Borrowed Money an Easy Way to Escape the Payment of Their Just Debts

CHICAGO, Aug. 21—(AP)—Solicitor General Thomas D. Thacher condemned the American bankruptcy law in an address today before the 53rd annual convention of the American Bar association.

He described the law as one "perfectly designed to encourage dishonesty and reckless disregard of business integrity on the part of large numbers of people" and outlined what he termed were needed changes in the law. His address was based largely on the investigation of abuses revealed in the southern district of New York and conducted before him while he was judge of the United States district court there.

Relating the results of that investigation, he said, "It was obvious that estates were badly administered, with much needless delay in the statute for the creditor and the ease with which debtors procured discharge from their debts, without investigation of the causes of their failure, seemed to encourage fraud and dishonesty in trade. One could not avoid the impression that back of many of the proceedings brought into court there was crookedness and collusion."

Mr. Thacher named, as three purposes which a bankruptcy law should be designed to accomplish, prompt and efficient realization, liquidation and distribution to the creditors of the commercial wreckage of the bankrupt estate; the discharge from their indebtedness of honest debtors, overwhelmed by financial misfortune through no fault of their own, and the prevention of reckless and dishonest practices in trade.

He suggested it might be well for United States attorneys to assume the duties of investigating each bankruptcy and the conduct of each bankrupt.

"This would assure effective and speedy prosecution whenever dishonesty is disclosed," he added.

Speaking of persons not engaged in trade who have occasion to come into bankruptcy only when they have been living beyond their means on money borrowed from their creditors, he said, "the statute affords them an easy way to escape the payment of their just debts, and the small business man who extends them credit has no remedy. A law which tolerates injustice is bad, but a law which encourages such practices on the part of hundreds of salaried people is a corrupting influence in the community which should not be tolerated."

In the delivery of several standing committee reports before the convention today, only one—that on uniform state laws—provoked serious discussion. Vigorous objection was made to the inclusion of a recommendation for a uniform child labor law by William Montgomery of Philadelphia. He opposed the recommendation, he said, because of the different conditions in the various states. The report nevertheless was adopted.

The lawyers also studied international law, radio and aeronautical statutes and proposed changes in the enforcement of the anti-trust laws during the day sessions. A committee on commerce recommended the federal trade commission be given the power to assure immunity from prosecution in trade combines voluntarily submitted by the contracting parties and approved by the commission.

In the evening the convention moved to Chicago's new Civic Opera House to hear Charles Evans Hughes, chief justice of the United States, deliver an address of welcome to foreign visitors.

STATES' RIGHTS ADDRESS BY CHARLES EVANS HUGHES

CHICAGO, Aug. 21—(AP)—Charles Evans Hughes, chief justice of the United States, in an address before the annual convention of the American Bar association tonight advised the states to resist encroachment upon their authority.

He also said the greatest need of the nation was improvement in the administration of justice, especially of criminal law.

The jurist's speech was designed to welcome to the meeting several score distinguished foreign visitors. It was broadcast over the NBC chain through station WGN.

"Paradoxical as it may seem," he said, "not only the security, but the efficiency, of the union lies in the appropriate maintenance of the authority of the states within the proper spheres of local government and local policy. Despite all the economic changes and the intimacies of closely related activities, notwithstanding the vast expansion of interstate commerce in novel forms leading to unanticipated applications of the national authority, which was granted with extraordinary wisdom in a very general formula, the states continue as reservoirs of power reserved, not conferred, by which they deal with a mulitude of particular concerns, and enjoy differentiations congenial to local sentiment.

"However difficult it may be, in constitutional interpretation, to maintain perfectly, and to the satisfaction of all, this balance between state and nation, it is of the essence of American institutions that it should be preserved so far as human wisdom makes this possible, and that encroachments upon state authority, however contrived, should be resisted with the same intelligent determination as that which demands that the national authority should be fully exercised to meet national needs."

The chief justice defended criticism of court decisions as wholesome, and he charged the bar association with responsibility of securing honest, able and fearless prosecuting officers, magistrates and judges.

On the functions of the supreme court, the chief justice said: "If the congress could determine the limits of its own authority, it could destroy the states. It could usurp the authority of the national executive. If the states could determine the limitations of their power, they could destroy the union. If the president could finally interpret the constitution for himself, executive authority could be made supreme. Somewhere in such a system, with a written constitution establishing restrictions of state power and of national power, there must be a final arbiter, that is, final until the people in the constitutional method prescribe a change, if that be desired.

"It was also necessary that this arbiter of constitutional interpretation should be as far removed as possible from the sway of passion, of partisan motives, from the swirl of temporary gusts of the political wind. Moreover, the rights of individuals are concerned in the distribution of powers, and as controversies arise they must be determined in accordance with law, that is, the fundamental law. And thus we have the classic explanation of the scope of the judicial power reposed in a supreme national tribunal."

Responses to Chief Justice Hughes' address were made by Viscount Dunedin, lord of appeals in England, Sir Roger Gregory, M. Henry Decugis of France, Justice Hanna of the Irish Free State, John Stevenson Leadbetter, king's counsel of Edinburgh, Scotland, and Chief Justice Harvey of Canada.

YANKEE AND ENTERPRISE AGAIN WIN YACHT RACES

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 21—(AP)—Yankee and Enterprise each won their second straight race today in the official trials for selection of the defender of the America's cup and each broke the previous record for a thirty mile triangular course, Yankee by the widest margin.

Yankee, sailed by Charles Francis Adams, secretary of the nations navy, suged around the course in two hours, forty-seven minutes and fifty-nine seconds, running away from Whirlwind, the Hammond-Thorne entry.

The record broken was that set by Columbia, the cup defender of 1901, which sailed the cup course in two hours, fifty-one minutes and forty-eight seconds. Yankee bettered that record by 3 minutes and 49 seconds, and Enterprise bettered the old mark by 2 minutes and 28 seconds, much to the discomfort of Weetamoe, the Morgan-Nichols candidate which followed her home.

In the fastest thirty miles ever sailed by a racing yacht Yankee steadily drew ahead of Whirdwind, which had been regarded as a good heavy weather boat, in a brisk northeast wind which ranged in velocity from twenty to twenty-five miles an hour.

The sea was unruly, but the Boston boat gained on each of the three legs. Most of the way her bow was hidden by a smother of foam, but she stood up to the elements as stately as a church.

S. W. GALE IS SWEEPING CONTINENTAL EUROPE

LONDON, Aug. 21—(AP)—The tail of a southwesterly gale that beat the shores of Great Britain and the continent today with the midwinter fierceness tonight was whipping its way across Europe.

Its violence was felt all the way from Scotland to Portugal. Over the Rockey shores of Cornwall tragedy rode on the winds, the Yacht Islander being wrecked with the loss of all on board.

After a midday lull the storm broke out furiously again this afternoon, obliging small vessels in the Straits of Dover to seek refuge and shelter.

The Prince of Wales, however, bound for France from London, in his private airplane, braved the gusty weather. With winds reaching a velocity of 56 miles an hour, he shot from Lympne to Berck like a rocket, making the actual channel crossing in about 20 minutes.

The prince was escorted by an airplane of the Royal Air Force.

WILSON QUESTIONED BY POLICE IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Aug 21—(AP)—Johnny Wilson, once world's middleweight boxing champion, walked into police headquarters here this afternoon to be questioned about the mysterious death in Portland, Me., last Friday of a policeman and at the end of two hours, he walked out again, still a free man. He left behind him a list of alibis which Boston police said convinced them he had had nothing to do with the patrolman's death.

Wilson heard last night that Portland police wanted to question him about Patrolman Michael T. Connolly, who was found drowned in the harbor last Friday with his hands locked in his own handcuffs. Chief of Police Herman Haskell said the former boxer was supposed to have been in Portland just prior to Connolly's death and the theory was held by some authorities that rum runners had flung the patrolman into the sea.

SUIT FOR $17,000 DAMAGES FILED IN SUPERIOR COURT

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 21—Civil suit asking for damages of $17,000 has been instituted by the firm of Doyle & Murphy against the Willimantic Lumber adn Coal company and attachment papers to the amount of $20,000 were filed today at the offce of the town clerk by Deputy Sheriff Lester H. Blish. The case is returnable in superior court the first Tuesday in September.

The allegations in the writ are that the Capitol Theatre corporation was indebted in April, 1927, to the plaintiff company, comprising Thomas W. Doyle and Valentine L. Murphy, to the sum of $77,000, which was unsecured. It is alleged that the defendants had a claim and debt of $27,900 against the theatre corporation and that they through their agents and officers, besought Valentine Murphy, who was a director and secretary of the theatre corporation, to get a mortgage on the property of the corporation to secure the payment of this amount. The allegation states that as a consideration, the defendant concern promised with Murphy that in the event the bill of plaintiff company remained unpaid they would pay to one-half of the proceeds of $27,900, or one-half of such part thereof as might be secured or recovered on the mortgage. It is further alleged that Murphy caused such a mortgage to be given and the defendant obtained as a result from the theatre corporation and as the avails of such mortgage the principal of said sum of $27,800 and the accrued interest, on or about November 1, 1829.

The allegation is then made that the plaintiff company never received any substantial part of the $77,000 indebtedness from the theatre corporation and the defendants refused to pay one-half of $27,900 and accrued interest collected by them on said mortgage. Doyle & Murphy are represented by Attorney William A. King.

Only Kaplan was able to secure bonds, the other three being held at the Norwich Jail.

EASTERN CONN. GRANGERS HOLD ANNUAL OUTING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Aug. 21—Over 250 Eastern Connecticut grangers and guests attended the annual outing of Quinebaug Pomona Grange, No. 2, P. of H., held at Highlawn Poultry farm in Mansfield Hollow today. During the forenoon the visitors to the splendid farm, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Anthony, visited the poultry plant and made acquaintances. A basket lunch was enjoyed at noon and in the afternoon the annual field contests for the silver loving cup were conducted in charge of Elmer Greene of Plainfield. The sports included shoes-off-shoes-on race, calf leading contest, egg rolling, folding chair race, potato race, balloon race and three-legged race. The races were closely run and full of excitement. In summing up the grange points for the various events it was found that Senexet grange of Woodstock, winner of the cup last year, was tied with Echo grange of Mansfield. The decision was declared a draw and the cup withheld for competition next summer. Later in the afternoon chorus singing was led by Everett P. Brown of Plainfield. The outing was in charge of a committee consisting of Elmer L. Greene of Plainfield, Minnie F. Sharpe of Putnam, F. W. Page and Susie G. Williams of Brooklyn and A. E. Anthony.

HOLY SPIRIT ESSENTIAL AGENCY IN PRAYER

WILLIMANTIC CAMP GROUND, Aug. 21.—Thursday dawned bright and fair and the morning classes were held in the pleasant surroundings that are here on a fair day.

The processional hymn used by the children for the 9:15 service this morning was "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," with the tune Coronation. The speaker was Rev. W. D. Hamilton, of Willimantic. His address was based upon the story of Paul's trial after his arrest where he faced the mob as told in Acts 28. 1-11. Mr. Hamilton mingled with his discourse some interesting facts connected with his own Christian experience and call to the Christian ministry. Prof. J. R. Cheney was in charge of the prayer service which followed.

Dr. Birney's address aimed to present the Holy Spirit as an essential agency in prayer. He spoke of the way some people ignore the Holy Spirit and urged attention to "the tragedy of undernourished souls." In the place of prayer such as portrayed by the Saviour is the source of a vital Christian experience.

Miss Mayo's class at 1:30 was devoted to the exhibition of a mock banquet with one of her pupils as toastmaster and others of the same pupils making after dinner speeches showing how to improve the camp meeting next year.

The Alcohol Question

Robert L. Sengle, deputy administrator of Hartford, was the speaker at 2:15. He began his address by declaring that so far as alcohol is concerned the world would be better off if it were completely wiped out. What then, said he, is more logical than to prohibit the traffic in alcoholic liquors? In a logical and well arranged address he declared that the law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor is enforced equally as well as any other prohibition law. The idea that the 18th amendment is any violation of the rights of the states or an infringement upon the rights of citizens he did not regard as true and he studied law under no less an authority than the late Chief Justice of the United States, William Howard Taft. To repeal the state enforcement act, he urged, would be to encourage lawlessness and that much more is involved in this issue for it affects the whole body of law and the protection which the government can afford the safety of its people. He appealed in closing that all good citizens join with the various organizations to uphold the integrity of our government and see to it that our enforcement act is not repealed.

In a recent ball game played by two teams on the ground, a woman, Miss Pauline Mayo, was admitted as a member of one of the teams and it is alleged that she contributed in a marked way to the victory which came to her team, the score being 10 to 5.

Friday is Inter-denominational day and the afternoon service will aim in an especial way to strengthen the bonds of inter-denominational fellowship. The speaker will Rev. Dr. David Pitt, pastor of the Central Baptist church, of Norwich.

Dr. Birney's topics for Friday will be as follows: At 11, "The Holy Spirit and the Prayer Fellowship"; at 7:45 p. m., "The World's Only Portrait of God."

Howard T. Pierce, of New London, is the pianist this year, as in the past few years. Miss Roberta Bitgood, of New London, is his able assistant, often substituting for him in cases when he is unable to attend. Miss Bitgood is also a talented violinist who often favors the camp meeting with her choice violin music. Chester Shields, of South Manchester, a boy who has a wonderful talent as a cornetist, is also giving valuable assistance in the music. This, with the large chorus choir, the solo singing of Justin Lawrie, and the additional duets, quartets, etc., which so often come in by surprise, are making the music of the camp meeting a worthy attraction and a valuable accompaniment for the able speakers who appear here from day to day.

Mrs. Dunstam Recovering

Miss Harriet Hollister, of East Hartford, is the guest of Rev. and Mrs. O. E. Tourtellotte in their cottage at 32 Wesley circle.

Rev. and Mrs. Samuel F. Maine and little daughter, Priscilla, are occupying their cottage on Wesley circle. Mr. Maine is pastor of the Federated church in Moodus, Conn.

Mrs. Rufus Hurlbutt and daughter, Miss Jean Hurlbutt, and Thomas Champlin, of Gales Ferry, are in the Gales Ferry house.

ONE single point missed may mean a serious breakdown and a bill for repairs. Socony Service men cannot miss. They work from a chart of your car prepared by Socony engineers in cooperation with the car manufacturer. For 16 weeks they have been trained in Socony Schools to master the art of scientific lubrication—the Certified way.

They protect your steering wheel and upholstery with specially prepared covers. Each separate lubricant goes to the exact spot where it is needed—not on the steering wheel and upholstery.

Drive into a Socony station today and watch the man lubricate your car from its own chart. It's a pleasure to see how quickly a really scientific job is done. And remember—Socony Certified Lubrication costs no more than the old fashioned hit-or-miss greasing.

DANIELSON

SINGER AND LEONARD AT NURSES' HOME BENEFIT SHOW

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Aug. 21.—An effort is being made by the committee in charge of the three-round exhibition bout to be staged in Danielson on September 26, for the benefit of the nurses home fund of the Day Kimball hospital to have James J. "Gentleman Gene" Tunney, retired world's heavyweight boxing champion present at the matches. Frank J. Barber, sports promoter, is making arrangements for the bout and already has two headliners of the fistic world signed to clash at the state armory. They are Al Singer and Bennie Leonard. The appearance of Mr. Tunney is not certain, but it is hoped by members of the committee that the retired champion will be able to grace the armory with his presence. In addition to the possibility of the conqueror of Jack Dempsey being present, the crowd is assured of the attendance of Joe Humphries, a renowned character of the boxing ring who will tell all there is to be told through his famous megaphone.

The response to the appeal for funds to provide the nurses of the Putnam hospital with suitable living quarters, has been amazing. At the end of the 7th week of the drive the fund is well beyond the $10,000 mark. Contributions this week have been steady and have come forth with encouraging regularity. The Danielson and Brooklyn workers continue their enthusiastic efforts to push the endeavor across and with the already long list of benefits planned, it is now a foregone conclusion that the drive will be crowned with a brilliant finale.

Ground for the home was broken last week. A number of eastern Windham county workers are employed, a few of them being from Danielson. During the past week the contractors have made remarkable progress. The foundation is being formed and it will be only a matter of a few days before tradesmen will begin actual work on the structure.

Two cars and a motor coach of the Connecticut company were involved in a collision which occurred at 10:10 o'clock this morning on Main street in front of the Danielson Trust company building. The bus was about to enter the terminal at the depot when it encountered a car operated by Charles Thompson of Dayville. Mr. Thompson swung to the extreme right to allow the coach to pass. A third car driven by Miss Minnie Nutthall of Putnam came between the two vehicles and did not stop until it wedged under the front mudguard of the public service van. In wedging between the two cars, the Nutthall car managed to do considerable damage to the Thompson car. Neither of the drivers was injured. Chief of Police John McFarland investigated but made no arrests.

State officers at the Danielson barracks are continuing their drive this week against drivers operating cars possessing defective brakes and improper safety devices. During the last week several motorists have been arrested, and fined for their negligence. Since the state wide checkup of cars, the state officers have made discoveries of numerous other violations of motor laws, resulting in the arrest of operators. The drive as previously stated is being conducted in cooperation with other New England states, fostering the "Save-A-Life" campaign.

Contractors in charge of the erection of the repeater station for the Bell Telephone company, being built on the Brooklyn road, have made considerable progress on the excavation work since operations were started a week ago. When completed, the building is to house apparatus for the strengthening of currents traveling over the subterranean cable passing through Danielson between New York and Boston.

George Schum, of New Jersey, forfeited a bond of $15 posted last week when arrested by County Game Warden Thomas Daniels, of Plainfield, on a game law violation charge. The bond was posted with Justice A. R. Scranton, Jr., of South Woodstock and was taken by him when Schum failed to appear in court this morning.

PUTNAM

FINES AND JAIL SENTENCES GIVEN IN LIQUOR CASES

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Aug. 21.—The trial of six liquor cases took up a five-hour session of city court today. Judge M. H. Geissler returned a verdict for the acquittal of Archille Gregoire, north end fruit dealer, who was presented on a charge of sale of liquor. Mrs. Julia Gardner of 194 Main street was acquitted of a charge of sale of liquor on July 28, to an undercover agent in the service of the state police department, when with the aid of a barrage of witnesses, she was successful in proving her contention that she was visiting in Stamford with relatives at the time the sale is alleged to have been procured.

As pleas of not guilty were entered in every case excepting one, Sergt. George L. Gardner, commandant at the Danielson barracks of state police, was forced to produce Cleo Mayer of Pomfret to testify against the array of defendants. As Mayer entered the court room between two policemen, the murmurings of the audience that filled the little room to its doors, were clearly audible. From the remarks passed about it was gleaned that Mayer will undoubtedly be socially ostracized by the rank and file of the community.

The remarks of the milling crowd had little or no effect upon the state witness. Throughout the long session he was subjected to severe cross-examination by Attorney Miron. He spoke unfalteringly, placing particular emphasis upon dates and hours and in general, underwent the ordeal so carefully that the defense in only two instances were able to puncture his testimony.

Philip Desautel was the first violator to be convicted. He received a fine of $200 and costs on a charge of sale and a 30-day suspended jail sentence on a second count of owning and keeping. Desautel through Attorney Irving H. Miron, who undertook to defend him without recompense, pleaded poverty. Mr. Desautel, a cripple, is the father of several children. His infirmity greatly handicapped him in obtaining employment and conditions brought on through his inability to secure work, he claimed, forced him to resort to the sale of intoxicating beverages. Attorney Miron argued for him, but was unable to secure a small fine and suspended jail sentence, when Judge Geissler ruled that such circumstances did not warrant one to resort to law breaking to obtain a living, and subsequently imposed fine and sentence.

Edward Dubois, of 120 Pomfret street, a widower and father of two children, was unable to pay a fine of $300 imposed when found guilty of charges of sale and owning and keeping of liquors and subsequently was committed to the county jail at Brooklyn to work out the requirements of his fine. The circumstances surrounding the Dubois case as outlined by Attorney Miron, were pitiful. Dubois is without means of support. His son, 19 years of age, has been discharged from his job in a local mill, because of industrial depression and the man himself for the same reason has been unable to find employment. He has been in the county jail at Brooklyn since his arrest last Friday, owing to his inability to raise bonds to effect his release.

Attorney Miron argued determinedly for the unfortunate victim. He stressed the need of the father's presence in his home, as the mother of his children is dead. It was recommended by the defense that some satisfactory means of punishment be devised to suit the situation in order that the liquor traffic may be stopped. Judge Geissler was not in accord with the defense counsel, although he promised the case would be re-considered at a later date. In the necessity of keeping the morale of the people high and to check further demonstrations, Judge Geissler said he was forced to carry out dictates of the law.

Ernest Beaudry, of 66 School street, arrested by State Policeman Lionel Poirier of the Danielson barracks in Friday evening's incursion upon alleged speakeasies, was fined a total of $400 and costs, when found guilty of charges of owning and keeping and sale of intoxicating liquor. Mayer, the state's witness, testified as to having purchased six bottles of home brew beer on the night of July 30. At this point the state witness was subjected to considerable cross-examination by Attorney Miron. Mayer stated that he was retained by Lieut. R. V. Urquhart at the Danielson barracks to procure evidence of liquor law violation. His salary for this work, he said, was $150 a month. Mr. Miron questioned the veracity of the statement and in an effort to corroborate it, called Sergt. George L. Gardner to the witness stand. Sergt. Gardner testified that although he was commanding officer at the state police station at the present time, he said Lieut. Urquhart did not disclose to him the amount of salary being paid Mayer.

Mayer returned to the stand. During questioning by Attorney Miron, he squirmed in his chair somewhat and began to evidence signs of nervous strain. The attorney became alarmed at his motions and inquired as to the contents of his pockets: "What have you got in your pocket?" was the alarming question hurled at the witness by the lawyer. "Matches," was the retort. "The other one," Attorney Miron asked, jumping to his feet. "A gun," came the calm reply of the witness. Mr. Miron, somewhat excited, informed the court that he would not go on with the hearing unless the weapon was removed from Mayer's person. Officer R. V. Scranton of the state police arose and offered to take possession of the pistol. Miron objected to the policeman's movement and informed the court that the city retains a captain of police, "who should be able to handle the gun situation around here." Judge Geissler instructed Officer Scranton to take the fire-arm, as the court room was crowded to its portals and Scranton's position simplified things. Scranton advanced to the witness and upon removing the gun, pointed it in the direction of the floor, released the trigger and to the surprise of the startled spectators the magazine of the weapon sprung up, proving it to be a novel cigarette holder. The gesture elicited general laughter from the gallery and drew smiles to the faces of the court officials who were taken unawares.

With the Beaudry case disposed of, Judge Geissler declared a recess until two o'clock and an adjournment was in order at 11:30. The major part of the afternoon session was taken up with the trial of the case against Julia L. Gardner. Mrs. Gardner was arrested Friday evening after a search and liquor seizure at the home of her sister, Miss Rhoda Bowen of Main street.

On the stand for the second time, Mayer testified to going to the Gardner home Monday evening, July 28 and obtaining from Mrs. Gardner, a pint of liquor which was given to him in exchange for a bottle and 75 cents. Officer Scranton told of going to the Gardner house with Mayer, searching him thoroughly and sending him in with a $2 bill to purchase evidence.

Mrs. Gardner on the stand, denied ever having seen Mayer and said at the time the sale is alleged to have been made, she was vacationing with her daughter in Stamford. Letters from several people in Putnam and elsewhere in the state, bearing official U. S. postmarkings were introduced to substantiate this claim. A score of defense witnesses testified that Mrs. Gardner was in Stamford from July 4th until August 11, and did not return to Putnam at any time during that period. In view of this fact, the statements of the state witnesses were weakened and a verdict of "not guilty" on the sale charge was forthcoming although the woman was convicted on a second charge of owning and keeping and was fined $200 and costs. An appeal was entered and the matter will be taken up again at the September session of superior court.

The arguments of Mr. Johnson, prosecuting attorney, and Mr. Miron, furnished plenty of grounds for exciting laughter from the gallery, when Mr. Johnson leaving his desk during Mr. Miron's plea for an acquittal in the Gardner case, caused the latter to say, "I don't blame my brother for leaving the room. I would do the same thing if I had to take the word of a wilful and deliberate perjurer, (pointing to Mayer), to secure the conviction of an innocent woman." Mr. Johnson replied with what his legal opponent termed a "wise crack", when he addressed Miron, "Then skin him alive."

Archille Gregoire was the only alleged bootlegger to escape fine and jail sentence. His dismissal came after Attorney Miron trapped Mayer in direct testimony and drew from him conflicting statements as to what occurred on the night of July 28, when Mayer with State Policeman Scranton "purchased" liquor from the north end fruit dealer.

Arthur Plankey, self styled office boy at the Pepin taxi station on South Main street, was found guilty of sale of liquor to Mayer on the night of July 29. Plankey drew a fine of $300 and costs which he appealed to the superior court. In cross examination he denied the allegation of the police and added that Mayer had never been in his place of business on such a mission as was charged.

William Leclair of Main street was cleared of a charge of operating under the influence of liquor, when Attorney Johnson in presenting his case stated that he had investigated and had failed to find a witness to substantiate the charges preferred by Officer Joseph Page, who arrested Leclair following an auto accident last Friday evening on Mechanics street. Leclair pleaded not guilty and with the recommendation of the prosecuting attorney, Judge Geissler nolled the charge.

It was exactly 4:30 p. m., when a motion was entertained for an adjournment, making the trial of today's liquor cases one of the longest sessions on record in the annals of city court.

Main street, from the intersection of Canal street, to a point near May street received a well deserved coating of oil this afternoon.

Receiver George M. Coffin of the First National Bank was in Woonsocket today on business.

One day this week Donald S. Mc Learn of Grove street, killed a large snake which was coiled around a stalk in the garden in the rear of his house. The snake viewed later by a resident of South Carolina, was identified as a rattler. One rattle was already developed on the end of its tail and a second was forming.

Putnam's only gold star mother—Mrs. Katherine Bigley of East Putnam, mother of Joseph Bigley, who was killed in France in September, 1918, will set sail with a group of other gold star mothers next Wednesday. When in France, she will visit the grave of her boy, whose life was sacrificed in the battle of the Argonne. His grave is in the Meuse Argonne forest, scene of the great American offensive drive, which brought about the end of the war. Private Bigley was but 19 years of age when killed.

The September sessions of civil and criminal superior court are slated to open in this city on Tuesday, Sept. 2. Judge Jennings will preside.

CURBING LOUD RADIOS

Radio is one of the modern devices out of which the public gets much daily enjoyment. It has grown by leaps and bounds until there are not many homes but what have some kind of a set by which they receive the programmes through the air.

While this form of entertainment is coming to the many homes and being enjoyed, it is also apparent that like other good things it can be overdone. There are those who are disposed to think that an entire neighborhood is desirous of such music as their set can provide in as great volume as they can produce and constantly. It doesn't take long to find out that such is far from the real facts.

However much there may be enjoyment from such radio programmes as are curbed to the limits of an apartment, there is no doubt but what the attempts to entertain all those in the block are unpleasantly received. Such efforts cause annoyance. They do not fit in with the likes of the various households and when persistent in become a nuisance.

Evidently such a situation as this has prevailed in Hartford for quite a time for it has finally been voted by the health commission of that city to submit to the city council a proposed amendment to the city ordinances to the effect that "when any radio or similar device, in the opinion of the board of health, disturbs or tends to disturb the health of persons in its vicinity the board of health may declare the operation of this radio or similar device to be a public nuisance dangerous to health and may prohibit its operation." It is also provided that any such order shall be enforced by the police of the city.

What Hartford will do with this proposed ordinance will be awaited with interest but it is in keeping with sentiment in many cities. The fault lies in the fact that poor judgment is exercised in the use of the loud speakers. Instead of confining them to the requirements of those who want to listen they are made to do public duty in an undesirable manner. Evidently such protests as have been made have been fruitless in Hartford, but if a special ordinance is adopted to regulate them there will be no one to blame but those who have insisted upon annoying their neighbors and the public. More cities, including Norwich, may be forced to similar action.

MODIFICATIONS AFTER TESTS

Eyes have been turned upon New York for a considerable time in order to learn the effect of those laws which bear the name of Senator Baumes. They are drastic and were intended to be. They were drafted to meet the crime conditions in that state and to do it in such a way that the public would be protected against the confirmed criminals.

There isn't any doubt but what the laws have worked as intended, except that they have gone beyond instead of falling short of the mark. In the provision that the fourth offender, the person who was convicted for the fourth time of a felony should be sentenced for life, it has been found that there are instances where even the courts realize that such action is not justified. Other states have followed the lead of New York, but Michigan was obliged to change its fourth offender law because it meant that conviction of a violation of the liquor law was sufficient to draw a life sentence. Michigan never intended that and the result was that it amended the law.

The experience in New York has proved that the Baumes laws have teeth but there has been a feeling, as the result of experience, that certain modifications should be made. Senator Baumes has taken plenty of time to weigh these proposals but he has finally consented to changes which will probably be submitted to the next legislature in that state. The indications are that the parole board will be asked to deal with the cases, which will mean putting more cases under its jurisdiction, but the feeling is that the reorganized parole board is on such a basis now that such would be justified. The purpose is not to hasten the time when hopeless criminals can return to prey upon the public, but to leave the way open for parole to those who can prove that they are through with criminal activity.

JUDGING THE ALIENS

Bringing undesirable aliens into this country is in violation of the law and deserves a stiff rebuke whenever it can be proved. This involves a practice in which reputable individuals and steamship lines are not likely to be involved. At least they are not intentionally engaging in such business and according to a decision of Federal Judge Woolsey they are entitled to a fair consideration of the circumstances if they become involved in any such matter.

This decision resulted from the imposition of fines amounting to $2,000 upon a steamship line for bringing undesirable aliens into this country. Should any steamship company be engaged in such practice intentionally they most certainly should be made to feel the full effects of the law, but in this instance it is difficult to see how the company was to blame.

In this case five immigrants had been landed in this country by the steamship company, and when subjected to a medical examination it was found four were suffering from heart trouble with one afflicted with a bad arm. They were subjects for deportation and the port authorities held that the steamship line should have kept them from embarking. The judge, however, holds that inasmuch as they had all been passed by the American consul abroad there was no apparent reason for challenging their passage. It doesn't appear that steamship lines are obliged to make physical examinations in order to determine the health of immigrants. Evidently the consuls do not resort to such a measure and if American consuls see no obstacle to the entrance of the individuals the steamship companies have little reason to be suspicious. The medical examination on this side is a precaution against the admission of undesirables and until the companies are required to render such inspection there will be a feeling that the court has done the right thing in remitting the fines which were imposed upon the steamship company in question.

It doesn't appear that the steamship company knew anything about the defective physical conditions of these five. Certainly the American consul whose visa was accepted had just as good reason of knowing it and finding it out. Had the company taken the five without the consul's visa it would have been one thing, but that wasn't the case. One would hardly expect a steamship company to say who could and who could not come to this country if they had necessary credentials.

CONN. AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

Dr. George A. Works has completed his service as the president of the Connecticut Agricultural college. His term at the head of that institution, covering a year, has been much shorter than was expected. Dr. Works has returned to the west but during his stay he has had considerable to say concerning the institution of which he was the head and what he thinks should be done with it.

Dr. Works didn't find things entirely to his liking. He wasn't satisfied to conduct the state college within the lines which Connecticut has indicated it desires. He thinks it should be made a state college along the lines of state universities in many of the states, to compete, for instance, with the many universities which are within the state or very close to it and that the idea of keeping it an agricultural college should be abandoned.

That isn't an entirely new idea but it is contrary to the way in which Connecticut has felt about it. When advanced on other occasions the decision has been against it. There has been the feeling that a state university reaching out beyond the agricultural instruction as now provided at Storrs is not required. Thus if Dr. Works found that he was unable to accomplish a development in keeping with his views there can be no surprise. His views have been received and they can be filed for future reference if the idea of a state university is again advanced. At present Connecticut is desirous of getting the best possible results out the Connecticut Agricultural college as such and it will be with that idea in mind that it will look to Dr. Works' successor for accomplishments of that character. Such betterments as can be provided will be expected and welcomed. The state isn't ready, as yet, to change the name or purpose of the Connecticut Agricultural college.

BEWARE THE SWINDLER

Aged people with money in the bank are looked upon as easy prey by those who are engaged in swindling. They have found by practice that they can make a good impression with a slick story, attractive promises and smooth talk. How they know that a person has money matters little. Sometimes they find it out through acquaintance, sometimes in a very round about way, sometimes just through inference. Needless to say they are trained in their activities and adept in knowing where and when to strike.

A woman was approached this week with the promise that "if you give us some money we can make $10,000 for you." The story was sufficient to brand the swindlers for what they are. Nevertheless they got the confidence of the woman. She parted with her savings, the $560 which she had in the bank, and she is not only wondering where the $10,000 is but also the money which she had safely tucked away against need.

This is by no means an isolated case. They bob up frequently. Probably more of them happen than are expected. The loss is enough for many without having the publicity added to it, but such cases should serve as a warning to all others to beware of those friends or strangers who promise the impossible.

The desire to possess more wealth is a common one. The willingness to risk one's bank roll indicates what might be regarded as complete faith, but those who fail to make a complete investigation of all such propositions and know what they are doing before parting with their money make the mistake of not using good judgment and failing to profit from the painful experiences of others. And the really deplorable thing, aside from the swindling game, is that those who are caught are those who can the least afford to suffer such losses. Their circumstances are bad enough without parting with their hard earned cash, and perhaps last dollar.

EDITORIAL NOTES

There are occasional days and nights when the weatherman seems to be thinking of the hayfever sufferers.

The man on the corner says: It is strange how many city beautiful movements disappear with the passing of spring.

There will be several disappointed individuals when they fail to find their names in the list of 59 named by James W. Gerard as ruling the United States.

CARS, COLORS AND—DREAMS

With careful precision Wanda added a broad stripe of brilliant yellow. Then stepping back, cocking her auburn head to one side, she surveyed her masterpiece with satisfaction. Eureka! It was gorgeous! There were stripes and crescents and stars of sky blue, emerald green, scarlet, lavender, henna—just a maze of glorious colors. Queer? Rather—or boisterous? Well, yes. But then they were all the rage among collegiate flivvers. And, of course, Wanda had to be loudest of the loud.

She wiped the sticky paint from her finger tips on the front of her white overalls and tossed the brush into a can of gasoline. Just wait till that blond life guard glimpsed this job! He'd soon forget Lulu and her uke. Gerry and her skin-tinted bathing suit. He'd sit up and take notice of Wanda and "Wanda-rin' Willie!" And then—well, Wanda had hopes.

A nasal auto horn shattered the stillness of Eastwood terrace. The motor of a gaudy touring car was raced noisily. Wanda slammed her book closed and waved out the window.

"Be right down, gang," she called. "Just a sec'."

Hurrying around to the rear of the building, she entered her own automobile, started the motor and wobbled out the driveway to the street. A shriek of delight from the other car greeted her arrival.

"Cats, dogs and bowwows, where'dja get that waggin?" slender Horace shouted from behind the wheel. George Mayford arose indignantly on the back seat and dramatically addressed all hearers: "Some junk dealer hath gyped our Wanda! Men, to horse, that we may overtake the culprit before he flees the country!"

The girls giggled. Wanda felt a bit hurt.

"Laugh at my car, laugh at me," she said. "Now! Those who can refrain from rude outbursts may enter my vehicle and be driven to the lake, where swimming and hot-dogging will ensue."

The two flivvers rambled down the terrace. At the beach parking space was found. Lunch baskets, swimming suits and ukes were removed from the less colorful car and taken on the run to the life guards' tent. The girls entered the tent and changed into their swimming suits while the fellows gathered driftwood and built a bonfire. Everybody moved with an air of business. No wisecracks were fired. Not until big Roy Nelson, the blond hero of Eastwood beach, arrived did merrymaking begin.

Holding hands in one line the gang galloped across the sand and dashed splashing into the water. Big Boy cracked the whip and little Wanda, who was on the end, went head over heels into the blue surf. Choking and gulping she came up. The water was only waist deep, but she staggered and went down like a load of rock. In three leaps Roy was beside her. He scooped her dripping out of the water and bore her shoreward in his strong arms. There Wanda committed an error. She laughed gayly, and Roy, perceiving this, immediately ducked her and kept ducking her until she gulped out a watery "nuff."

But Wanda for the first time that year had won Roy's attention. That evening, as they gathered around the fire and cooking weenies, Roy sought out the tricky little deceiver and took a place beside her. Wanda glowed. Now if she could only get him to take a glance at her flivver. But, shoot it all, Lulu with her uke and graceful Gerry with her skin-tinted bathing suit—they always shooed Wanda out of the picture.

The evening was delightful. Stars twinkled in the deep blue sky and a full moon gleamed upon the water.

But to Wanda it was just an evening. She sulked by herself. Lulu and Gerry had Roy's complete attention. Well, someday he'd be bound to see her car, and then—

Roy found Wanda sitting beside the tent, her chin on her knees.

"Come, little one," he said softly, "me and you is going home."

Wanda couldn't believe her ears. He Roy, the king of the beach, to take home little Wanda of the auburn head and saucy face?

"Repeat that please, Roy," she sighed.

"I want you to see my new car. A Hemingway roadster, and it's a dream."

Oh, well, what chance would "Wanda-rin' Willie" stand against a Hemingway? Resignedly Wanda followed her hero to the waiting car.—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21— Announcement of 1930 census totals served to revive the 20-year debate about the shift of federal political power from farmer to industrialist hands.

That is the political product of the cityward flow of rural folks and Representative Greenwood, one of those lonely democrats in Indiana's house delegation, saw possible new factors in the endless prohibition and immigration restriction wrangles a san additional result of the prospective reapportionment of house memberships for elections in 1932.

Greenwood has been on the house census committee since he entered congress and has heard a lot on all these aspects of reapportionment.

He made no predictions as to whether the prohibition and immigration policy changes might be due to the indicated increased city and decreased country vote in the house of the 73rd congress, but it was clear he expected the wets and advocates of more liberal immigration policies to make material gains.

It All Depends

It would be difficult to figure out what this reapportionment would do to the farm bloc in the house. So much depends upon what each state does about fixing boundaries of its new congressional districts, whether it is to have more or less house representation than now.

Also, it's difficult to say definitely whether a state is farmer-controlled or in the grip of industrial interests from a political standpoint. Many of them seem to be about 50-50.

Still it is quite clear that industrial voting power is steadily overhauling the farmer strength. That is the point about which all the reapportionment hubbub has turned for 20 years—that and the personal political fortunes of some sitting house members.

A Connection?

The Bystander was impressed with the fact that John Garner, democratic house leader, might have had an eye on the country-vs.-city controversy when he got out his speech on the right of Texas to subdivide herself into five states if she so desired.

He did not say so. He gave no reason for taking that subject up in the Congressional Record but it might easily have a bearing.

Assuming that Garner is right—and nobody has challenged him yet—and that Texas may at any time under existing law cut herself up into five separate states, that would mean eight additional Texas votes in the senate.

Those eight votes would have put his party in control of the senate many times in the past, for they would all be democrats, Garner contended. They would also, almost as certainly, be farm bloc men.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Impy Has Chills

Jack Frost may pinch and make you ill,
But fear can give a greater chill.
—Mother West Wind.

"Well," said Timmy the Flying Squirrel to Impy the black Chipmunk. "I must be going. You see, I have had nothing to eat as yet and I am very hungry. Of course, I had that beetle a few moments ago, but that was just an appetizer."

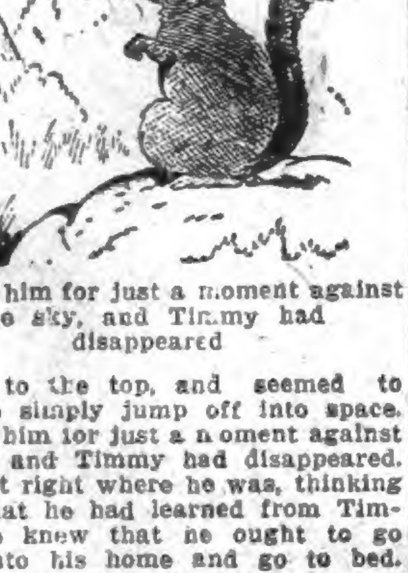
"Do you mean to say that you haven't eaten a thing all day?" inquired Impy.

"Do you get up and eat in the night?" asked Timmy.

"Of course not," replied Impy. "That would be a foolish thing to do. I sleep all night."

"Well, I sleep all day, so, of course, I don't get up to eat," said Timmy. "Good by."

Timmy jumped over to a small tree growing beside the old stone wall, ran rapidly to the top, and seemed to Impy to simply jump off into space. He saw him for just a moment against the sky and Timmy had disappeared. Impy sat right where he was, thinking over what he had learned from Timmy. He knew that he ought to go down into his home and go to bed. He knew that that was the only sensible thing to do. But it wasn't real dark yet and Impy felt a certain amount of excitement in staying out. He felt as if he were very bold and brave.



He saw him for just a moment against the sky, and Timmy had disappeared

At last he decided that he was getting a bit sleepy and that it would be wise to go to bed. He was just about to move when, from the top of a small tree very near him, came a strange quavering cry. It wasn't so very loud, but there was something in it that started the cold chills to running all over Impy. It was the cry of Spooky the Screech Owl. Impy didn't know this, for he had never heard Spooky before; but he did know that somehow a strange terror had taken possession of him. Cold chills ran all over him. He was too frightened to move. He simply couldn't have run. This, though he didn't know it was a very good thing. Had he moved, Spooky the Screech Owl would probably have seen him. As it was, he sat there motionless and Spooky did not see him at all.

Again came that quavering cry; and again the chills ran all over Impy the black Chipmunk. How he did wish that he had gone to bed with the rest of the family. He no longer felt bold and brave. He felt just scared. That was it, scared. He felt almost too scared to breathe. He just sat there—a little black, frightened Chipmunk, filled with an unnamed fear.

It seemed to Impy that he sat there ever and ever so long before he heard that voice again, this time over in the Old Orchard. Actually it was only a minute or two. Even then, although he felt sure that the unknown owner of that voice was no longer close at hand, Impy did not dare move. Suddenly there was a light thump right beside him. Had not Impy been too frightened to move, he would have jumped right off the stone wall. But he was so frightened that he was beyond jumping.

"Wa-wa-wa-was that Spooky?" chattered Impy. "I di-di-di-didn't know who it was."

"Yes, that was Spooky," replied Timmy. "I thought I would just come over here and see that you were all right. Now, if you'll take my advice, you'll go to bed."

"I'm going," replied Impy; and without another word, not even saying thank you or good night, he dived down between the stones of the old stone wall.

YOUR HEALTH

Hot Weather Psychology

By Seale Harris, M. D., Professor Emeritus of Medicine, University of Alabama, Birmingham, Alabama. (From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

The attitude of mind has much to do with comfort during the summer. The Philosopher who realizes that summer is a part of the year that must come and must be endured, however much discomfort it brings, is not disturbed by the heat but goes on with his or her regular daily duties without complaining.

Walt Masons philosophy is good. He said: "One should remember that hot weather is necessary to make prunes grow, and when we have a long hot dry spell, instead of worrying about the heat, we should thank God that the prune crop is safe." Likewise, we should remember that hot weather is necessary to produce cotton, corn, and other food and money crops that are the basis of our wealth and well-being.

When one has the attitude of mind that he must accept the inevitable hot weather in summer and that he must be a "good sport" and take what comes without complaining he can stand the heat much better than he who wilts and says "I just can't stand this hot weather." It is better to say, "I can stand hot weather as well as anyone else. I may not like it, but I can endure it as others are doing, and without whining."

It is good psychology not to talk of the heat, or to allow one's self to think about it, but follow the English slogan during the war of "business as usual," and attend to regular duties during the hot weather as a matter of course. We cannot regulate the weather for our comfort or convenience, and the more one worries about it, and the more frequently one consults the thermometer the harder it is to bear the heat. Get busy and forget it.

Stories That Recall Others

Sunny, driving through the countryside with his grandmother, observed some pigs eating greedily in a field of clover and inquired what they were doing.

"They are eating clover" the grandmother informed the little fellow. "They like it just like you like spinach."

Sunny was instant in his disclaimer: "But I don't like spinach at all," said he.

One hot afternoon Jackie's uncle took him to a soda fountain in the neighborhood confectionery.

"What will you have—a frappe?" his uncle inquired.

"No," replied Jackie with decision. "We have those all the time for breakfast."

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Sessions Clock Co., Forestville

Clocks have been manufactured on the site of the present factory of The Sessions Clock Co. in Forestville for well over 100 years, the earliest predecessor of the present company being J. C. Brown, who was in business between the years 1827 and 1837, and there are indications that clocks were made even earlier than this period on or near the site of the present factory. His business was later taken over by Elisha Welch and others and became known as the E. N. Welch Mfg. company, which company was later succeeded, in 1903, by The Sessions Clock Co.

The earliest clocks were largely of the wooden works variety. Later on the use of brass in the movements came in, and in the Welch regime clocks of general household types and also alarm clocks and the large types of weight clocks for store and office use that have always been popular, manufactured.

At the present time the company manufactures a very complete variety of household clocks of all types, including Westminster chime clocks, striking mantel and wall clocks, banjos, eight-day alarm clocks and desk and novelty clocks, store and office clocks, and has lately gone extensively into the manufacture of synchronous electric clocks, in which the time keeping element is accurately controlled by the regulated frequency of alternating current, now available throughout nearly the entire country. A large and very completely equipped wood working plant is an important factor of this concern which has particularly specialized in the manufacture of types of clocks featuring finely finished hardwood cases in a wide variety of patterns and styles. The company employs about 500 at present.

Salesrooms are maintained in the Woolworth building in New York city and in the Kesner building in Chicago. Pacific coast agents are located in San Francisco.

After Derby Lead

To-night: Get Rid of BURNING FEET
The New Right Way
THE ENGLISH WAY

To take out the agony—banish all burning, aches and soreness—try the new 1930 way and in 15 to 20 minutes your foot troubles are over.

Just put two tablespoonfuls of Radox in a gallon of hot water and soak your feet for 20 minutes—you never had such a joyous, invigorating foot bath in all your life—you can just feel all the acid and poisons coming out of the stuffed up pores of your poor feet.

Do this to-night and to-morrow your feet will be so strong and sturdy and vigorous that you can walk all day long without discomfort.

It's the oxygyn in Radox that gets into the thousands of pores of your feet and chases out the poisons that have accumulated there for years—it's these acids and poisons that make your feet ache and burn and nothing in the world will get them out but Radox.

You can get a package of Radox at any good drugstore—it is inexpensive and if it doesn't put new life and vigor into and bring blessed comfort to your distressed feet—money back.

ILL. REPUBLICANS MAY ADOPT "MIDDLE OF ROAD" PLATFORM

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 21.—(P)—A "Middle of the Road" platform to prevent dissension in party ranks on the prohibition question may be offered to republicans of Illinois in convention here tomorrow. The democratic state convention yesterday demanded repeal of all dry laws.

The proposed platform, which may be changed by the resolutions committee and further modified by the delegates, is the work of candidates for the major offices of the state and other party leaders. Final touches were added to it today at two conferences.

While the group which formulated the tentative platform worked in secrecy, various participants indicated that the plank concerning the prohibition issue will be relatively dry as compared with the attitude of the democrats.

Makers of the platform, favored a plank that would let the referendum in connection with the November election decide the party's attitude on modification or repeal of dry laws.

The extreme wets, headed by Cook county and Peoria delegations, are prepared, however, to make demands for a repeal plank similar to the one adopted by the democrats. Bernard W. Snow, chairman of the Cook county republican committee, said today he was prepared to introduce resolutions for such a plank.

Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, republican candidate for United States senator, has indicated that she would approve permitting the people to decide the prohibition issue for themselves in the fall election rather than making it a campaign problem.

BOGUE BOUND OVER TO CRIMINAL COURT ON CHARGE OF MURDER

Stanley S. Bogue, 34 of Old Mystic self-confessed slayer of Mrs. Eva J. Roberts, 52, and wife of Medrick Roberts, of Mystic, and Ole Ostberg, 65, a lodger at the slain woman's home, was presented on a charge of murder at a special session of the Groton town court Thursday morning. Bogue pleaded guilty, but because of it not being permissible by law for a person to plead guilty where capital punishment is the penalty upon conviction, Judge Cornelius C. Costello refused to allow the plea and as a result testimony was taken to show probable cause. With this testimony taken, Judge Costello bound Bogue over to the next term of the criminal superior court, which will convene the first Tuesday in September. As bail is not permitted in cases where murder is charged, Bogue was taken to the county jail, in New London, where he will await trial.

The taking of testimony occupied the attention of the court but a short time. State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh, one of the arresting officers, testified to statements made by Bogue immediately following arrest and to the signed confession Bogue had made in which he admitted the slaying of Mrs. Roberts, a former resident of New London, and her alleged paramour. The confession, which was in detail and told of the incidents leading up to the double-killing and the actual murder of Mrs. Roberts and Ostberg, together with the subsequent attempt at suicide of Bogue and his endeavor to dispose of the bodies, was admitted as testimony and with this done, probable cause was found.

Bogue, who for several years, had been on intimate terms with Mrs. Roberts, was insanely jealous of Ostberg, who had taken his place in the affections of the woman. He visibly displayed indications of this jealousy from time to time and on the afternoon of Aug. 9, when Mrs. Roberts and Ostberg returned to Mrs. Roberts home, Bogue, who was in the kitchen, severely rebuked the man and woman because of their conduct. The couple had been drinking and their condition evidently aggravated Bogue to a high pitch. While the two men and woman were seated at a table, Ostberg revealed that he and Mrs. Roberts planned to go away together. Bogue went to a corner of the kitchen where he seized an axe and attacking the man and woman, crushed their skulls with the weapon.

After killing the couple, Bogue dragged their bodies to the cellar where he attempted to bury them, but because of the rocky condition there, he was unsuccessful. Leaving the bodies, Bogue procured a safety razor blade and went to a nearby field where he attempted suicide by slashing both wrists. Unsuccessful again, Bogue walked about eight miles to the Crandall farm where he sought food and lodging. He was given food, but was told that he could not sleep there. During his stay there and about 11 o'clock, Bogue informed occupants of the house of his having murdered Mrs. Roberts and Ostberg. A telephone message was sent to the state police barracks and Bogue was taken into custody.

Chapters organized in this section besides Norwich, are New London, Groton, Mystic, Stonington, Pawcatuck, Danielson and Willimantic.

The purpose of this organization is to coordinate the aircraft model clubs of the nation in a practical manner for the benefit of all, and the advancement of aviation. The principles and aims of this organization far overshadow any personal ambitions of its sponsors, based on a sincere desire to provide the youth of America the wherewith to learn about and take part in the most important and epoch making event of all history, aviation. The best manner in which the youth of America can be of benefit to their country and the new era of aviation is in the building of aircraft models in order to develop constructive minds and ideas.

TOWN OF GROTON MOVES TO COMBAT MOSQUITO PLAGUE

A movement is under way in the town of Groton to follow the lead of towns to the east and west of it, that are successfully combatting the mosquito plague, and greatly lessening or abolishing this growing nuisance.

A state blueprint shows that Groton has 304 acres of salt marsh lying between the Mystic river and Bakers cove, needing ditching and draining. These marshes the farmers formerly drained for cutting salt hay but now, being neglected because of less farm animals, they are breeding grounds for hordes of mosquitoes, bloodthirsty and insatiable, a menace alike to health and comfort.

The state will drain these marshes for $12 per acre, and thereafter maintain the work at its own expense. This means that if Groton can raise a little less than $4,000 by popular subscription it will virtually control the mosquito situation in the town.

Stonington with 600 acres to drain has raised about $6,000 of the $7,000 needed by local subscription ranging from 15 cents to 500. Groton will be asked to respond as willingly. Each of the communities of the town has thus far shown a willingness to cooperate and do its bit. An initial committee consisting of a group each from Groton, Eastern Point, Poquonnock Bridge, Groton Long Point, Noank and Mystic has been formed to begin this work.

Works Offers Parting Advice

A parting word of advice to the state with reference to its policy for Connecticut Agricultural college is given by Dr. George Alan Works, former president of the institution, in the August number of the Connecticut Agricultural College Review. Dr. Works, who has gone to take charge of the department of higher education at the University of Chicago, warns that the primary purpose of the institution should not be training in agriculture and domestic science because Connecticut is not primarily an agricultural state and there is not now sufficient opportunity for the young people of Connecticut to obtain general education without going outside of the state.

TOWNS PAST 5,000 TO HAVE TWO REPRESENTATIVES

An opinion, but not as yet reduced to writing, has been given by the first assistant attorney general, Raymond A. Johnson to the deputy secretary of state, E. H. Lounsbury that the five towns which have passed the 5,000 mark in the recent census and which have had only one member of the house may elect two members this fall.

A copy of a letter which Mr. Johnson will write will go forward to town chairmen in five towns affected by the decision and which benefit under the increase in population.

When the 1931 legislature opens and the five extra representatives-elect seek their seats, they will be admitted by reason of certification of the census in their respective towns.

The opinion of Mr. Johnson, however, which holds as good law until upset, paves the way for election of the five and gives them a valid reason for application for seats. Twenty years ago when extra representatives were elected on the basis of the 1910 census there was much uncertainty in the house as to admission of the applicants because their status had not been passed upon previously and it was thought by some that towns had gone ahead and elected an extra member without legal warrant. In the end the additional members took their seats and the flurry was over.

The 1931 house will number 237 members as against 262 for the past decade.

WILL ABIDE BY PLATFORM OF REPUBLICAN PARTY

If state political gossip is a criterion, the prohibition enforcement policies of candidates for state offices will have an important bearing on the selection of nomines says the New London Day.

Because he is rated an ardent dry, Lieutenant Governor Rogers, candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, faces some opposition in some sections of the state, the suggestion having been advanced that Governor Trumbull be nominated for reelection.

The lieutenant governor has publicly announced his willingness to stand on any platform adopted by his party, but those most eager for repeal of the state enforcement act and who are working to make it a real issue in the campaign are said to prefer some person at the head of the ticket, who, at heart at least, is not opposed to the movement.

The 18th amendment was proposed in 1917 and was proclaimed as a part of the federal constitution in 1919, the necessary number of states having ratified. Connecticut and Rhode Island refused to ratify, this state having taken its unfavorable action in January, 1919. Two years later Connecticut drys sought to have the legislature erase the unfavorable action, believing that there was a moral advantage on the side of enforcement in having Connecticut get in line with other states. They also objected to having Connecticut listed as one of the two states which voted against the amendment. So they had a resolution for ratification introduced.

Governor Trumbull, then senator from the fifth district, took the lead against the proposal in the upper house of the legislature. Action on the resolution was indefinitely postponed by a vote of 19 to ten. Partly on this record and partly on his known general opposition to the amendment the proposal is advanced by the wets to nominate him for reelection.

EATON TELLS WHY HE OPPOSED BETHLEHEM DEAL

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 21.—(P)—Cyrus S. Eaton, the Cleveland financer who carried to common pleas court his fight against the merger of Youngstown Sheet and Tube company with Bethlehem Steel corporation today told from the witness stand why he opposed the Bethlehem deal and how he had worked for more than a year to merge Inland Steel of Chicago with Youngstown.

He said he was told of the deal with Bethlehem at a meeting in Cleveland on March 7, less than two months after he had held a conference with L. E. and Paul Block of Inland Steel, and had received assurance that a merger with that company might be effected.

Eaton testified that he had been working on the Inland negotiations largely at the suggestion of J. A. Campbell, chairman of Youngstown Sheet & Tube and was "astonished" to learn that in the meantime an audit had been made and merger terms drawn up with Bethlehem.

A great part of the witness' testimony was taken up with a description of the so-called "fire escape" meeting with officials of Youngstown Bethlehem and Pickands Mather and Co., at Cleveland on March 11. The appellation "fire escape meeting" was derived from the means employed by the officials to elude newspapermen.

Eaton said he told Henry G. Dalton, a director of Youngstown and Bethlehem as well as a partner in Pickands Mather and Co., Cleveland ore firm, that he did not want to see Sheet and Tube "sold out of the state" and that he thought the terms of the merger, one share of Youngstown for 1 1-3 of Bethlehem undesirable.

He said he told Dalton that he did not want to see Youngstown "reduced to the status of a mining town," that he did not believe Bethlehem was the kind of stock for Sheet and Tube to acquire, that Inland offered Youngstown the diversity it wanted and that its costs were much lower in every department than Bethlehem's.

Eaton testified that his personal holdings in Sheet and Tube stock and that of his family and his enterprises aggregated about 228,000 shares. Of this sum he and his family own about 100,000 shares, the Cliffs Iron corporation and others about 125,000 and the International Shares corporation about 3,000. The latter is co-plaintiff in the suit to enjoin the merger.

He identified an exhibit showing that Otis and company, Cleveland's brokers, in which he is a partner, purchased 75,333 shares of Sheet and Tube between March 12 and April 8 at an average of $148.16 a share, or an aggregate of more than $11,000,000. This was to be voted against the merger when it came before the stockholders for ratification April 8.

Although no testimony was introduced on this angle today, a battle is impending over the legality of the action of the Youngstown management in voting proxies on numerous shares of this stock.

CROSS AND RESTLESS?
MAYBE IT'S WORMS

If your little one is irritable and restless—there's a reason. Often it's worms. They are much more common than most mothers think.

Look also for the following symptoms: picking the nose, grinding the teeth, crying in sleep, offensive breath, loss of appetite or weight, nausea or general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present.

Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. Even if worms are only suspected they give the child

New Headache Treatment Now Established by Tests

Best there is, say thousands

If you are suffering from headache you will find that in nine cases out of ten quick relief comes from thorough cleansing of the system with Feen-a-mint, the modern chewing gum laxative. Men and women all over are turning to Feen-a-mint because it works by an entirely new method—that of internal distribution.

Because you chew Feen-a-mint it is effective in milder doses than ordinary laxatives. For the effectiveness of a laxative is not so much dependent upon the quantity swallowed as upon the thoroughness of its distribution throughout the ailmentary tract.

While you chew this delicious bit of gum the tasteless laxative it contains is gradually released and mixed with the saliva. Thus it is carried to the intestinal tract smoothly, evenly, without shock to the system or the distressing after-effects so common with old-fashioned laxatives. Each particle of the laxative in Feen-a-mint works with utmost efficiency, gently encouraging the intestinal muscles to resume the activity so necessary for healthful elimination.

The action of Feen-a-mint is thorough, gentle, dependable. With the proper dosage it is not necessary to increase the amount of Feen-a-mint you take nor to switch to another laxative for a change. Feen-a-mint is harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. Truly the health laxative. Ask for a package at any drug store—Adv.

CUBS PLAY RAGGED GAME TO LOSE FIRST GAME OF CRUCIAL SERIES

CHICAGO, Aug. 21—(AP)—John McGraw's Giants from New York presented a bear-training act in Wrigley Field this afternoon, and when it was over, had a 13 to 6 victory over the Cubs in the first game of their vital series and were only two games behind Chicago in the National league pennant battle.

The Giants gave an able demonstration of why they have won 22 out of their last 26 games, in humbling the 1929 champions of the senior league. They belted Sheriff Fred Blake and Bud Teachout for 15 hits, took advantage of every Cub shortcoming, and presented a defense that left no opportunities for easy scoring.

The Cubs dug the pit from which they were unable to hoist themselves, before a man was out in the first inning. Clarence Blair muffed Hughie Critz's grounder, and Eddie Farrell followed by booting Leach's roller. Blake walked Lindstrom, Critz scored and Terry was safe at first as Farrell threw out Leach at second. Ott walked and after O'Farrell had flied out, Jackson singled, scoring Lindstrom. Wallie Roettger then produced the blow that wrecked the Cubs—a homer into the right field bleachers, which gave the Giants a six-run working margin.

The Cubs picked up one in each of the next two innings on homers by Blair and Gabby Hartnett, and added two more in the fifth. The Giants, however, stayed right in there, scoring twice in their half of the fifth. The Cubs still were in the game until New York staged another uprising in the eighth. Five singles, an error and a sacrifice sent Blake to the showers, and before Teachout could stop the affair, the Giants had five more runs.

The Cub fielding, almost flawless against Brooklyn last week, was little short of comical at times today. Three times Wilson, Blair and Farrell failed to get together on pop flies back of the infield, and three times they let them drop for hits that figured in scoring. On top of that, three infield errors aided the hustling New Yorkers in their quest for runs.

The Giants, fielded brilliantly. Travis Jackson deprived Farrell of a hit in the second by a one-handed catch of the latter's line drive, and in the fourth, Roettger raced over in front of the left field bleachers to grab another liner by Farrell.

Jackson and Critz were the big shots in the Giants' assault, each getting three useful singles. Clarence Blair, with a homer and a single, topped the Cubs.

Bill Walker, young New York southpaw, held the Cub sluggers fairly well in hand until he wavered in the eighth and was replaced by Hub Pruett, another left hander who stopped a Cub rally in handy fashion. Walker fanned six batsmen, and walked two, while Blake fanned four and kept himself in misery by walking a like number.

Pete Donohue probably will pitch for New York tomorrow, and Pat Malone is expected to hurl for the Cubs.

MISS NUTHALL DISPOSES OF MISS WEISEL, 6-1, 6-1

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 21—(AP)—Other players here may falter and drop a set now and then but "Bouncing Betty" Nuthall marches steadily forward through the ranks of America's foremost stars in the direction of the national women's championship.

Nineteen-year-old Betty won today, 6-1, 6-1, from slender little Dorothy Weisel of Sacramento, Calif., but the three other survivors of the original field of 57 contenders all were extended to the limit in three-set battles.

This sturdy English girl, who carries her racquet up-raised between strokes and swings it like a bludgeon, beat down the defenses of the California youngster through sheer power, ran her from corner to corner with deep drives until she was near exhauston and varied her tactics now and again with soft trap shots that just wafted over the net for clean placements.

In the face of that disconcerting attack little Miss Weisel found the shots with which she conquered Sarah Palfrey yesterday were almost pitifully inadequate.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 21—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals pounded three Philly pitchers for nineteen hits today and won the first game of the series, 16 to 6. Grimes allowed the visitors eleven hits but kept them scattered except in the seventh and ninth in each of which Philadelphia scored three runs.

Hafey hit his twenty-third homer of theseason in the first inning with two on. The Cardinals executed five double plays, which comes within one of equaling the National league record. The score:

HAMPTON TAKES LEAD AS HAGEN FALTERS

INDIAN WOOD GOLF CLUB, Iron, Mich., Aug. 21—(AP)—Harry Hampton, the rotund Scot from Chicago, adopted the role of the inevitable dark horse today to trot away with first honors in the opening 18 hole skirmish for the western open golf championship.

The bespectacled professional, seldom a winner in any championship struggle but always almost certain of posting one hot round of golf, gained his lead today by galloping around the Indian Wood club course with a dazzling 69, three strokes under par and one shot ahead of Clarence Gamber, Detroit professional who shattered perfect figures with a 70 and finished second.

A spectacular, record equalling 31, four strokes under perfect figures on the first nine holes was the powder that blew Hampton into the lead and held him there today. Perfect approach shots that sailed his ball to within easy distance of the cup and steady employment of his putter brought him four birdies on the 3021 yard stretch while he played the remaining holes in par. On his way back, he posted a 38, only one stroke over par.

Although a heavy cross wind and a brief downpour of rain stopped the heavy assault started against par in yesterday's qualifying round, most of the favorites with two notable exceptions came in with low enough totals to stay in the running. The exceptions were Tommy Armour, the defending champion from Detroit, and Walter Hagen, who topped the qualifying round with a record-breaking 67 yesterday. A bad 40 on the first nine stopped Armour and he finally came in with a 78, nine strokes behind Hampton's score while Hagen took a par 35 out and then slumped to take a 42 on his backward nine for a 77.

Only two others shattered par today—Bob Shave, Marion, Ohio, professional and the veteran Al Watrous of Detroit, who shot 71's.

One stroke behind them with perfect 72's were "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, of New York, Densmore Shute, Columbus, Ohio, and Emerick Kocsis, Detroit professional. Seven shot 72's and among them were sucth favorites as Gene Sarazen of New York and Emmett French of Southern Pines, Horton Smith and Johnny Farrell of New York, two more favored threats, staggered in with a pair of 74's to cling to the ranks of the leaders. They played most of their rounds during the rain.

The second 18 hole round will be played tomorrow, after which the low 64 and ties will battle for the title over 36 holes Saturday.

AMATEURS HOLD FORTH AT DANIELSON TUESDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Aug. 21—Another card of amateur boxing bouts is arranged for the North Street arena here for next Tuesday evening. In the opening bout Normand Lasch of Danielson will battle Kid Jackson of Goodyear. This affair will mark Jackson's debut as a fighter.

Kid Brouillard of Danielson will face Paul Jones of Worcester. Jones was to have fought Brouillard here at the last show, but due to a lip injury, was unable to appear. He will be on hand Tuesday night.

Anselm Bernier, Danielson, who won his last fight on a knockout, against Tanzar of Jewett City, will be pitted against Young Plasse of Webster, who has yet to lose a fight here.

Kid Tourney, with three wins out of three starts here, will have Patsy Long, a classy flyweight of Worcester as his opponent.

Charles Goulet, winner of a fast and close bout over Kid Frisco of Webster in their match here last Tuesday night, will give the Webster boy a return match.

Willie Thibeault, Danielson, who had to cancel a bout here this week on account of a funeral he attended at New Haven, will box Kid Forcier of Webster.

The big shot of the night will be the go in which the hard hitting Russell Martin of Webster will take on Patsy Flynn of Worcester. Flynn is another slugger, so the combination looks as if it would furnish real fireworks.

Owen Carroll Released

NEW YORK, Aug. 21—(AP)—The New York Yankees today announced the release of Pitcher Owen Carroll on option to the Toledo club of the American association. Carroll came to the Yankees early in the season in a trade with the Detroit Tigers.

CRAMP IN LEG CAUSES WOOD TO LOSE MATCH

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 21—(AP)—A painful leg cramp today ended the impressive winning streak of Sydney Wood, 18-year-old New Yorker, who has been burning up the eastern tennis courts this season. Young Sydney had George Lott, Davis cup singles player, at two sets all in their Newport Casino quarter-finals match and was stroking accurately and expertly when a sharp sensation in his left leg, which he described as a "growing pain" forced him to slow down.

Lott, as fair a sportsman as ever swung a racquet, almost bent backwards to avoid taking advantage of Wood's untimely distress and, though he slowed down to match the New Yorker's pace, he managed to enter the semi-finals by clinching the deciding set for a 6-4, 6-3, 4-6, 4-6, 6-4 victory.

Young Sydney, winner of the important Seabright and Southampton tournaments and finalist with Clifford Sutter, when that inter-collegiate titleholder won the Longwood bowl, paid high tribute to Lott's sense of fair play.

"George is the best sportsman in America according to my way of thinking," Wood said when he left the court. "He could have crushed me off the court quickly in that fifth set if he wished but he took it easy to give me a chance to win."

Big Bill Tilden, top-seeded national and defending champion, was called upon to face Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J. In today's quarter-finals, the old master's injured hip was greatly improved and, as he is always at his best against the former Georgetown player, the lanky Philadelphian scored a straight set victory, 6-2, 6-3, 7-5.

Most of Tilden's play was superb. He did not waste a trick, took advantage of every opportunity and proved to the critical gallery, which had declared him guilty of much sloppy tennis during the early rounds, that he must be reckoned with in the coming national championship. Mangin played an exceptional game but none of his strokes was on a par with any in Tilden's extensive assortment.

Lott, seeded second in the historic casino play, led three other highly ranked stars into the second last round, where he will clash with his international teammate, Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., who shared the Davis cup doubles play against the French with Johnny Van Ryn of East Orange, N. J.

Allison advanced through an extra set victory over Frank Shields, New York youngster, who turned in the outstanding feat that this tournament has seen by winning three hard matches two afternoons ago. The scores were 6-8, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

Shields started impressively but his service faltered badly in the second set and he was unable to regain control of it during the remainder of the match.

DOW AHERN QUALIFIES FOR NEW HAVEN TOURNEY

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 21—(AP)—Tommy Aycock, Jr., diminutive Yale golfing star, today led a field of 142 starters in the qualifying round of the New Haven Country club's annual invitation. Aycock clicked off a 72, one over par, for the 18 holes leading Charlie Clare, New Haven golf champion and present holder of the country club's championship, by a single stroke. Another stroke back, at 74, was R. Cuici, of Mill River, while S. A. Brady, New Haven, and Andrew Pierson, Middletown, tied for fourth place with 76's.

The last to squeeze into the championship flight of 16, was J. F. Lewes, tied with W. Hoyt, C. C. Elwell, Alex Pardee and George Cahart, at 79. Lewes won his way into the select circle by defeating the others in a play-off.

Scores for the 16 qualifiers:

Thomas J. Aycock, Jr., New Haven 72; C. C. Clare, New Haven, 73; R. Cuici, Mill River, 74; C. A. Brady, New Haven, 76; Andrew Pierson, Middletown, 76; H. O. Hunter, 77; A. F. HOLLYROOD CHIEF WINS CHARTER OAK STAKES

HARTFORD, Aug. 21—(AP)—The historic Charter Oak stake, a 2:11 class trot for a purse of $5,000, was won today by Hollyrood Chief, the Hollyrood farm bay gelding, which captured the Grand Circuit feature event in three straight heats. Hollyrood Chief was ably handled by Will Leese, who got him off early in each trial and kept him in front of the field to the wire. Hoolyrod Harrod, reined by Dodge, was his most formidable challenger in every heat, taking three second places. Blushing Beauty, with Walter Breitenfield holding the reins, took first money in the handicap pace, while Guy Britton, driven by Ray, got the biggest slice of the purse in the 2:20 class pace which went four heats before the winner could be decided.

The judges announced that Will Flemming, veteran driver who was taken from the sulky after his questionable handling of Myra Guy in the third heat of the special trot Wednesday, had been suspended for ten days for "inilfferent driving." Harry Stokes, who replaced him and brought Myra Guy to the wire an easy winner in the fourth heat, was paid $50 with the amount being deducted from the purse won by Myra Guy, whose victory was allowed to stand.

WEISGRABER BLANKS IDEALS WITHOUT A HIT; NOVELTY FEATURE INTRODUCED

Two brands of entertainment were placed on exhibition at the campus last night. There was a spell of pretty good baseball for those who go to the campus to enjoy exhibitions of the national pastime and comedy for the less serious minded Tony Bernard, the "bad boy" of the City league, broke up a perfectly good ball game with a little act all of his own after his Ideals and Smoke Shop had played four innings. He made a hit with some and spoiled a perfectly good game for others.

The game itself will go down in the league records as a 3 to 0 four-inning victory for the Smokers, and a no-hit, no-run affair for Butsy Weisgraber, the West Side hurler. Everything that happened after the fourth has been tossed into the discard.

Here's the low down on the whole affair. Bernard, the man of many ideas, pulled a fast one Wednesday night by stating that he would use a pitcher in the game who was not sanctioned by the league governors. The statement stirred up a bit of talk and some wondered if he actually would defy the league leaders. Thursday Tony got together with everyone concerned and arrangements were made to play four innings of honest-to-goodness ball and then clown it. The scorer was so advised and he was ordered not to record anything that happened after the fourth.

As previously announced, at the end of the fourth the Smokers were in the lead 3 to 0. For some reason or other Tony's scheme was slow in starting. The clowning business did not start as scheduled and in their half of the fifth the Ideals scored a run. It was just too bad though, as the scorer had closed his book as ordered and paid no attention to the tally. Well, anyway, the Ideals were finally retired and they took their places in the field.

At this point a machine sped onto the field and out staggered a likeness of what a "hick" is supposed to be. Our friend Tony, clad in overalls, a large straw hat, duster and red bandana and carrying a carpet bag hustled in from the outfield and arrived at second base when he tripped and fell. When he landed his carpet bag flew open and a chicken took wings. Gaining his feet once again Tony then hurried to the pitcher's box and demanded of Bob Shaw, his regular pitcher, to turn over his glove and ball. Bob was hesitant, but after a while finally agreed. In the meanwhile Hank Morin hobbled out to the box and ordered the intruder from the field.

The "hick" refused and as a result it was necessary for Hank to enlist the aid of a policeman. Luke Riley attempted to move the intruder but found himself staring into the barrel of a cap pistol.

After considerable arguing Tony was allowed to start pitching and Hank announced him as "Lefty Grobe." By this time the fans realized what it was all about and the majority of them got a big kick out of the entire affair.

"Lefty Grobe" did fairly well and had little trouble retiring the side. One of the batters he pitched to was the two-year-old son of Art Couillard, first baseman for the Smoke Shop. The Couillard youngster really stole the show as he was led to the plate dressed in all of the regalia of a real ball player.

After doing his bit on the rubber "Lefty Grobe" then took his turn at the bat and for the remainder of the inning both sides clowned it.

Another of Bernard's stunts that drew a laugh was pulled early in the evening. His mascot brought a water pail onto the field marked "Ideal." Tony then put a sign up alongside of the pail that read as follows: "This pail has been bought and paid for and is the property of the Ideals, everyone is welcome to a drink."

Getting back to the ball game itself Butsy Weisgraber was in rare form and during the four innings that counted the opposition could not do a thing with him. On the other hand, the Smokers touched Bob Shaw for 7 hits and three runs, one in the second and two in the fourth. LaCroix and Provencher were the leading hitters with two singles apiece. The score:

Cits Clash With Italians Tonight

The fans can expect some honest-to-goodness baseball at the campus tonight when the Polish Citizens and Italians get together. These two nines will not engage in any such clowning as took place last night, there being too much at stake to take any chances. The Cits, as everyone knows, are leading the City league chase by a single game and have but three more games to go. After tonight's affair they must meet the Ideals and Thermos.

Should the Italians accomplish what all others have attempted and failed during the past month the Cits will drop back to a tie with the Bottlers. On the other hand, if the Polish boys win they will go into the final week of play confident of coming through.

Since taking on additional strength the Italians have been playing a fairly good brand of ball and are apt to step into the Citizens' long winning streak. One thing is certain, win or lose they are determined to give the leaders the hardest game of the season.

Neither manager would announce the name of his starting pitcher last night but it is probable that Boots Greene will get the assignment for the Cits and Lefty Lucier will be DeFronzo's choice. The Italian pilot, however, may decide at the last minute to use Rabbit Gauthier. The Rabbit has an assortment of slow ball curves that may prove troublesome for the hard hitting Cits.

SIMMONS' HOMER IN 9TH WINS FOR ATHLETICS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21—(AP)—Al Simmons' thirtieth home run of the season with two out and one on base in the ninth inning today climaxed the Athletics' rally from behind a three-run lead of the Detroit Tigers, giving the champions an uphill triumph of 8 to 7.

George Uhle, who allowed but one hit in the first six innings, lost his effectiveness in the closing innings. He gave up four runs in the seventh and eighth and was relieved after the Athletics filled the bases with none out in the ninth.

Wyatt retired two men on force plays at second and then was spanked for Simmons' winning run that scored Cochrane ahead of him. The score:

PORTER'S HOMER IN 12TH WINS GAME FOR INDIANS

NEW YORK, Aug. 21—(AP)—Dick Portier clouted a home run inside the park to open the twelfth inning today and gave the Cleveland Indians a 6 to 5 victory over the Yankees in an exciting opening game of their series.

Tony Lazzeri's error in the ninth sent the contest into extra innings after Sam Byrd had given the Yanks the lead in the seventh with a homer with two men on base. With two out in the ninth, Lazzeri dropped Montague's fly as Lary collided with him and allowed two Cleveland runners to score. Babe Ruth's single sent Combs home in the last half of the ninth to tie the count again.

Ed Wells and Milburn Shoffner staged a great battle for seven innings, but neither finished. Henry Johnson finished for the Yanks while Harder and Bean worked a few moments for Cleveland before Walter Miller finally came in to hold the Yanks in check through the extra innings. The score:

Stamford Yacht Grounds

The yacht Wau-Wa, 2nd, of Stamford, Conn., ran aground off Osbrook point, Stonington, late this afternoon. Her distress signals were sent at the Watch Hill coast guard station and a picket boat, with Capt. George Streeter in command, was put out to her assistance.

The coast guardsmen put a line aboard and after an hour's work, pulled the yacht off the sandbar. She continued on her way to Newport apparently undamaged.

MOTHERS KNOW ITS WORTH

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the written recommendation of more than 500,000 American women. 98 out of every 100 who report after taking it say, "It helped me." Get a bottle from your druggist today. Be one of the 98.

Mrs. Clyde I. Sherman,
R. No. 1, Lickdale, Pa.

"Before I married, my mother and sister and I did all the work on a 64 acre farm for eleven years. Now in addition to my housework and the care of my children I help my husband with the outside work on our farm. After my last child was born, I began to suffer as many women do. One day our doctor told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did and now I am a new woman."

Mrs. Ethel Wright,
Cheyenne Wells, Colorado

"I am a busy woman for I have six children to care for. I was rundown and felt so weak I could hardly do my work. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I began to take it. I am feeling stronger in every way, have a good appetite and sleep well. I recommend this medicine to other weak women."

Mrs. Horten Jones,
208-48th St.,
Union City, New Jersey

"About ten years ago I got so weak and rundown that I felt miserable all over. One day my husband said, 'Why don't you take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' When I had taken two bottles I felt better so I kept on. My little daughter was born when I had been married twelve years. I praise your medicine to all my friends, and you may publish this letter for I want all the world to know how much the Vegetable Compound has helped me."

Further information regarding this grade together with the tolerance allowed and definitions of terms may be obtained by communicating with the department of agriculture.

A meeting of Connecticut potato growers interested in packing in accordance with the above grade will be held at the state department of agriculture on Friday, Aug. 22, at 1:00 p. m., standard time (2:00 p. m. daylight saving time.) All potato growers will be welcome.

Coming Tomorrow
RALPH HEPBURN
Famous Racing Pilot

To Show You the Thrill and Thrift of free wheeling

COME to our showroom tomorrow and meet Ralph Hepburn, nationally known racing driver, who is here to demonstrate the miracle of modern motoring—free wheeling.

Free wheeling, as embodied in the new series President and Commander Eights is hailed even by sophisticated engineers as one of the outstanding automotive engineering accomplishments in a generation. This new and revolutionary engineering principle enables you to shift from high to second at will at 40 to 50 miles per hour without even touching the clutch.

It offers you a car which floats silently as a phantom even though fully in gear and under full control. It saves 12 percent in gasoline, 20 percent in oil, prolongs life of tires and relieves the entire driving mechanism of the intense reversional strains which so shorten the life of the ordinary car.

Now, Ralph Hepburn is here to demonstrate free wheeling. Come Saturday, Aug. 23rd. You'll enjoy meeting Mr. Hepburn and his free wheeling President Eight Roadster. And, we can promise you the thrill of your life.

THE FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

THE MAJORITY AND THE MINORITY

(Written Specially For The Bulletin)

When the first census was taken, in 1790, the biggest city in the United States, New York, had 33,000 people. There were only six in the whole country which had a population as great as 8,000 each.

The census of 1930 gives New York approximately 7,000,000 inhabitants, and over 1,000 towns report populations of 8,000 or more. There are 93 cities with populations ranging above 100,000. In 1910 there were 50 such cities with less than 22,000,000 inhabitants. Now the 93 have more than 36,000,000.

For purposes of comparison, census figures class communities of 2,500 and over as urban; less than that as rural. In 1790 only 4 per cent of the population of the young republic was counted as urban. That is, out of every hundred people four lived in town and 96 lived in the country. Now, out of every 100 inhabitants of the land, about 55 live in cities and about forty-five in the country.

This, if you will stop to consider it thoughtfully, is more than mere change. It is overturn, supersedure, revolution. Because it has come to pass slowly and almost insensibly few of us have even noticed it. Fewer still have comprehended its significance.

We have been like chips floating down a meadow-brook. So long as the current has borne us placidly along, we haven't given much heed to the tributary streams which were constantly emptying into it; we have ignored the gradual widening of the banks; we haven't even considered the situation when our little brook at last became a wide river, burdened with tugs and barges and scows, and befouled with nameless garbage.

But now, when we at last open our eyes and gaze about us, we discover that the muddied, sewage-tainted river is a very different affair from the clear brooklet which purled from its cold spring back in the hills. As chips, we negotiated that rivulet well enough. But what do a few chips amount to in the harbor of New York? Conditions there call for quite different craft.

Let's drop the chips and use another figure to illustrate the idea. In 1790 the United States was like a lusty youngster, not yet even in its 'teens, capering about in its first pair of pantaloons. Those garments, like its others, were cut and made to fit reasonably near its shape and size.

But, ever since that time, the boy has been growing. His legs have grown longer, his torso has grown bigger, his arms have grown longer-reaching.

The clothes which were designed to fit the lad are hardly such as a sensible tailor would provide for a grown man. They pinch him here and they hamper him there. They're too short for his legs and too narrow for his chest and too tight for his arms—and he's still growing out of them.

Dropping all metaphors and figures of speech, isn't it self-evident to any one that a nation, 96 out of every 100 of whose people lived on the land and off the land, is a very different thing from one where only 45 in the 100 live that way?

Then, the overwhelming majority were farmers and fishermen. They were producers of raw materials. Now, a clear majority have turned from agricultural production to manufacturing and trading. Then, ninety-six in every hundred lived in the country; now, fifty-five in every hundred herd in the city.

Then, the rural majority controlled; now an urban majority takes the reins and the whip.

We people who live out on the hills and along the backroads may just as well get down off the driver's seat, now as to wait till we're thrown off it, willy-nilly.

Under our chosen method of government, the majority rules. That majority is now composed of city-dwellers. By our own standards it has the right and the duty to take charge.

It really isn't a question whether the majority is wiser or more virtuous or more patriotic. It is simply a question of who has the most votes.

It isn't a question of what is the best government, even. It is just a question of what sort of government the majority wants.

Somehow, the prospect of our whole nation getting into the control of the creatures who make up Tammany-robbed New York, machine-ruled Philadelphia, ring-ridden Chicago is not alluring. Yet what else are we, as reasonably foresighted people, to expect? Over and over again, in the face of exposures of shameful corruption and malfeasance the voters of those cities deliberately and unconstrainedly return their cities to the control of the grafters, corruptionists and robbers.

The only tenable theory that can be formed to explain their action is that a government of graft, corruption and robbery is the sort of government they want.

Hitherto, we, whom all fortune does not compel to live in those civic cesspools, have simply shrugged our shoulders and said, "Let 'em have what they want; what is it to us?"

But now, as the census makes clear, they can not only rule themselves, but us, too.

That puts a different face on the matter. They can now, if they choose and any time they choose, impose the reign of graft, corruption and robbery which they prefer upon us of the minority who condemn and despise it.

And how are we going to help ourselves?

You'll observe that this is rather a big and thorny question.

This particular John Farmer lays the finger of discretion along the lips of silence and shakes his bald head in humble acknowledgement that he hasn't the faintest idea. Nor does he regard it likely that any of the farmer-folk who may read thus far will have a satisfactory answer.

Perhaps, until some superman developes to find the real remedy, the only thing we can do is to take our bitter medicine and look as pleasant as we can.

My old neighbor, Uncle Ike, whom I have occasionally quoted, ere this, once remarked, apropros of nothing in particular, that he found the strongest proof of the existence of an over-ruling Providence in the fact that this country hadn't gone to the dogs long ago. It was clear to him that something outside of and above the majority had contrived, thus far, to frustrate that [illegible] folly and preserve it in spite of itself.

That, however, [illegible] quite out of our hands. The old revolutionary advice to "trust in God and keep your powder dry," must be cut in half now that our powder is all in somebody else's pouch. In truth, we are more inclined to hope that Providence will damp that powder before it blows up around our ears.

We all of us like big mouth-filling figures. We like to talk about millions and billions. But the momentary swelling of price which comes upon the census announcement that our total population is more than 122,000,000, promptly shrinks and subsides when the same census discloses that the increase has been almost wholly in the cities. We of the country and the open spaces are now a minority.

Hitherto, it has been permissible to hold that, however rotten the politics of the cities might be, the somewhat slow but solid and conservative good sense of "up country" would, sooner or later, restrain and over-rule the forces of the slums. That ground is no longer tenable.

Neither in politics nor in dogdom does the tail wag the dog.

We countrymen may as well accept the fact of our subordinacy and try to make the best of it. The dribbling streams of our votes can no longer be expected to withstand the flood of city ballots.

We may be permitted to hope that the new masters of the nation will use their power leniently. That they will use it wisely their previous history does not promise. But their hearts may be better than their heads. If not, Lord help us, for vain is the aid of man!

Some of us who are accustomed to look below the surface and peer around the corner may begin to question whether the forms and methods of government, eminently fit to a young nation of country-dwelling farmers, with few cities and no slums, is adaptable to a populous manufacturing and trading empire, city controlled.

But even that question is no longer practical. It is what the high-brows call "academic," i. e. purely theoretical and visionary.

"The good old plan,
That they should keep, who have, the power," is still effectively operative. There is no likelihood that the "ins" will ever self-sacrificingly turn themselves into "outs" for the benefit of their country. As President Jefferson said of the office-holders of his day, "Few die and none resign."

Roman legends tell how Marcus Curtius in full armor leaped into a gaping earthquake rent in order, as he thought, to save the city from the wrath of the Gods. But Curtiuses have been mighty few and far between in the world's history. It is doubtful if very many could be found even in these latter days. They certainly do not compose a majority.

And, under our system, it is only majorities which count. The majority does what it pleases; the minority does what it is allowed to.

The present majority is in the cities. We of the country are the minority.

Go easy with us, please!

THE FARMER.

BULLS AND BEARS BATTLED YESTERDAY IN A WHOLLY PROFESSIONAL MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 21—(AP)—Stock market operators who have once more endeavored to start bull movement in the past week, were forced to dig in today to permit a flurry of selling to blow over.

Speculators for the advance held their ground only in a few spots, while the list generally sagged 1 to 3 points. Net losses of more than a point were not numerous, however, and the price index of 90 leading shares showed a net loss of only 1 7-10 points, about two-thirds of the gain of the past two sessions.

Trading continued of a wholly professional character, retaining its aspect of being merely a pastime for floor traders unoccupied by commission business. Total sales of only 1,712,810 shares was about 100,000 shares under yesterday's turnover.

Conspicuous among the day's earnings statements, was that of Vanadium corporation recent bull favorite. Net of $3.30 a share was reported for the first half, but it was explained that about a substantial portion was from security transactions, so that operating profit was actually well below the $3.13 reported for the like period of last year.

U. S. Steel sold off 2 points, but closed down only 1-2. American Telephone lost 3 points, then regained 2. The motion picture stocks were well supported, on reports of improvement in theatre attendance. Radio-Keith, the day's most active feature, reflected large scale bullish activity, and closed a point higher. Loew's gained 2 points. Radio corporation, United Aircraft, General Motors, Case, and Columbian Carbon, were among other active issues to close steady to firm. Worthington Pump gained about 4, and International Harvester and Purity Bakeries were up 1 at the close.

The safety razor stocks were again a weak feature. Gillette dropped 10, and closed near the bottom. Auto Strop sold off 7, and rallied only moderately. In the rails, Atchison lost 6, and Southern Railway sold off about 5, touching 75 for the first time in six years. Rails displayed group weakness, under selling based on yesterday's disappointing car loadings announcement for the first week of the month, and unfavorable July earnings reports. New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio and Illinois Central lost about 2.

Warner Brothers, sagged more than a point to the year's low, then regained its loss. Shares closing off about 2 included Air Reduction, American Power and Light, Goodyear, Pacific Lighting, Stone and Webster, Safeway Stores, Auburn and Byers. Allied Chemical lost 4 and Eastman, 5.

Money was plentiful, call loans renewing at 2 per cent, and outside funds being offered at 1 1-2. The weekly brokerage loan statement, issued after the close, showed a reduction of $27,000,000, carrying the total to another new low for the past three years. Firmness of leading foreign exchanges suggested possible renewal of the outflow of gold, but easy credit appeared assured, until at least the turn of the month, when only nominal firmness is expected. The Canadian dollar which recently sagged to parity, returned to a premium of nearly 1-10 of one cent, and sterling cables rallied to $4.87 1-8.

In the commodity markets, grains were largely firm, although wheat lost 1-2 to 7-8 cent on increase in the world visible supply and reports of large Russian offerings. Corn gained 5-8 to 3-4 of a cent a bushel. Cotton closed off 50 to 85 cents a bale.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug 21—(AP)—In slightly increased activity, the listed bond market was firm today, and a brisk demand developed for seasoned utility issues, as carrier obligations continued to improve.

The foreign list was more active with prices somewhat irregular, but the easier tone of the money market, with call money renewing at 2 per cent for the first time since August 11, did not influence any buying of United States governments, which were extremely dull. Liberty 1st, 4s, dropped 28-32nds of a point on one sale.

Such seasoned issues as American Telephone 5s of 1965, Consolidated Gas 5 1-2s, Kansas City Gas and Electric 4 1-2s, North American Edison 5s, and Postal Telegraph 5s, were firm to strong. American and Foreign Power 5s, reached a new peak, along with Bell Telephone 5s, and Detroit Edison 5s.

Added to the list of railroad obligations which have worked into new high ground on the current advance, were Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis 4 1-2s, Chicago and Alton 3s, Union Pacific 4s of 1968, Atlantic Coast Line 4 1-2s, Missouri, Kansas and Texas 5s A, Oregon Railroad and Navagation 4s, and Central Railroad of New Jersey 4 1-2s, Northern Pacific general 3s, St. Paul general 4 1-2s, were other strong spots. Cuba Railway 1st 5s, soared 8 points. Pennsylvania 4 3-4s were reactionary.

Industrials were mixed, with the activity in oil obligations a feature. Sinclair Pipe Line 5s reached a new peak. Richfield Oil 6s, and Shell Union 5s, lost 3-4 of a point each. Lorillard 5s, were strong. National Dairy 5 1-4s, one of the most prominently traded industrials held firm. Chuleo 6 1-2s, lost 9 points, sinking to a new low, and Childs company 5s, Container Corporation 5s, and Gould Coupler 6s, were reactionary.

Royal Dutch 4s, held within a small fraction of the year's high price, and were the most active foriegn bonds, European governments were virtually unchanged. Denmark 4 1-2s, were weak. In the South American group, Brazil 6 1-2s gained nearly a point, and Buenos Aires 6s, 1-2.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 21—(AP)—The forward movement in curb market stocks was checked and finally reversed in today's curb market, as prices fluctuated uncertainly in sluggish trading.

It was an orderly retreat with most of the selling ascribed to realizing and short selling and the downward trend brought out only a small volume of stock. Total transactions for the day were only 320,400 shares. There were intermittent flurries of buying and selling throughount the session. Utilities were most active, and worked gradually lower.

Electric Bond and Share sagged under the weight of offerings to 78 3-4, and finished at 79 7-8, or 1 1-4 net lower. Middle West Utilities and American Light and Traction lost 1 and American Gas and Electric yielded 1 3-4. Niagara Hudson and American Super Power sagged fractionally and Northern States Power A, dropped 3 points. United Light and Power A, Associated Gas and Electric, were firm. Brazilian Traction closed 5-8 higher.

The reaction in petroleum issues was wild. Cities Service finished 3-8 lower. Vacuum lost 1-4 and Cosden 1-2. Standard Oil of Indiana, was well supported and held steady.

Aviation stocks were more active. Dayton Airplane Engine attracted buying on reports of re-organization plans, and gained 1-4. Fokker was firm, gaining 3-4 and Detroit Aircraft was well taken, closing at its previous final price.

Among recent trading favorites, Ford of England, Durant Motors and Translux were reactionary. Translux and Durant both low priced shares, lost a point or more.

Mead Johnson, was strong, and reached a new high with a 3 point gain. Great Atlantic and Pacific soared 13 3-4.

Investment and holding companies were steady to firm. Goldman Sachs rallied near the close, finishing one point net higher.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 21—(AP)—Canada's wheat harvest loomed larger as a grain trade factor today, and the wheat market at least temporarily shook off the uplifting influence of corn. It was announced that rural deliveries of wheat in Canada for 24 hours totaled 1,076,000 bushels compared with 271,000 bushels a year ago, a circumstance which led to fears of heavy selling pressure from Canada during the next few weeks.

Despite rains in various sections of the corn belt, and notwithstanding downturns in wheat prices, the corn market scored fresh gains, and Chairman Legge of the federal farm board was quoted as saying it would make but little difference hereafter how much rain fell, since it would not bring about a recovery of the corn crop.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled 3-8ca1c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed nervous at 1-2a7-8c net gain, with oats 5-8 a 1-8c advanced, and provisions varying from 7c setback to a rise of 5c.

Provisions although firm early with corn weakened later under scattered selling, notwithstanding that the hog market today reached a new high point for the year, $111.90 a hundredweight.

ADVICE

Advice, unfortunately, is not difficult to give.
It's easy to tell other folks just how they ought to live;
But if things turn out right, that doesn't glorify your name.
While if things turn out wrong, you may be sure you'll get the blame.

So hesitate to give advice; it really doesn't pay
To tell your friends just what you think they ought to do and say.
They'll listen most politely, to make you feel at ease.
And then, if they have sense, they'll go and do just what they please.

Again, it isn't always well to take your friends' advice;
Although it is gratuitous, it isn't worth the price.
They mean well, maybe, when they say to you: "Do so an so."
But you may find out later that they really didn't know.

But always listen to the counsel other people give,
For that will make you popular with those with whom you live;
Just try to listen patiently to all that they suggest.
Hear everything they have to say—then do as you think best.

SAIL ON NELSECO II DISTURBING FOR SOME

Twenty young women from Pachaug grange went on the moonlight excursion on the Nelseco II Wednesday evening. Out in Fishers Island sound, while crossing over from Little Gull lighthouse, Ram's reef buoy, the horrid water didn't appear to act just right. A choppy sea was running for these inland waters, and according to all acounts most of the girls not accostumed to a life on the ocean wave, were sorely distressed. Martin K., the pilot, as good-natured and obliging as he is competent, seemed much put out himself at the evident discomfort of his passenger list, so he squared away on a smoother tack and brought his ship into the lee of Southwest Ledge light and smooth water. What doesn't seem to just jibe in the reports is this:—The captain says the sound was like a mill pond. Just the same, more are going next week to see about this mal-de-mer sensation.

COMMUNITY WELCOME HOME FOR REV. FATHER McCABE

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Aug. 21.—A fine reception was given Rev. John J. McCabe, pastor of St. Mary's church, in the Finn theatre this evening, which happily expressed the pleasure of his parish, as well as that of many local friends, that he is safely home after a two months' tour of Europe. The assemblage proved that the committee had not failed in its desire to make this home-coming demonstration a non-sectarian welcome. The genuine pleasure being realized by Jewett City's representative Catholic clergyman was very evident when he arose to address his friendly audience. Going away is one thing—home-coming is far sweeter, when there are so many awaiting with smiles of welcome.

The effective decorations about the stage; of ferns, palms and flower baskets were the arrangement of the Whiting greenhouses. The exceptionally pleasing musical program, arranged by James Olsen, chorister and organist at St. Mary's, included the following numbers:

Welcome song, Junior choir; vocal solo numbers—The World is Waiting for the Sunrise, Mrs. Delia Gerand; The Bells of St. Mary's, Mrs. Agnes Sarazen; Danny Boy, John MacLean. The grand closing chorus was The Star Spangled Banner. Mr. Olsen was at the piano for the entire program.

The committee of arrangements, whose efforts were rewarded with such pleasing success, comprised: Rev. Nicholas Carron, chairman; Joseph H. McCarthy, Louis J. Masse, Richard J. Dudkowski, Frederick Condie, Ulderic E. Jodoin, Thomas F. Barnett, Joseph Glowacki.

Seated on the platform were visiting clergymen, town and borough officials and members of the church and reception committee. Rev. Nicholas Caron, the chairman, welcomed the large assemblage, gathered to express their joy in the safe return of Father McCabe and to welcome him home.

Rev. S. A. Iciek Speaks

Following an official welcome on the part of the borough of Jewett City by the warden, Edmond J. Jodoin, Rev. Stanislaus A. Iciek, pastor of St. Joseph's parish, Norwich, spoke with characteristic vigor and pleasing interest, as he told of his lifelong friendship for Fr. McCabe. In recounting the many fine achievements of his friend he cited the model school completed at the cost of tireless energy, adding that now, after two months' fine opportunity for observation and travel in foreign lands, he had returned to make good on its construction costs of many thousands of dollars. "Nothing goes so far and so thoroughly reaches the heart as a friendly word of appreciation for what our friends are working to accomplish," declared the eloquent speaker. He said: "I welcome you, we all welcome you, Father McCabe, and may you be spared to us for many years to come!"

State's Attorney's Cordial Words

State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown declared that he was delighted that he had been given this opportunity to take part in such a community expression of good-will and was glad that he could be counted among the friends of Father McCabe. His address set forth the inestimable value of friendship. He believed that there was little enough appreciation of the value and power of true friendship. His quotations from Shakespeare, Montaigne and Robert Louis Stevenson set forth the high value which these great men had placed on friendship. "I think we are too slow," he said, "in giving expression to our feelings of appreciation for the common-place things that our friends are doing every day! Many of my best friends may differ from me in faith and religious belief, but I consider it an honor to stand with them for the common uplift that always comes as the result of friendly cooperation. I was glad that Father McCabe could go abroad. I am glad for the advantages he has enjoyed and my heart is filled with satisfaction tonight that he is safely home to his parish and to friends!"

Pastor's Appreciation

Father McCabe, in rising to speak, said he found no words at his command to tell of his appreciation of this hearty welcome. He spoke of the pleasure it would be to continue the work which had been inaugurated. He told of some of the impressive lessons which were taught by the Passion play which he was privileged to witness at Oberammergau and by which he was deeply impressed. In paying just tribute to his friend, the State's Attorney, he said he considered it an honor to stand beside such an eminent example of an American citizen. He thanked his many non-Catholic friends for their part in such a splendid reception and he was happy to say that he believed that in no place there existed a more friendly and more kindly spirit than right here in our own town.

In closing, he said: "These very pleasant memories must make for better citizenship and will act as an incentive to keep us faithful to our coutry and faithful to our God. I thank you all for this royal homecoming welcome which you have given me tonight!"

Monday morning, August 25, the Jewett City Savings' bank will open for business in its new home. Banking hours 9 a. m. to 3 p. m.; Saturday 9 to 12.—adv.

Modern Blue Nose Express

What might be termed an invasion of the Blue Nose is seen in the new train which is operated over the local iron. North-bound, Friday and south-bound Monday, this new train caters to patrons who wish to make week end visits in Maine and maritime provinces. Fifty years ago the Blue Nose, operated by the Inter-Colonial R. R. used to run from Halifax N. S. via St. John, N. B., and the Maine Central R. R., to Bangor Maine. Some little time after that, the train service was extended over the Boston and Maine system to Boston, arriving late in the evening at the North station as the Flying Yankee. Now the Norwich-Worcester branch has a Blue Nose train of its very own. It is not to be supposed for a minute, however, that its schedule would call for a stop at small villages like Jewett City.

Having been closed for two days on account of building operations, the Slater library will be open this (Friday) morning.

Changes Of 44 Years

William Cantwell, of Plainfield, was a caller in the borough Thursday. He was looking over the many changes which have taken place since 44 years ago, when he first went to work here for the late Hiram Miner, in the one-time Wilcox blacksmith shop on what is now School street.

Miss Ellen Faust, of West Springfield, Mass., is away with a party of friends on a trip to Yellowstone park.

The big steam shovel is at work in Sylvandale, dropping the new street grade four feet at the bend.

The Jewett City Water Co., is making changes in the hydrant location on Main street, at the eastern approach to the new Quinebaug viaduct. At the top of Railroad hill, a change is made necessary because of side-walk alterations. The hydrant in front of R. W. Dearnley's property is to be moved across the street to a point in front of one of the Fisk Rubber company's houses.

Mrs. John Tetlow, of California, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Albert Harris. Her two daughters are married and living in Chicago, and the other is in California. Her son's home is in Detroit.

Miss Ellen Prior is entertaining over the week end a school friend, Miss Mary Gelette, of New Bedford. The two young women are students at Brown.

MANY SNAPPY SWIMMING EVENTS FOR TONIGHT

All that is needed is a break from the weather man to make the annual water sports program sponsored by the Ashland club a big success.

In spite of the uninviting weather of Thursday a few additional entries were received.

Some very attractive prizes are being offered and only three of the fourteen events listed are closed to members of the club. All other events are open and competition in these will no doubt be very keen as some of the best swimmers in this vicinity are entered.

Wilkinson Whitam has been engaged to act as referee of the swimming events. The judges will have a better chance to pick the close ones. Arthur Rioux will hold the watch.

The swimming course is lined out in lanes and a platform has been erected off shore for use in the relay races. With the lanes each swimmer must stay within bounds and the merit of this system is obvious.

In spite of the cool weather of this week the Ashland diving troupe, Roland Guillett, P. W. Chase, Geney Shorey and Mary Laframboise have worked out several new stunts. Miss Laframboise, who is visiting in town, has developed considerably since most of the local fans have seen her. This fourteen-year old star needs no further exploitation locally as she is a product of the Ashland club and its bathing beach.

Geney Shorey is likewise just as well known and the crowd always gets as much or more of a thrill out of his burlesque efforts as they do from the more graceful performers.

Although the program is made up of more events than in other years and the entry list is about twice as large Manager Chase is sure that the entire program will be run off before darkness sets in tonight. Weather permitting, the first event will start at 6:45. If the weather is unquestionably bad for water sports the program will be run off next week Monday, at the same time.

Thursday, on the Fisk grounds the Chretien All-Stars won a hard fought game against the Black Hawks, 13 to 7. The winners' line up: Bill [illegible], c; Charles Chretien, p; Eddie Falat, 1b; Stanley Bernard, 2b; John Beasuk, ss; Dopey, 3b; Bennie [illegible], lf; Zigmunt, cf; Archie Smith, rf.

No Turning Back

By Claire Wesson

THE red-capped porter who advanced toward little Miss Sue Weddington of Walnut Grove as she alighted from the western express in Union Station, Washington, D. C., was no psychoanalyst—indeed, he was almost an analphabete—but even in the dim light of the train sheds, instinct told him that she was unusual—a personage, in her modest way.

His impression of her was confirmed when, having passed through the iron gate and entered the huge concourse, untimidated by the deafening din of the station master's megaphone and the reverberating echoes of moving trains and street traffic, she stopped and, with pretty composure, pushed a strand of dark hair back under her little black hat. Apparently unmoved by the confusion about her, she gave the impression of one who, being accustomed to much larger and busier stations, has paused a moment to get her bearings.

It was the unruffled, queenly calm with which each September on the Tuesday after Labor Day Miss Sue concealed her perturbation and terror as she looked down from her teacher's platform into the faces of her new pupils. Leisurely she opened a beaded bag and took from out its well-ordered contents a very pretty wrist watch, gleaming new. One need only be half so experienced in human nature study as the boy carrying her suitcase to guess that both watch and bag were parting gifts from pupils and lodge friends, and that somewhere in the bag was a card bearing the address of the particular government bureau to which she should report, and her notification to report there officially signed by the civil service commissioner.

Miss Sue, having adjusted her watch in agreement with the huge station clock, listened for a moment in quiet dignity to the conglomeration of unintelligible sounds issuing from the station master's horn, and then, as one who knew exactly what she was doing, directed that her bag be carried to the waiting-room.

"Thank you, you are very kind," she said, and from a small purse in the beaded bag she took a dollar bill and handed it to the boy.

"Rather a large tip," she observed to herself as he grinned his appreciation, "but I kept him quiet a while; and, anyway, I'll have a hundred dollars a month, and only myself to spend it on."

Left alone and unobserved, little Miss Sue sank trembling into an easy chair in the corner of the waiting-room to try to attain the composure she had been simulating so successfully, to remind herself of all the perfectly good reasons for her being where she was, and to spur herself on by calling to mind the ignominy, the impossibility, of returning to Walnut Grove and asking that her school be given back to her. "Anyway," said the courageous Miss Sue to her trembling other self, "the position's doubtless been filled before now, and what'd you do with all the presents and everything?"

Yes, she'd done right to come. She had all her life longed to visit the nation's capital. When she was 18, she had been all ready to come with the other members of her normal school graduating class, but her mother had fallen fatally ill. And when she was 22, Peter John Peterson, who had just been elected to Congress, had begged and implored her to marry him and go with him. How hard she had found it to make it clear to him that duty to her father prevented! Indeed, for a year or more it seemed not to have been made clear to him, for in his subsequent correspondence and conversation he had assumed that the matter was still open.

At last, however, he must have come to understand that uprooting and transplanting her father would mean his death, and that she could not abandon him, helpless and old; for suddenly he fell silent on the subject, and it had not been reopened these 10 long years. Ten long, long years to her, harnessed down by schoolroom routine and nursing; ten short years, doubtless, to him, advancing from Congress to the Senate, from local popularity to national prominence—ah!

And then at last she had been suddenly free to do as she pleased. Just like that. One day her father sat growling in his wheeled chair. The next, he lay at peace. Miss Sue sobbed softly into her handkerchief.

Gradually her courage returned. She moved over to the window, from which she could see a corner of the capitol. She wished she had the courage to go up there and ask for Peter John. "Could you direct me to Senator Peterson's office?"—oh, dear, she never could do it. But perhaps, if she stayed, they would meet some day; perhaps—a lovely blush dyed her face.

Stark hunger drove her to the lunch-room. Later, she ventured to the florist's booth, to the bookstand for souvenir postals and guide book. At last, emboldened, she undertook to cross the plaza for a nearer view of the Columbus statue, but shrank, affrighted, at the traffic behind the big policeman, who offered to assist her, and ran straight back to her chair in the corner, collected her belongings, and marched over to the ticket window for a ticket back to Walnut Grove.

The waiting line diminished slowly. At last only two persons were between her and the window, when she felt herself gently pulled out of line.

"Sue!" exclaimed Peter John, in his good, hearty way. "I was just going out to Walnut Grove, to see you. I've been down to Panama with a committee, and Sister Ellen's radio never reached me. I learned only today of your—your—trouble. But you will stay with me now, Sue, won't you? You always cared a little, didn't you?"

And even the station master's clamor did not drown little Miss Sue's quiet "Always, Peter John," and she turned to acknowledge the introduction to his secretary, who had approached for instructions, with that sweetly gracious dignity which opens hearts in Washington as surely as in Walnut Grove.

"Which is the biggest diamond in the world?" asked the teacher.

"The ace," replied the smart boy.

A Bit of Sunshine

By Parke Whitney

UP and down the narrow gravelled path, Philip limped painfully, dejection written in every line of his figure. Even his footsteps sounded discouraged. Yet his brain was seething with fierce resentment. Destiny had struck an undeserved blow, and he rebelled against such unfairness.

As a budding engineer, Philip had climbed steadily and successfully up the ladder of his chosen profession, from the very foot to the topmost rung. And now that his finest piece of work was nearing completion, to be barred from active effort was maddening. There was not the slightest possibility of failure, for Philip's plans had been skilfully developed, and the men whose duty it was to excuse them as carefully selected. But he had worked so faithfully, it was unbearable that a broken leg should keep him from participating in the final triumph.

Philip hit an inoffensive pebble with his crutch, and groaned. It was worse than maddening, he despaired; it was diabolical. "The doctor might have let me go over a little while each day and look on. My leg is much stronger now."

Nevertheless, he felt his physician had been wise when he negatived this proposal emphatically.

"Phil, boy," the worthy man had said, "you could no more stand and watch the others work than I could help giving a nasty dose of medicine when I knew it was the kind that would benefit you most. A single glance at that immense bridge of yours, swarming with workmen, would be enough. Before one could say 'scat,' you'd be hoppling over the entire works and poking in every place to see if all was O. K. 'Twould be plain suicide. Your damaged limb must be coddled for some weeks yet. Any sudden wrench might undo the good we've accomplished, and leave you a permanent cripple.

"It is hard to be shut in like this, I know," the doctor said, with sympathetic hands on his patient's shoulders, while his kindly eyes looked deep into Phillip's stormy ones. "But you'll win, boy, and your victory will be a twofold one. Try to be patient. I can't allow you to go over even once."

Philip accepted the mandate stoically, resolving to take the bitter draught of medicine like a man.

"It's diabolical, just the same," he stormed aloud, leaning close to the low rock wall separating his back yard from the next door neighbor.

"Oh, is it truly as bad as that?" queried a lilting voice that sounded to Philip like hidden brooks and rippling bird calls. He looked over the wall and down into the bluest of blue eyes, framed in a halo of the sunniest red-gold hair he had even seen. They belonged to a slender slip of a girl who was lying flat on her back on a couch under the same great maple that shaded his own yard. The reclining position was made necessary by a board-like contrivance to which she was strapped. Philip's heart contracted sharply as he noted this, and his eyes lost their fierceness and softened with pity.

"All the morning I've listened to you marching up and down that walk." The cheery voice held no touch of petulance, "hoping you would 'right about face' and come over to say 'hello.' I knew you would be the nicest sort of a buddy, though the very tip-top of your head was every bit of yourself I could see," she finished whimsically.

The understanding friendliness that refrained from spoken sympathy, when she saw the crutches touched Philip strangely, banishing the flood of misery that had overwhelmed him. Her burden was so much heavier than his, and she carried it so bravely, he felt ashamed of his stubborn rebellion.

"All right, buddy," hoarsely; "you're the very pal I need. I'm coming right over." His eyes smiled down at her, a vast tenderness in their gray depths. Then, as his glance measured the distance from the ground to the top of the wall, her voice, in a panic of fear, arrested him.

"No, no," she cried, "don't try to come over that way. Go around to the gate."

Sliding his long length into the big chair by the couch, Philip introduced himself. "My name is Philip Wentworth," he began, propping the crutches against its arm.

"And I am Philippa Wayne. What did I tell you?" she bantered gaily. "We're twin buddies. I knew it the minute I caught sight of your head over the wall."

Philip laughed, the first time in weeks, settling himself more comfortably in the chair.

"Now," the merry girl-voice commanded, "tell me everything," Philip obeyed.

The story of his work, his dreams and ambitions, and the unforseen accident that had made him a temporary cripple, was frankly told. "Of course," he conceded honestly, the work at this stage can go on perfectly well without me; the good beginning insured success. Only I did want to be there at the finish. Just ordinary personal pride, you see," he concluded, the shamed color flushing his face. "And I've been behaving like a spoiled child."

"Oh, I know how it hurts," Philippa assured him, her eyes soft with compassion. "The fall that injured my back interrupted my work for a time, too, and at first the doctors were afraid I should never walk again. However, it doesn't pay to give up hope, ever, and I had heaps of courage, so now they tell me it is merely a matter of time and patience before I shall be well once more. After the torture of those months in the hospital, this seems like heaven."

Her wistful gaze followed the erratic wanderings of a fluff of white cloud and Philip wondered if the sapphire dome above them could be bluer than her eyes. The thought of her suffering caused him to wince, and he gripped the arms of his chair with savage clutch, waiting for her to continue.

"I'd rather dream dreams that never come true than to have no dreams at all," she went on, musingly. "Sometimes we can make them real. Aunt Eunice is a nurse and she takes such care of me, and Uncle John says he adores toting me around." Sheer laughter rippled in her voice, her ready smile inviting Philip's instant response. "Why shouldn't I be cheerful when they are so good? I feel, though, like a bird with clipped wings, but even a bird with clipped wings can sing, you know."

In the silence that followed, a silver-throated sparrow poured a torrent of exquisite melody over the quiet pair under the maple. Philipa, starry-eyed, watched the tiny songster. Philip, his heart in his throat, watched her. Through the overhanging branches a vagrant sunbeam glinted, turning Philippa's bright hair into a crown of gold. The tears in her eyes were more than Philip could stand, and bending forward impulsively, he took her hands in both of his own.

"Buddy mine," he choked, "you are like a stray bit of sunshine yourself. Do you always try to comfort and help somebody? Don't you ever think of yourself?"

"Oh, yes, I've been originating wonderful ideas to put into practice, later. Simply because you and I are down, doesn't mean we are down and out," she teased, tremulously, to cover the quick rush of feeling his words provoked. "Your work is still going on—mine is waiting for me, and while enduring these enforced vacations, we can make new plans for bigger, better things when we begin again."

Philip answered in a voice husky with emotion, the hands holding hers in such a strong, close clasp, trembling.

"Little Philippa, it is true, too, that you can fly farther with your clipped wings than the rest of us can with perfect ones."

"Ah, buddy," caressingly, "that's the secret of it all. We are 'baffled to fight better.'"

The Last Laugh

By Phil Moore

MARIA KIRBY paused in her dusting to stare blankly at the calendar before her. Slowly her mouth opened:

"Barbara Kirby! Tomorrow's your grandfather's birthday, as sure as you're a foot high! I'd completely forgotten about it!"

The tall girl, mop in hand, joined her mother, and in turn studied the pink creation on the wall.

"Good land!" she exclaimed, "It's no use, mother, we've got to do something and do it quickly. I wouldn't have grandfather think we'd forgotten it, for worlds. How on earth can we celebrate at this late hour!"

"We might have sort of a little surprise party for him, and invite all the Mayberrys and Pratts from Hinton, if it isn't too late," suggested Mrs. Kirby.

"Just the thing, mother! I'll go right now and see if I can get them on the phone."

Mrs. Mayberry herself answered the long-distance call.

"Why, yes. We'd love to come," came her cheery voice over the wire. "But, you see, tomorrow's Wednesday, and Henry has an important business meeting that day. And I know that Aunt Elsa Pratt has promised to spend tomorrow with Mrs. Briggs. I think we could all come on Thursday. Would that do?"

"Why—" Barbara hesitated; "Yes, come, Thursday."

All right, then, we'll be there bright and early. That will give us a chance to get a few little things for Grandfather Mayberry, too, so it will be all the better."

Barbara hung up the receiver and turned to her mother.

"Now, mother," she cautioned, "don't say a word about the date. I believe grandfather hasn't even thought of it, and he'll never know the difference. We won't mention his birthday until Thursday morning, and he'll never stop to realize that it's a day late."

"You'll have to call up the Mayberrys and Pratts again and warn them not to give it away."

"I'll look out for that part of it, never fear," assured the girl. "I'm not going to let grandfather have the laugh on us."

Thursday dawned fair. Grandfather Mayberry arose early. He was anxious to set out those potted plants for Maria before the sun was too high.

Tom Kirby's deep bass voice greeted him as he appeared at the foot of the stairs: "Happy birthday, Father Mayberry! I'm off early this morning; going to take the afternoon off to help you celebrate."

Grandfather grinned appreciation of the bill tucked into his hand. He inwardly congratulated himself on having such a remarkably fine son-in-law, and chuckled quietly to himself.

The relatives were true to the word of Mrs. Mayberry. Promptly at 10 o'clock grandfather himself opened the door in response to the repeated "honk-honk" of automobile horns and the impatient peal of the doorbell.

He was greeted with a chorus of "Happy birthday, grandpa!" "Many happy returns of the day, father!"

Blankly, grandfather looked from one face to the other. Then, as it suddenly dawned upon him that this "surprise" was all for him, he solemnly drew out his handkerchief and mopped his face.

"Well, I'll be blowed if I ain't Queen of the May, myself," he said.

It was a big day in Silas Mayberry's life. Like a happy child he opened his gifts and spread them on the big square piano for all to admire. He beamed approval on everyone and fairly trembled with joyous excitement as he "counted noses" and cut the huge cake.

Well toward the morning hour the last sound of a farewell honk died away in the distance, and the Kirbys sank wearily into their chairs, tired but happy.

"Where's father?" inquired Maria.

"Sh!" warned Barbara. "Don't say a word. He's out in the kitchen, finishing the last of the ice cream!"

"Didn't get wise to the date at all, did he?" chuckled Tom Kirby. "You surely put one over on him that time."

We sure did," agreed his wife. "It seemed kind of deceitful, but I think it was better than to let him know we didn't think of it till the last minute."

Granfather Mayberry recklessly unfolded a new paper napkin and wiped his mouth. Then he joined the family in the disordered parlor.

"Much obliged, folks," he said. "That was mighty fine of you. I've had a great day."

"I'm glad you enjoyed it, father smiled Maria.

"You know," went on the old man, "I've got a little joke on myself. I guess I'll have to tell you 'bout it. You know, I thought all along that yesterday was my birthday. And, thinks I, they've forgotten all about it this year. And then, when the crowd showed up this morning, I said to myself, 'They've sure mixed up their dates, blowed if they ain't. But,' thinks I, 'I'll say nothing; they'd feel kind of disappointed if they found it out, and I wouldn't hurt their feelings for worlds.' So I kept mum. And say, do you know, it never dawned on me till about 10 minutes ago that that there pink contraption was a last year's calendar!"

Tom Kirby looked at his wife. His wife looked at Barbara. And Barbara looked at them both. Then Tom put back his head and laughed long and long. His wife and daughter made a sickly effort to join in his mirth.

Grandfather chuckled. "So today's my birthday, after all. Instead of having a joke on you folks, I had one on myself. Pretty funny, wasn't it!"

Maria Kirby shot a warning glance at her husband before she answered, "Yes, father, it—it was certainly very funny."

"Ha, ha! Yes, very," agreed Barbara. "Certainly very—very funny!"

"Where is that young man of yours tonight? Isn't he coming?" asked her dad.

"No! He telephoned that it was raining so hard he would not be over.

"Not much of a rain beau, is he?"

A Mess of Pottage

By Hazel Courtney

YOU'LL be sorry, Jessie," said Stephen. His anger was forgotten in his fear for the girl who had worn his ring for a year. "You'll miss the easy hospitality of the hills and there'll be a mad scramble for a living before you find the freedom and individuality you are after. But I forgot. I wasn't going to mention this again. Only, please remember that behind these hills you'll always find a home—and me—waiting for you."

"You'd better not wait, Steve, I shan't return to Halesborough. The hills have always oppressed me. I'm leaving them for good."

"Don't say it. You'll come back." As her train pulled in he helped her on, kissed her hurriedly and rushed away, fearing that acquaintances on the platform might see the blur in his eyes.

Jessie tried to imagine herself freer, lighter of heart, as the train left Halesborough. But she was not entirely successful. Was a career, after all, worth the sacrifice of home, friends—and Stephen? And was she sure that the voice which had delighted Halesborough would justify the faith she had in it? She became utterly despondent and miserable and shed a few tears on discovering that the hills were far behind and her journey nearing its end.

They were prophetic tears. It took very little time to prove that her voice was no better than that of thousands of other aspirants for a singing career. Her funds were soon swallowed up. By degrees Jessie became acquainted with the art of cooking an egg over the gas flame in her room and concealing a loaf of bread so cleverly that the landlady could not discover so glaring a breach of lodging-house etiquette. After a while she learned to go without food entirely for long intervals, while she made the rounds of the agencies in the hope of finding work.

One evening, returning to her boarding-house, cold wet and hungry, she paused at the bottom of the three flights of stairs that led to her room to allow an elderly gentleman to descend. The warmth of the house after the cold outside, and the odors from the dining room, combined with her complete physical exhaustion, made her head swim. The staid-looking old gentleman seemed to be dancing a jig. And suddenly everything grew black.

When she recovered she found herself lying on a couch. Bending over her were two persons, the old gentleman she remembered seeing on the stairs and her landlady. She raised herself on an elbow.

"Did I fall—faint—or something?"

"Yes," snapped the landlady. "And this gentleman—Dr. Brown—says you need rest—and food—and other things you can't get here. So if you have folks somewhere you had better go to them. I can't be bothered with lodgers who require care."

"Suppose," said Dr. Brown, "you bring this little girl some buttered toast and tea. We can talk later."

"My child," said he, when she had finished, "what made you so—so exhausted?"

Jessie blushed painfully. "The truth of the matter is," she confessed, "that I haven't been eating enough." And she explained about the voice that had failed, and the home that was waiting for her in Halesborough.

"I'm afraid," said old Doctor Brown, "that it's but a scanty mess of pottage for which you have sacrificed so much."

She blushed again. "I didn't know. There seemed so little in Halesborough—no music, no art, no romance—"

"No music, no art, no romance?" repeated Doctor Brown, wonderingly. "How about the music of the birds that Nature provides so bountifully; the landscapes that art can only cheaply imitate, and love that is true and tried against a background of beauty, such as the average city-dweller can never hope to enjoy? You have been surfeited, spoiled, with an overabundance of the worth-while things of life. Take the advice of an old man. Go home; make some fortunate young man and yourself happy."

"I—think—I will." Jessie looked searchingly into Doctor Brown's sadly wrinkled face. "Why—why do you take such an interest in me?"

"My daughter," answered the old gentleman, slowly "came here some time ago, like you, to make a career for herself. She—she got lost. I come here every year hoping to find her or hear something of her. When I meet someone who is likely to get lost, like her, I try to save her."

Jessie reached over and kissed his forehead. "Doctor Brown," said she, earnestly, "I should like so much to have you at my wedding. Will you come?"

"Thank you, my dear. It would make me very happy."

Stephen met Jessie the next day at the station. There was little said until they reached their home, when she took his hands in hers and held them tightly.

"Stephen, I've been an awful fool, but there's this much gained that I realize it now."

She gazed at the hills, piled high on top of each other, and somehow they did not seem gloomy or oppressive any more. "Don't you think the hills are sort of friendly—like strong, good natured giants, protecting us from outside evils?"

"That's the way I've always felt about them, Jessie."

She told him about Doctor Brown and the invitation she had extended.

"Honey," said Stephen, "I think that old man and I are going to be good friends. And we'd better hurry that wedding along, because I'm anxious to meet him."

"What was the best job you ever did?" inquired the first barber.

"I once shaved a man," replied the second barber.

"Well?"

"Then I persuaded him to have a hair-cut, shampoo, facial massage, singe, sea foam, electric buzz, tar spray, and tonic rub."

"What then?"

"By that time he needed another shave."

"My face is my fortune," she said.

"Well," he replied, "Never mind that. The richest people aren't always the happiest."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

New Studebaker Roadster

Ralph Hepburn, famous automobile racing driver, will arrive in town tomorrow driving a new "free wheeling" Studebaker President Eight roadster. Hepburn is touring Connecticut, calling on Studebaker dealers and making demonstrations of the new series President models. While in Norwich he will make his headquarters at T. N. M. Lathrop's, local Studebaker dealer.

This is not the first time that Hepburn has demonstrated the superiority of Studebaker President Eights. In 1928, at the Atlantic City speedway, he was one of the drivers who helped pilot the world champion President Eight roadster 30,000 miles in 26.326 minutes—an average speed of 68.37 miles per hour for 19 days and 18 nights continuous running. Not one, but four President Eights participated in this run, all of them finishing at average speeds in excess of 63 miles per hour.

Free wheeling, as incorporated in Studebaker Eights, permits shifting from high to second gear, back and forth, with silence, safety and precision, at forty—fifty miles an hour without touching the clutch. The instant the driver's foot is removed from the accelerator no matter how swiftly the car may be traveling, the engine immediately drops to idling speed. The car floats on, swiftly and silently, although constantly in gear and under full control. Car momentum never forces the engine, and there is no sensation of "piling up" when decelerating. It is not necessary to use the clutch except when starting or backing up.

Among the benefits owners receive from free wheeling are increased economy of operation and longer life. It permits a saving of 12 per cent on gasoline, 20 per cent on oil, reduces carbon and lessens strain on motor and transmission.

HOW AUTOMOBILE RECORDS AID IN IDENTIFICATION

In an article prepared by the Connecticut department of motor vehicles and broadcast Thursday afternoon from radio station WTIC, Hartford, an identification network which spreads over Connecticut and often to other states was discussed. The article said that it is surprising how closely the citizen of today is identified with his automobile, even aside from the processes of driving it and paying the bills for it. The fact that he owns an automobile often affects many activities of his life usually considered disassociated from motor cars. Connecticut car owners and operators are frequently amazed by the amount of information they have voluntarily supplied about themselves, or which has been collected, and is now on file with the state department of motor vehicles.

The department, because of these records, is often able to assist the police in apparently mysterious bits of detective work by locating or identifying cars and persons. A large number of cases involve hit-and-run drivers or other criminals. Quick action is obtained many times by the use of the telephone or the teletype, an intercommunicating system which works on the principle of the telegraph. With the information received from the department, the police are able to spread a net covering three or four towns, or perhaps all of Connecticut and several adjoining states, within a few minutes. Offenders are frequently caught in this way a short time after they leave the scene of their offense, although they may have believed they would never be identified.

Mix dates, raisins, nuts and water. Cook slowly five minutes. Cool. Cream fat and add sugar. Mix well. Add eggs and beat two minutes. Add rest of ingredients, including cooked fruit mixture. Drop portions of dough from end of spoon onto greased baking sheets. Space three inches. Bake 12 minutes in a moderate oven.

CHIEF C. A. PINNEY, NEW LONDON, SUSPENDS PATROLMAN SHEEHAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 21—Patrolman Patrick Sheehan today was suspended by Captain Charles A. Pinney pending an investigation of charges formally preferred against the officer by Leland Flanagan and Frank Storey, sailors, stationed at the submarine base. If the allegations as set forth by Flanagan and Storey are determined to be true, there is every probability that Sheehan will be presented in the police court tomorrow or Saturday charged with either breach of the peace or assault, for Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer made it known after being informed of the nature of the charges that if it is found that Sheehan perpetrated the act he is accused of doing that the officer will be criminally prosecuted, the same as any other individual.

Flanagan and Storey claim that they were walking south on Main street last midnight and that when near John street, Sheehan, not in uniform, for he had reported off duty, passed them and as he did, it was believed that the officer made a remark. One of the sailors inquired as to the nature of the utterance and it is claimed by the bluejackets that Sheehan pulled a blackjack from his pocket and attacked the two men. While Sheehan was wielding the weapon, it fell heavily upon Flanagan, but Storey succeeded in making his escape and running to State street he came upon Patrolman Clarence Wells to whom the sailor related what had occurred. Wells accompanied Storey to the vicinity of John street, where Sheehan and Flanagan were standing and the sailor was severely bruised. When Wells heard the statements of what had occurred, the officer suggested that Flanagan and Storey go to police headquarters and tell their story so that Sheehan might be disciplined, if their statements were given credence. Flanagan and Storey, however, went to the submarine base, where they related their experience to their superior officer and as it was known that Sheehan was a police officer, the sailors were advised to seek the arrest of their alleged attacker. Flanagan and Storey went to police headquarters and requested Sheehan's arrest, relating minutely what they claimed in the way of the officer's conduct. Hearing the story of the sailors, Capt. Pinney immediately suspended the officer and Desk Sergeant William T. Babcock was sent to the submarine base where the officer discussed the allegations of the sailors with their executive. Sheehan performed duty from 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon until 11:30 o'clock last night, reporting off duty with the middle detail. He left headquarters about 11:35 and his associate officers assert that Sheehan acted normal and there was no indication by his demeanor that he had been drinking.

Sheehan when informed of his suspension claimed that he had three or four witnesses to testify in his favor, but the nature of their testimony was not revealed. The officer has had charges preferred against him before, principally for drinking while on duty.

IRENE EDWARDS MISSING— MAY HAVE GONE TO JERSEY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 21—Irene Edwards, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Edwards, 54 Howard street and employed in the sales department at the Montgomery Ward company, Bank street, is missing from her home and tonight the father of the girl requested that he be given assistance in an endeavor to find her. The girl left her home at noon today supposedly to go to her employment. She did not return home this evening and when an investigation was made by Edwards he determined that his daughter was not at her work during the afternoon. The father was of the opinion that the girl had gone to New Jersey, for she entertained a young man from that state yesterday. The girl is described as having black hair and black eyes and wore a blue dress, light colored coat, tan hat and light colored shoes

SHAMROCK V AND ERIN LEAVE THAMES FOR NEWPORT

NEW LONDON, Aug. 21—The America cup challenger Shamrock V, owned by Sir Thomas Lipton, which has been undergoing refitting, painting of her hull and the stepping of her mast, several days at the Electric Boat company, was launched at 11:20 o'clock this morning and at once started for Newport. It is probable that the sloop will not return here, remaining off Newport until the races with the American defender next month. The Shamrock slid off the ways gracefully and the balloon jib was hoisted. After sailing down the river as far as the Coast Guard academy, the mainsail was hoisted and the racer speeded down the harbor and out into Fishers Island sound and headed eastward. The Erin, Lipton's steam yacht, which arrived in port from New York with the owner during the night, followed the Shamrock V and a short time afterwards, the tug Reliance started for Newport with the barge Killarney, on which the crew are being fed and lodged. During his brief stay in port Lipton did not go ashore.

CAMDEN, N. J., YOUTHS HELD AFTER CHARGE BY GIRL

NEW LONDON, Aug. 21—Robert Hathaway, 28, and Henry Christensen, 20, both of Camden, N. J., were in the police court this morning on a technical charge of breach of the peace and their cases were continued until tomorrow morning to permit further investigation, by Sergeant Nelson Smith. The young men were arrested early this morning on charges preferred by one of two young girls who had been in the company of the strangers. The girl sought the arrest of Hathaway and Christensen when Hathaway intimidated them.

The girls said that they formed the acquaintance of Hathaway and Christensen Wednesday night and when invited to take a ride they accepted. They were being driven to Sound View, when according to the complainant, Hathaway, who had been drinking, took a revolver from the side pocket of the automobile and remarked that he was an excellent shot and that unless the girls submitted to the attentions of the men the revolver might be used on them. Although the girls were frightened they decided to use diplomacy and it was suggested that they return to New London in order to permit them to do some errand that they had forgotten to do. The trip was started for New London and enroute, one of the girls slipped the weapon from the side-pocket and dropped it from the auto. The auto was driven to Ocean Beach and there one of the girls alighted and found Patrolman William Graham, to whom she related her experience. Sergeant John Courney and Automobile Patrol Officer Arthur Feeley were near by and when Courtney was informed of the nature of the complaint, he caused the arrest of Hathaway and Christensen, also drove to Waterford where the [illegible] indicated the approximate location where the revolver had been thrown from the auto. After a brief search the weapon was found.

Hathaway and Christensen relate an entirely different story. They said that they had been drinking and that the girls joined them in a drinking party after they arrived in the country and that the return trip to New London was made for the intended purpose of securing more liquor, although it was 3 o'clock when they arrived at the beach.

Today it became known that the young men hired an automobile in Camden several days ago and drove to New London, arriving here Tuesday. They said that although they were strangers in New London that they found it an exceptionally easy matter to purchase liquor.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the drivers' licenses of Matthew C. Fyalla, United States Coast Guard; Edward T. Plante, submarine base and Isiah Lasson, submarine base, and the return of the licenses of Clarence Dias, 61 Woodbridge street, and Alfred H. Miller, 25 Learned street.

Mary C. Bowman, colored, of 20 High street, and Corinne Morris, also colored, of 4 Douglass street, who describes herself as a musician, were to be arraigned in the police court this morning charged with conducting houses of ill fame. The Bowman woman failed to appear so her bond of $500, upon which Louis Elfenbein was surety, was declared forfeited. Process Borgatta, a sailor, found in the house had his case continued until Saturday. The Morris woman was fined $100 and costs and in default of payment of the penalty, she was committed to jail, although her friends are endeavoring to secure the money.

John Tarney, a lodger at the Learned mission, was charged with breach of the peace and was sentenced to 20 days in jail. Tarney was on Main street last evening where he entered stores and made a nuisance of himself by soliciting money.

William P. Franklin, colored, residing at 45 North Bank street, was charged with theft. The charge was nolled. Franklin was arrested last Tuesday following complaint being made by Mrs. Rose Lane, colored, of 8 Schoolhouse lane, that Franklin had stolen $5.

Never Had a License.

Mrs. B. Depew, 775 Ocean avenue, charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law had her case continued until the 30th inst. Mrs. Depew was driving an automobile, which hit a young woman pedestrian at Ocean Beach 10 days ago and when Patrolman Joseph Sullivan made an investigation it was disclosed that Mrs. Depew had never possessed a driver's license.

James M. Tulley, Worcester, Mass., and Robert N Lanhan, submarine base were charged with breach of the peace at Ocean Beach, were given suspension of judgment.

Mrs. Josephine Stamion, 76 Potter street, was charged with violation of the liquor law. Her case was continued until tomorrow. The woman was one of 11 men and women who were arrested Tuesday when the police staged raids.

Frederick Dart, 103 Federal street, reported to the police this evening that a man was lying on the sidewalk near the Dart residence. When Patrolman Cornelius arrived at the house the man had disappeared.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

The double-feature bill which combines "Shooting Straight" with Richard Dix, and "Dancing Sweeties" starring Sue Carol and Grant Withers will be shown at the Palace theatre for the last times today and tomorrow.

RONALD COLMAN IN A SCENE FROM "RAFFLES"

At the Palace Sunday

"Shooting Straight" is the story of a red-blooded city business man who finds that his pal has been murdered. How he avenges this murder and how the situation completely changes his whole life is one of the interesting developments in the plot.

A new leading lady will be seen with Dix in this picture. She is Mary Lawlor, a beautiful blonde who has just left the Broadway musical stage for the motion pictures and the two are said to work together very harmoniously. There are some touching love scenes and the acting has been perfectly executed by this pair of stars.

"Dancing Sweeties" is an entirely different type of plot. It is the story of a modern husband who cannot resist the lure of the dance halls. He did not sow his wild oats in his days of freedom and his wife will not permit him to do it later.

Ronald Colman, who has made such smashing hits in Condemned and Bulldog Drummond, will be seen in his latest sure-fire, amazing mystery drama Raffles at the Palace for four days starting Sunday. This is the best picture that Coleman has been in to date.

Race Drivers DEMAND the TIRES WE SELL!

THE Indianapolis 500 Mile Endurance Race is famous as an endurance test and battle of tires for no driver can win this race who has tire trouble. He races over a hot brick track at a speed of 100 or more miles per hour. For eleven consecutive years Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have been on the winning cars.

FOR years the winner of the hazardous race of Pike's Peak climb — where a slip meant death — used Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires.

1. THESE drivers do not simply choose Firestone Tires. They demand them. They know by experience that this tire never fails. It never fails because it is built not to fail by the special Firestone processes of tire building.
   - (a) Every fibre of cotton thread going into the making of the cord fabric, which is the foundation of the tire, is coated and cushioned in rubber by the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process.
   - (b) Under the tread is the Firestone patented Gum-Dipped Double Cord Breaker—which means not only two extra plies where most needed, but also sets the Firestone Tire apart as an all cord tire, while others are woven fabric and cord.
   - (c) Firestone Super High Speed Tires now have 32% more rubber in the tread, giving deeper grooves that will give you over 50% more non-skid wear before the tire is smooth.
2. THESE are not just features. They are basic differences in tire building proved by service on every kind of road and track.
3. YOU may never intend to race. You may never intend even to speed. You may never climb Pike's Peak. But, every day —whether you know it or not—your life depends upon your tires.
4. WE HAVE these Super High Speed Gum-Dipped Balloons for sale today. They are the same tires that the racing drivers demand — the premier tires of the world. Their first cost is low. Their cost per mile of service makes them cheaper today than even cheap tires. They are inexpensive, not only because the price of rubber is low, but because we have joined with Firestone to bring into the sale of tires the same degree of efficiency which goes into their manufacture. The benefit of all this is in the price to you.
5. DRIVE IN TODAY. We will examine your tires and make you an allowance for your unused mileage. We can equip your car with new Firestone Super High Speed Tires at a much lower cost than you ever expected. They will give you unequalled service and satisfaction.

FIFTH DISTRICT, AMERICAN LEGION, ORGANIZING FIFE AND DRUM CORPS

Discussion of the national convention to be held at Boston, Oct. 5-8, was the principal business at the monthly meeting of the fifth district, American Legion, Thursday evening at the Buckingham Memorial, this city, with about 50 members representing the 12 posts of the district, present.

The meeting, called to order by District Commander Joseph Bellefleur of Norwich, heard the minutes of the previous meeting, as read by Adjutant Charles B. Gilbert of Norwich, and the committee report of Comrade Killeen of Montville, relative to the transportation to the national convention at Boston. Comrade Killeen reported that the train transportation cost, leaving New London Oct. 5 and returning Oct. 8 will be approximately $13 per member. It was the consensus of the members that they would rather go by train than by water or automobile.

District Commander Bellefleur asked for information relative to entertaining the visiting delegates from other states. New London has taken the matter in hand and is working with the New London chamber of commerce and other organizations to see that proper entertainment facilities are arranged, such as automobile transportation or overnight accommodations and sight-seeing trips. A committee of three will be appointed from the district to work with New London and to help out in any way they can.

New London and Groton are arranging to form a fife and drum corps which will accompany the district posts to Boston. The project was mentioned at the meeting and it was voted that the district lend their support and that if sufficient funds are raised by the district that it be called the Fifth District Fife and Drum corps.

Word has been received from national headquarters, it was announced, that on Sept. 18 a national broadcast over a network of stations will take place and talks relative to the convention in Boston will be discussed over the air. The different posts have taken action upon this matter and will hold joint meetings in the different localities of the posts and auxiliaries to listen in on the broadcast.

The matter of the next year's meetings of the district was taken up and a committee is to be appointed to work with the auxiliary on a programme of meetings. In November, when the new officers are installed the programme for the year will be ready.

A report was rendered by Treasurer Wilfred Lamphere of Mystic. He reported how the different posts stand as to their hospital and district dues and also gave a short talk for the benefit of the new New London women's post in regard to the hospital fund. The fund is based on the balance of the White Cross council, No 13, Knights of Columbus fund, which was started following the World war.

Donations on a monthly basis were made by the council to the invalids and sick men at local hospitals until the fund was nearly exhausted. The council did not want the work to stop, so it asked the local Elks and American Legion to continue it, namely in furnishing luxuries to the men in the local hospitals. A schedule was worked out by which each organization was assessed a certain amount each month and this work has been carried on for the past four years under the direction of John P. Corcoran.

It is planned to hold the next district meeting at Groton the third Thursday in September. The auxiliary to the Legion, in session in an adjacent room, with Mrs. Ruth Sears, of Taftville, presiding, voted to sponsor a booth at the Old Lyme and Hamburg fairs with intentions of raising money for World war orphans' scholarships. Mrs. Grace McNally, of Poquonoc, district secretary, made a report on the recent convention at Bridgeport and the meeting voted to arrange a schedule of meetings from November, 1930, to November, 1931. There were about 55 in attendance.

MOHEGAN PARK WILLOWS CAME FROM GRAND PRE

The beautiful willows that afford shade and comfort for the ducks at the duck pond at Mohegan park during the hot, summer days, are offsprings from the enormous willows of Grand Pre, Nova Scotia, which were planted there nearly 200 years ago by the Acadians, the scions being brought from their old home in Normandy. The willows were planted at the park by a well known Norwich woman. For some time considerable has been said in the press concerning the pilgrimage of the Louisiana descendants of the French villagers to the land of their ancestors. Early in the 17th century, 120 French families, so the story goes, settled in Grand Pre and the population steadily grew, until at the time of their eviction from their homes, the people numbered 10,000. The villagers were carried away on British ships, never to return.

Eleven years ago the local woman, a member of a party of three, went to Grand Pre for a visit and in touring the vicinity happened upon these beautiful willows, which at that time were lying flat on the ground, but, according to her, show a persistence in keeping alive. She was given permission to take some of the shoots of the trees, which were planted in a row on a dyke, and returned home with six.

As the local woman is a great lover of flowers, shrubs and trees, she wanted them planted in a place where the public would have opportunity to view and admire them. Edward Smith, now residing at "Fair Acres", Mystic, was then superintendent of Mohegan park. he shoots were presented to Superintendent Smith and were planted around the duck pond, just opposite the buildings where the monkeys, and park birds are housed. Later the Norwich woman wrote to her host at Grand Pre and asked for additional shoots, which were promptly sent and set out at the park. The trees are now about five feet in height.

The tragic exile of the Acadians was made famous in Lonfellow's poem "Evangeline". It is said that Longfellow was never on the site but received his information from his brother, Samuel. The Acadians believe that Evangeline was one of them and not a figment of Longfellow's brain. They believe that Evangeline died in the Bayou Teche at New Orleans, where the Louisiana descendents of the Acadians now live.

The Louisiana party, accompanied by New England Acadians in Boston, visited Grand Pre, Wednesday.

COURT NOLLES CHARGE AGAINST PETER NAWROCKI

Upon the recommendation of City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy the case of Peter Nawrocki of Yantic, charged with violation of the rules of the road, was nolled in the city court Thursday morning. Nawrocki was arrested Wednesday evening by State Police Officer Hoxie of the Groton barracks, after an automobile collision at the Yantic flats. It is charged that Nawrocki's machine forced a car operated by George E. Myra of 60 Grosvenor street, Hartford, off the highway and into a telephone pole, which was snapped off in the middle. Recommend Highway Sign

At a meeting of the publicity committee of the Norwich chamber of commerce, Thursday morning, it was voted to recommend to the board of directors of the chamber, that a sign be erected on the Saybrook bridge, at the point where the Gardner lake road intersects route No. 1, from New York to Boston. It was suggested that the sign be 42 inches wide and 10 feet high, calling attention to the fact that the shortest route to Boston is through Norwich by way of the Gardner Lake highway. ILLINOIS REP. CONVENTION STRADDLES THE DRY ISSUE

Will Let the Voters at the November Election Write the Party's Plank on Prohibition—Endorsed the Policy of Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, Senatorial Candidate—Mrs. McCormick Pledges That, if Elected Senator, She Will Obey the Mandate of the Majority of the Republican Party

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 22—(AP)—Illinois republicans, endorsing the policy of their senatorial candidate, Mrs. Ruth Hannah McCormick, today voted to let the voters at the November election write the party's plank on prohibition.

The platform, as adopted—in contrast with that of the democrats who Wednesday approved a "wet" platform—stated that the party will abide by the will of the voters in the state referendum on prohibition in November.

The questions to be voted upon then are (1), shall the 18th amendment be repealed and (2), shall the Volstead act for prohibition enforcement be modified.

"I approve my party's declaration that it will be responsive to the expression of the voters on the referendum questions," Mrs. McCormick told the convention. "I shall as senator accept such a majority expression as a mandate from the people whom I represent.

"If a majority in Illinois are recorded as favorable to the repeal of the 18th amendment, I stand ready when elected senator to obey their mandate, and I shall vote to submit the question of its repeal to the several states.

"If the expressed will of the people is for modification of the Volstead act, my course as a member of the senate would be in sympathy with the principles so approved, but the definite course to be pursued would be dependent, of course, upon the nature of the modification demanded."

Mrs. McCormick introduced the subject of prohibition by pointing out that prohibition had been "a problem that has engaged the attention of the country for the last ten years."

"It is not a partisan political issue but is rather a public policy question which concerns all citizens of all our states and upon which there is bitter controversy and almost endless attempts at adjustment by means of legislation," she said.

"The 18th amendment to the constitution of the United States, and the enforcement act, known as the Volsead law, have been and are now opposed by many American citizens. It is not to the point, at this time, to debate the question as to whether the opposition to the amendment and to the enforcement act represent a minority or majority of our citizens.

"We must confront the fact that any group of citizens has a right, under the constitution . . . to 'petition the government'."

PROGRESS OF NATIONAL WOMEN'S AIR DERBY

WICHITA, Kans., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Successfully negotiating a severe wind and rain storm which forced three other entrants to make forced landings, Mrs. Gladys O'Donnell, of Long Beach, today increased her lead in the Long Beach-Chicago women's air derby to an hour and 50 minutes.

Miss Marjorie Doig, Danbury, Conn. second in the race in elapsed time, lost her way soon after leaving Enid, Okla., but soon corrected her mistake and followed Mrs. O'Donnell into Wichita, tonight's control point.

The fliers encountered the worst weather of their trip between Amarillo, Tex., where they spent the night, and Enid, Okla., where they halted for lunch. Ruth Stewart, of St. Louis, was forced down in a corn field near Elk City, Okla. Farmers aided her in taking off again in the rain.

Mildred Morgan of Beverly Hills Calif., was forced down near Enid, and Miss Jean Larene, of Kansas City, near Waukomis, Okla.

All of the derbyists reached Enid in time for a scheduled take-off for Wichita however. Miss Larne was third to land in Wichita; Miss Stewart, fourth; Miss Morgan, fifth, and Miss Ruth Barron, Hollywood, sixth.

The racers will rest here for 24 hours and take off for Kansas City at 3.30 tomorrow afternoon.

Total elapsed times: Gladys O'Donnell, Long Beach, 9:55:51; Marjorie Doig, Danbury, Conn., 11:05:13; Mildred Morgan, Beverly Hills, 15:00:15; Jean Larene, Kansas City, 15:38:29; Ruth Stewart, St. Louis, 17:10:12; Ruth Barron, Hollywood, 29:16:50.

500 PERSONS MASSACRED BY BANDITS IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Two thousand bandits, descending upon the helpless city of Hangchengchen, western Honan province, killed 500 natives and kidnaped 800 others for ransom, Chinese press dispatches said today.

The atrocity, latest reported since rebellion, communist depredations and widespread banditry, gripped China, took place during a fortnight occupation of the city. Methodically and thoroughly the brigands stripped the townspeople of their possessions, slew the poor and carried off the prosperous their lives dependent upon ransom payment.

Firing the city and leaving it in ruins, the bandits marched off with their prisoners to the mountains of eastern Shensi province.

NO YACHT RACE FOR CUP DEFENDERS YESTERDAY

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Races today in the elimination contests for the selection of the America's cup defender were sailed by the "rocking chair" fleet on the yacht club veranda. When the day was done, Yankee, the Boston candidate, had displaced both Harold S. Vanderbilt's Enterprise and Weetamore, the Morgan-Nichols entry, in popular estimation.

There was no actual sailing today. Weetamoe, Enterprise and Whirlwind were idle today with no contests. But Yankee went out for a ten-mile spin. While on a broad reach she was unofficially clocked at 14 miles in one hour. She used a mainsail belonging to Weetamoe.

CLAIMS HE WAS PUNCHED BY MAYOR OF CAMBRIDGE

The mayor, who yesterday "hung one" on the jaw of William R. McMenimen, street superintendent and former amateur boxer, after a wordy altercation in the executive's private office, today publicly shook hands with his late opponent.

Earlier in the day, McMenimen described what occurred behind the doors of Russell's office, saying:

"The mayor deliberately punched me for no cause whatsoever. I was stunned for a moment by his attitude. Then I said to him, 'I won't strike you back because I respect your office.'

"After he struck me, the mayor wanted me to sit down and talk things over but I said, 'No, you big bum' and I left the office and went about my business."

The mayor's version of what occurred prior to the moment when the men were separated was that the street superintendent had used vulgar language while a woman secretary was in the room.

The mayor said he had ordered McMenimen out but when the latter refused to move, he started to escort him to the door.

3 Bodies Found In Arctic After 33 Years

Swedish Balloonist Explorer Andree and Two Companions Found Dead in Camp

OSLO, Norway, Aug. 22—(AP)—Out of the Arctic [illegible] today came the grim last chapter of aviation's first North Pole [illegible], solving after 33 years the mystery of how Soloman August Andree, Swedish balloonist-explorer who set out in an airship, in 1897, for the top of the world, perished with his two companions.

A Norwegian scientific expedition, headed by Dr. S. Horn, today sent word to Oslo that its members had found the bodies of Andree and his mates in a camp of their making, on White island, far north of Rudolf land, northernmost in the Friedjof Nansen land Archipelago.

Andree's diary, his scientific instruments, a few scattered objects which evidently had been nuzzled by bears but left untouched, and the bodies of the explorers told the gruesome tale of a battle with the elements in which the tall, blond aeronaut had survived his fellows.

Identification was easy. The frozen bodies were well preserved. Only one had deteriorated, presumably because it lay sheltered in a small boat which had been part of the equipment of World's first dirigible. The others seemed as if the tragedy might have occurred only yesterday, instead of more than a generation ago.

Andree was accompanied on his trip by K. Frankel and N. Strindberg, the latter then a handsome youth of 24, professor in a Swedish university, engaged to be married but putting off his wedding until his return from this one last adventurous fling. The dispatches reaching Oslo did not readily identify the man whose body was found near that of Andree and described as well preserved.

Andree made his great Polar attempt from Danes island, Spitzbergen, July 11, 1897. In the previous year he had failed. He had launched the idea in 1895, thirty-one years before the epochal voyage of Amundsen and the "Norge" across the Pole. One of the aims of the Amundsen expedition was the possible discovery of Andree and his co-explorers.

The Multiplication Table.

Civilization is a multiplication table. It multiplies your brain with 20,000 brains. It multiplies the power of your hands by the power of tens of thousands of hands. Think of the space piled thick on space ... the machinery on machinery ... the workers at work with shuttles flying, engines thumping ... the cotton fields emptying into towels, the orchards emptying into cans—all so that this product and that can trickle down to you at last.

Multiply its speed in finding you, by reading the advertisements. Advertisements group the products so that a single flick of your hand on a page takes the place of miles of journeying to see this object and that.

Read The Bulletin advertisements today—every day. Advertisements offer you products that multiply the ease and pleasure of your days.

HOPEFUL OF CONTINUING INCOME TAX REDUCTION

President Hoover Optimistic After Conferences With Secretary Mellon and Under-Secretary Mills—Secretary Mellon Stated that the Stories Printed Relating to Revenue Prospects Overemphasized the Unfavorable Factors

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—(AP)—President Hoover after conferences with Secretary Mellon and Under-Secretary Mills today took a hopeful view that the emergency tax reduction applying this year may be continued next year.

Discussing the tax situation Mr. Hoover said:

"I have reviewed the present fiscal situation with Secretary Mellon and Under-Secretary Mills, and I can state that there is no ground now for the prediction in the press this morning that a deficit was impending which would prevent the continuation of tax reductions established last year.

"The indications of decreasing revenue and increasing expenses during the past six weeks upon which calculations were very properly based do not take several factors into account.

"Imports and consequently customs receipts have been temporarily reduced because of advanced imports to anticipate the new tariff law.

"We have been expediting construction expenditures to give the maximum employment in the first nine months of this fiscal year. The calculations as to possible deficits take no account of the receipts from payments on foreign debts, nor the revision of expenditures downward from the estimates of the first of last July, which were then placed at $4,203,000,000, (including the postal deficit).

"I have not as yet received the reports from all of the departments of the result of their drive for economies, but from the results already obtained in the departments that have reported, we have an indicated reduction of about $75,000,000 in expenditures.

"In such reductions it must be borne in mind that of the total estimated governmental expenditures, approximately $2,200,000,000 are for such fixed charges as interest and redemption of the public debt, payment of pensions, etc. No part of it can be reduced by administrative action. The field of economy is therefore limited to about $2,000,000,000, of which something like $400,000,000 are commitments for construction work of one kind or another which were increased and must be maintained in order to maintain employment."

UNFAVORABLE FACTORS OVEREMPHASIZED IN PRESS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—(AP)—Secretary Mellon today said "I have a very real hope" that the emergency tax reduction applying on this year's payments may be continued next year.

Mr. Mellon issued a formal statement today after a round of conferences at the white house and the treasury.

He said:

"The stories appearing in the morning papers relating to the revenue prospects for the current fiscal year overemphasized the unfavorable factors. It is altogether too early to make any definite statement. The final estimates need not be prepared until just prior to the meeting of congress in December, at which time the department will be in a much better position to determine the budgetary situation.

"The revenue during the fiscal year 1931 will be reduced as compared with that of the fiscal year 1930, but it should not be forgotten that we closed the latter year with a substantial surplus, while no one should definitely promise at this time that the one per cent tax reduction granted at the last session of congress can be maintained during the calendar year 1931, I can say that after a careful review of such figures as are available at this time I have a very real hope to make such a recommendation to the congress in December."

GERMAN AVIATOR MADE A FLIGHT TO IVIGTUT

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 22—(AP)—Captain Wolfgang Von Gronau, German aviator, and three companions, made a surprise flight today from Reykjavik, Iceland, to Ivigtut, at the southern tip of Greenland.

Their arrival this afternoon was reported by Greenland authorities and cleared up a great deal of confusion that had previously existed about their true destination.

Von Gronau, chief of the training school for commercial airplane pilots near Warnemuende, Germany, indicated last night in Reykjavik that he would return to Germany today.

But after starting from the harbor at 6:35 a. m. (2:35 a. m. E. S. T.) he sent a radio an hour and 35 minutes later that he was in 65:50 degrees latitude north and 26:20 degrees longitude west, well out on the route to Greenland.

The mystery of his flight began to clear up definitely when he wirelessed at 1 p. m. Iceland time (8 a. m. E. S. T.) That he was nearing Cape Farewell, Greenland, and bucking a heavy west wind.

This wind slowed the speed of his Dornier-Wal flying boat, and it was 3:30 p. m. Greenland local time (1:30 p. m. E. S. T.) before he alighted at Ivigtut.

The entire trip, of about 1,000 miles, over water nearly all the way, required about eleven hours of flying. Von Gronau was accompanied by an aviation student named Zimmer, a wireless operator named Albrecht and a mechanic named Franz Hack.

The further plans of the German airmen were not reported, but it was believed they intended to stay for two days at Ivigtut.

THOUSANDS OF PERSONS WITNESS PLANE CRASH

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 22—(AP)—An airplane crash occurred in full view of thousands assembled for the dedication of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Memorial bridge here today. Its two occupants were injured, one seriously.

While services in honor of the heroic dead were being held consecrating to them the new span at the rear of the capitol, the circling plane went into a nose dive, floundered helplessly and struck the roof of an old high school building within two blocks of the stand upon which stood Governor John S. Fisher and scores of prominent personages of the state and nation.

The pilot, Bernard Woutersz, a student flyer, was injured about the head. Miss Passenge, Morris Bowman, of New Holland, Pa., was critically injured.

WATERBURY DEMOCRATIC DELEGATES UNPLEDGED

WATERBURY, Aug. 22—(AP)—Delegates elected tonight to the democratic state convention, were unpledged. Mayor Frank Hayes will head the delegation and ex-Mayor Francis P. Guilfoile, ex-Mayor W. E. Thoms and Democratic Town Chairman John H. Crary will be included.

Local democrats appear cold to the boom for Dean Wilbur Cross, of New Haven, although they refuse to commit themselves. If ex-Mayor Thoms of this city, is a candidate he will have the support of the local delegation, but few expect that he will be. The local democratic leaders consider Committeeman McNeil's announcement of support of Dean Cross premature and expect that later developments may bring other candidates into the field.

SURRENDER OF LOCKE BROTHERS POSTPONED

NEW YORK, Aug. 22—(AP)—Federal Judge Burrows today postponed the surrender of John and Herbert Locke, brothers, and George Shurtleff, their brother-in-law, who face prison sentences for mail fraud.

Granting a defense motion he gave them three weeks to arrange their affairs before going to prison. The Lockes have been sentenced to three years each and Shurtleff to four years for fraud in the sale of Canario Copper stock.

The ceremony of presentation, witnessed by prominent members of the American and European bar, followed the unanimous election of Josiah Marvel of Wilmington, Del., as president.

J. Weston Allen, chairman of the award committee, told Mr. Root: "Your achievements for world peace have won the gratitude of your own country, Great Britain, France, and all the nations of the world." Mr. Root, secretary of state during the Roosevelt administration, spoke his appreciation of the gift and of the feeling that prompted its bestowal.

In making the presentation former Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg called Mr. Root America's most distinguished lawyer and statesman.

The executive committee selected Atlantic City, N. J., for the next convention city, the organization to meet September 16, 17, and 18.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22—(AP)—The republican congressional campaign committee designated today nine speakers who will be sent into Maine to urge the party cause before the state's election September 9.

MANCHESTER DEMOCRATS PROBABLY FOR DEAN CROSS

HARTFORD, Aug. 22—(AP)—Dr. Edward G. Dolan, of Manchester, democratic state central committeeman for the fourth district, today came out for former Dean Wilbur L. Cross, of the Yale Graduate school as the democratic gubernatorial nominee. The action of Dr. Dolan, who has had some mention himself as a likely candidate to head the ticket, presumably means that the 12 state convention delegates from Manchester as well as representatives of other fourth district towns, and perhaps others in Hartford county, will fall into line behind Bridgeport in supporting the Yale man. Dr. Dolan made it plain that he was not attempting to speak for deegates other than himself, but it is expected his following will join him in voting for Cross.

$30,000 SUIT AGAINST EAST HAMPTON BANK

EAST HAMPTON, Conn., Aug. 22—(AP)—The East Hampton Bank and Trust company; Milton L. Carpenter, its secretary, and Hubert Hodge, a director, today were named defendants in a $30,000 suit by Clark W. Burnham, former executive vice president of the institution.

The suit, returnable in the September term of superior court, arises from the recent arrest on a charge of embezzlement of Burnham, who resigned as vice president of the bank after officials had revealed a shortage in the institution's accounts. Burnham was later acquitted of the charge.

In the suit, the plaintiff charges that false testimony was maliciously given by the defendants in the case.

(Special to The Bulletin)

PAGEANT SUNDAY AT WILLIMANTIC CAMP GROUND

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC CAMP GROUND, Aug. 22—In addition to the outstanding services already scheduled, the president has secured a pageant with cast of 50 who will present "The Light of Truth" on Sunday evening, and preceding the regular service. All but three will be from Canterbury.

At 6:30 o'clock, the Canterbury orchestra will play in the tabernacle and at seven promptly the president will introduce H. E. Olcott of Hartford the author of the pageant who will conduct it personally.

The pageant opens with a conversation between a boy and girl of 1930 and closes with Columbia, marching to her throne attended by her train of ladies.

Rev John W. Lackey, pastor of the large Central Baptist church of Hartford, Conn., has made the following comment: The large congregation was enthusiastic and received the pageant with delight. I commend it to all pastors and churches in making our land free from rum."

Miss Pauline Mayo, the elocution teacher on the Ground, is winning much favor and interest. On Thursday evening she favored the audience with an interesting and humorous monologue describing a few moments in a photograph gallery when business seemed to be good. She gave this as a prelude to the debate on Prohibition.

The debate on the question "Can the Prohibition Law Be Enforced?" was conducted in the form of a dialogue conversation, the scene being in the office of a district attorney. Mr. Prettyman took the part of the district attorney and W. D. Pardee appears as a private citizen who complains bitterly that the law is not being enforced. The attorney affirms that it cannot be done and criticizes the law. Mr. Pardee shows the attorney that he has data and unrefuted proof that prohibition has done much for the country by way of improvement. But the attorney shows him that he and many of his kind by neglect of several duties of the ordinary citizen make the work of an attorney or other public official in any attempt to enforce it very difficult if not impossible. There were several points made by each that were sharp and sometimes humorous. The scene closes with Mr. Pardee acknowledging his neglect with a hearty promise to change his methods of action and they shake hands as the attorney also promises to act if he can get proper support.

The several classes Friday morning met at 8:15 and at 10 o'clock several of them choosing plans outdoors as most conducive to comfort.

"Faith of our Fathers" was the hymn used as the processional by the children's choir as they marched across the ground for the Chapel service at 9:15 in the Tabernacle. Dean Pennepacker was in charge and the address was given by the Rev. George S. Brown pastor at Mapleville and Glendale, R. I. His topic was "Paul's Shipwreck" as described in Acts 27. He said that one has courage when he has reserve strength which he believes to exceed that of his foe and one has fear when he believes himself weaker than the foe. The source of Paul's courage was his confidence in God and we will have courage to meet every emergency when we know that same confidence which Paul had.

The Holy Spirit.

Dr. Birney's subject at 11 o'clock was "The Holy Spirit and the Prayer Fellowship." In this address, he spoke of the intimate personal relationship, possible to the Christian soul, with God and with other consecrated souls. He said that the Holy Spirit is the distance God comes to reach us. Prayer represents the distance we must go to reach God. We are told to "Pray without ceasing" and we must remember that all life's principles are unceasing principles. In closing the speaker referred to the published story of a young man—a colored boy converted in the jungles of Africa known as "Sammy Morris." He made his way to one of our western colleges in an effort to fit himself to return to Africa and preach the Gospel to his fellow countrymen. He was partly through college when he died. But his life was so filled with God's Spirit that he breathed an atmosphere that touched many hearts. Since he died the memory of his life has led others to take up the work he laid down and probably thousands have been led to Christ because this colored boy from the African jungles gave the Holy Spirit the supreme place in his heart. The address left a profound spiritual influence which was deepened as Justin Lawrie sang in touching strains "Steal Away to Jesus" immediately following the address.

Lecture On Stage Fright.

At 1:30 p. m. Miss Mayo's class in public speaking was occupied with a lecture she gave on "Stage Fright" and a debate in which four speakers debated the question, "Resolved, that no logical reason remains why the Protestant church should not unite in one church." Each speaker was allowed 2 minutes and each side 1 1-2 minutes rebuttal.

A group picture of the camp meeting attendants was taken by a local photographer under the large pine tree at the entrance at 2:15, Friday.

To make this picture possible the afternoon service was postponed 15 minutes.

The afternoon service made prominent the idea of interdenominational fellowship. Prayer was offered by Rev. Dwight C. Stone, pastor of the Congregational church, at Hanover, and the scripture lesson was read by Rev. A. N. Foster, pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd (Universalist), at Norwich. Justin Lawrie sang, Chester Shields played a cornet solo, and the offering was received to piano music furnished by Miss Roberta Bitgood. Rev. C. E. Spaulding, D.D., of New London, gave the address of welcome to the visiting delegations. Mr. Stone brought the greetings of the Congregational denomination in a few well chosen words in which he expressed his appreciation of the helpful influence of the denomination in control of the Camp Meeting. Mr. Foster brought the greetings of the Universalist denomination referring to the former tendency to exalt in each denomination the distinctive feature of its own life but now reaching to a higher altitude of emphasis on the great Christian virtues which we all seek in common. He closed by urging increasing cooperation in reform movements and spoke his appreciation of the work of the Methodist denomination along these lines. Dr. David Pitt of the Central Baptist church of Norwich was introduced as the principal speaker. Dr. Pitt brought the greetings of the Baptist denomination and spoke of the similar spirit in common between his own and the Methodist denomination. He then spoke of present day Christianity. He felt that Christianity of the last 12 years had felt the evil influence of the late war. Our doctrine of the sacredness of personality suffers when our great nations are killing each other. Our doctrine of love cannot be preached effectively in a day poisoned with hate. He saw, however, signs of spiritual springtime and of new awakening and closed with a prophetic note in which he eloquently portrayed the nearness of a new day when the great triumphs will be in the realm of the spirit. Justin Lawrie sang touchingly in closing, "The Ninety and Nine".

An interesting game of quoits is reported from the playground in which Rev. J. Manley Shaw of Baltic and Harry Mackenzie of Mystic played against Rev. Kenneth Holmes of East Blackstone, Mass., and Dr. John R. Cheney of Middletown. The Shaw-MacKenzie team won by a score of 21 to 15.

Considerable hilarity prevailed at the breakfast table on a recent morning over a new necktie which one of the group was wearing. Just why that would cause merriment seemed a mystery but deep and profound minds seemed to find relaxation in the discussion until the climax was reached when the good natured wearer pulled off the tie and donated it to one of the gentler sex who seemed to admire it.

Another lady has won distinction in baseball at the playground. In the last game reported, Miss Roberta Bitgood of New London played in a team which won by a score of 15 to 10 against a former winning team.

The program for Saturday covers the demonstration of the Vacation school in the afternoon and the concert in the evening.

Sunday's preachers will be as follows: At 10:30 a. m., Rev. E. E. Wells, superintendent of the Providence district; at 2 p. m., Dr. G. H. Spencer, D.D., of Boston; at 7:30 p. m., Rev. G. H. Birney, D.D., of Cleveland, Ohio.

A dog roast for the children and young people at 5 p. m., Friday, was greatly enjoyed.

ASBESTOS POUCHES ADOPTED TO INSURE AIR MAIL'S SAFETY

WASHINGTON (AP)—New asbestos pouches are to guard air mail against hazards of fire.

The fireproof bags, developed by the postoffice department after several years of experiments, will be put into service by September 1 on the night run between New York and Chicago.

Each pouch is formed of asbestos, quilted with steel rivets to prevent disintegration in fire, and lined on both sides with canvas.

Air pockets, formed through the quilting arrangement, prevent intense heat from reaching contents of a pouch. A triple closing device prevents flames penetrating the neck of the bag.

The new bags, weighing nearly 15 pounds, are slightly larger than the pouches in service which weigh less than two and one-half pounds.

"Development of the pouches has not been actuated because of air mail losses by fire," said W. Irving Glover, second assistant postmaster general in charge of air mail service, "but rather to afford every safeguard against any destruction whatever of mail entrusted to the pilots."

In the fiscal year, ending June 30, 7,715,741 pounds of mail were flown, while 4,863 pounds were lost through fire.

REFUELED PLANE RECORDS GET OFFICIAL RECOGNITION

PARIS (AP)—Records made by airplanes in flight, a procedure initiated in the United States, are now recognized by the International Aeronautic Federation.

The federation has voted to consider such records, beginning July 1.

A year later the field will be open for straight-line refueled flights. Meantime search will be made for methods to determine mechanically whether or not planes land during such record flights.

For the present there will be two "refueling" records, duration and distance in a circuit.

EARLY BIRDS OF AIR TO FLY AGED "CRATES"

CHICAGO (AP)—"Early birds" of the air who were pushing ludicrous crates through the air when today's heroes were children will fly again in those historic craft.

One of the national air races events will be an exhibition by "early birds" in quaint pusher biplanes, flimsy monoplanes and motored box-kites.

The "early birds" organization is restricted to men and women who flew before 1916.

DANIELSON

DEMOCRATS START POLITICAL CAMPAIGN NEXT WEEK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Aug. 22—A caucus scheduled for Thursday evening, August 28, will mark the beginning of the fall campaign for the Killingly democratic forces. The purpose of the first political gathering this year, which will be to elect delegates to the state, congressional, county and senatorial conventions, to be held next month. Chairman A. J. Cavanaugh, of the town democratic committee and members of the committee, have already launched their work of campaigning for the state success of the party in the November elections.

It will be remembered that the democratic hopes nearly materialized two years ago when the party presented strong opposition to the incumbent republicans, by waging a closely contested fight in an effort to elect its candidates to seats in the legislature.

Delegates who are elected next Thursday evening at the town's first caucus will go to the various party conventions to assist in the formulating of the various tickets which will be presented on the date of the official opening of the campaign.

The excellent facilities for transportation between Boston and Danielson gives rise to the possibility that a Danielson group of ex-service men, members of the Leo J. L'Homme post American Legion, may attend the national convention of the organization which is to be held in Boston in October. Plans for such a trip were advanced at a meeting of the local post which was held Wednesday.

County Game Warden Thomas G. Daniels of Plainfield, said that ponds and other small bodies of water throughout the county have fell to unusually low marks for this season of the year. While the water levels have sagged to a seasonal low mark, the warden said that fish are in no immediate danger of extermination. Warden Daniels said that ponds in the western portions of the county evidence effects of the drought to a greater extent than do the lakes in the vicinity of Danielson.

Killingly is among the communities of New England, where large photographs of Oliver B. Garret, wanted by Boston police, are posted.

Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart resumed charge of affairs at the state police barracks on North Main street, this morning after a two weeks' vacation. With his return today he relieved Sergt. George L. Gardner, in command for the past two weeks, who begins his annual vacation today.

Harold A. Roberts was the speaker at a meeting of the local Rotary club, which was held last evening.

St. James parochial school will open this year for the fall semester on Wednesday morning, September 3, it was said today by a member of the faculty.

South Killingly, as was announced in this column a few days ago, is not the only community in the territory hereabouts to welcome back its real folks with an old home day celebration. Ekonk, too will celebrate with this form of pastime on Monday, September 1, which incidentally happens to fall on Labor day.

The popularity of Ekonk's old home day needs no mention here. As usual there will be the gathering of old friends, who will assemble at a seasonable hour in the morning and remain for the day. A basket lunch will be served at noon.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Choquette and Miss Albertine Choquette of Nelson, B. [illegible] and Mr and Mrs Richard Fawcett and son, Richard, Jr., of South Norwalk have been the guests this month of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Gorman of Danielson, who are summering at their cottage at Groton Long Point.

A number of local people interested in the forthcoming international cup races which will be held next month off Newport, have been to Groton this week to view the Shamrock V. ship with which Sir Thomas Lipton, Irish yachtsman hopes to lift the cup. The challenger, hope of Sir Thomas, has been in dry dock, undergoing repairs and its position affords spectators an unusually good view of the craft.

Mrs. Susie G. Williams, secretary of Quinebaug Pomona Grange No. 2, P. of H., was a member of the committee in charge of arrangements for the annual field day and outing of the society which was held yesterday at the Highland Lawn farm in Mansfield Hollow, with over 250 in attendence.

Town Dog Warden Charles E. Ayer of Dayville, is receiving few complaints this season known as "dog days," relative to mad dogs. Such instances like many other things common a decade ago, are fast becoming things of the past. Danielson's last mad dog scare came a couple of years ago, when a rabid canine traversed across the eastern part of the county attacking other dogs and rendering the situation so critical that the application of a dog quarantine was necessary.

Word came today that counterfeit money is in circulation in this section. On Wednesday a federal reserve note of a $20 denomination was stopped by a Putnam bank. The matter was immediately reported to police and warnings are being forwarded to bankers and business men to be on the lookout for the appearance of other spurious money which may have accompanied the one detected that the bank in Putnam.

PUTNAM

POMFRET MAN ADJUDGED NOT GUILTY DRUNKEN DRIVER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Aug. 22—James Spellman of Pomfret was presented in city court this morning before Judge M. H. Geissler, by State Officer R. V. Scranton of the Danielson barracks who charged him with having operated a motor vehicle last Saturday evening, while under the influence of liquor. Spellman, who is employed in Putnam, entered a plea of not guilty and after consideration the allegation was nolled.

Spellman is the first local driver to suffer the loss of his operator's license, under the recently enacted ruling of the motor vehicle commissioner, pertaining to the driving of a car while under the influence of liquor. His license was taken by Officer Scranton immediately after arrest. Under the new law, Spellman's permit to drive can be returned only through an act of the commissioner after he has made formal application requesting reinstatement.

An Associated Press dispatch from New Haven today, stated that four suits totaling $65,000 were filed in superior court in New Haven Wednesday against State Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald. The suits are the result of an automobile accident which occurred last January in Cheshire. Four plaintiffs are Thomas E. Cahill of New Haven and Celia Foster, who seek $25,000 each; May Foster who asks $10,000 and Mrs. Gertrude W. Fowler who petitions for damages of $5,000. While the suits are filed against Mr. Macdonald, they are in no way a personal matter, but are brought against him in his capacity as commissioner of the highway department. The plaintiffs charge that the commissioner was negligent in failing to maintain a guard rail at the side of the highway, where they were injured when a car driven by Cahill left the road and toppled into a ditch.

Since the New Haven railroad cut off the passenger service on the Southbridge and Webster branch by the gasoline-electric busses, scores of complaints and protests have been registered with the Webster and Southbridge business bureaus. In an effort to get a restoration of the only train service afforded either town, the representatives of each community are to meet in the municipal building in Webster on next Wednesday evening for the purpose of preparing a formal protest to be presented to the railroad. In addition to the letter of protest which will bear the signatures of the selectmen of Webster, Southbridge and Dudley, a petition which has been in circulation in the three towns since the removal of the trains, will be inclosed.

The Southbridge and Webster branch, links up the two towns and connects with main line trains of the Midland division of the New Haven, at East Thompson. By travel on the electric-gas coaches residents of Southbridge and Webster could connect with Boston and New York trains without the difficulty of securing bus tickets for other cities to get the trains. In the opinion of the leaders in each town each community has been virtually wiped off the map as a railroad ticket cannot be purchased for Southbridge, Webster or Dudley at any station in the country.

A Chevrolet sedan being driven by Mrs. Alice A. Kulz of 141 Greenwood avenue, Pawtucket, R. I., encountered considerable difficulty this morning when failing to round the beacon at the intersection of Providence and School streets crashed into the traffic regulator, smashed it to bits, and continuing its wild rampage, hurdled the curbing and laid low a heavy iron letter box on the corner of School and Providence street. The accident was witnessed by several people. The woman made no attempt to report the damage she had incurred, but continued on to Springfield after righting her car in the road. Captain of Police Dubreuil overtook the car on Woodstock avenue. Mrs. Kultz said that she had intended to report the mishap when she reached her destination. After instructing the officer to make repairs and direct a bill of costs to her home in Pawtucket, Captain Dubreuil allowed her to continue. In addition to damaging the municipal and government property, Mrs. Kultz managed to tear up a patch of the high school lawn when her car plunged across the street.

NO OCT. TOWN ELECTION IS TO BE HELD THIS YEAR

As all town officers were elected in 1929 for two-year terms, there will be no October election, but, according to indications, the November state elections, when Griswold will nominate four representatives to the general assembly, will furnish fireworks enough to make up for the town meeting shortage in October. The board of selectmen will make voters only once this year, and that will be in September.

Last year, preceding the fall election, less than a dozen names were on the list "to be made," the fewest for 10 years. In 1918, the list showed 125 names of those who desired to become voters.

HOW IT HELPS

From all parts of New England where the Save-a-Life campaign is being followed there are good results being obtained. The inspection of autos and the discovery of defective cars never indicates how many deaths or accidents are being prevented, but it is readily understood that excellent preventive work is being done when defective conditions are being disclosed and corrected.

How great the need of the inspections that are being made, and others of the same character periodically, is shown by the report from New Haven where only 209 cars out of a total of 1,871 were found last week to be mechanically perfect. That is a small percentage in view of what is demanded of automobiles and the dependence which is placed upon the machines responding under all conditions.

It is not probable that New Haven will find so low a percentage of fit cars during other weeks, and it is to be inferred that there were many of those in the majority whose condition was not very serious but if they are going to meet emergency conditions they need to be kept in proper mechanical order.

When it is understood that the chief difficulties with the defective machines were bad brakes and bad lights it can be appreciated what an important service is being rendered by endeavoring to bring all machines up to requirements. For the prevention of accidents and the proper control of a car good brakes are vital. For the safety of the highway at night, the protection of those in the machine on which they are located and those going in the opposite direction, adequate and correctly focused lights are necessary.

How few know when their cars are in perfect mechanical condition or insist upon keeping them that way, is reflected in an interesting manner by the New Haven record. How much better prepared, after correcting their troubles, the drivers of the deficient cars are going to be in meeting any emergency can be readily understood. With this same beneficial work being done throughout New England an invaluable contribution to highway safety should be the result.

WARNINGS

It would be interesting to know how many lives have been saved by giving heed to warnings and how many fatalities could have been prevented had warnings which were received been respected.

This is brought to mind by the recent disappearance of Van Lear Black from his yacht off the Jersey coast and for whose body aircraft and vessels searched in vain. Mr. Black was an immensely wealthy man. He was fond of flying and also yachting. He was considered to be one who respected the opinions of those in a position to know. While he did much traveling by airplane it is recognized that he depended largely upon the advice of others relative to the wisdom of such trips.

When it came to yachting it doesn't appear that he was quite so cautious. It was his custom to sit on the rail of the yacht. He considered it safe, apparently, but he had been repeatedly warned that it was dangerous. The warning was evidently overruled. He seemingly considered that he was able to take care of himself under such conditions and the supposition is, though no one knows, that he was following his practice of disregarding the warning when he was thrown overboard by the lurching of the yacht in rough water. If that is the solution he was not as able to take care of himself as he thought. He was in greater danger than he was willing to admit.

Many another has demonstrated the same thing in their refusal to accept and follow warnings. It is seen almost every day at railroad crossings where signals, signs, lights and watchmen are disregarded in the belief that the locomotive can be kept at a respectful distance. It is displayed all too frequently in connection with the various other warnings which are advanced in the interest of health and safety. There is a strong disposition to err on the wrong side when it would be just as easy and better to show a little more than the necessary regard for warnings. Those who defy warnings are in the position of the pitcher that went to the well once too often.

A SECOND CANAL

When a writer in a Panama City newspaper gives his opinion that there will be no Nicaragua canal, that there is no need of it and that the Panama canal will be adequate to take care of all the business for decades, it is possible to regard him as a bit biased. It looks very much as if he was working in the interests of the present canal by throwing cold water on the projected one.

No steps have been taken for the construction of the Nicaragua canal beyond getting the right to build it and naming engineers to make a study of the route and determine the advisability of enlarging the Panama canal to take care of increased traffic or to build the second canal.

The United States isn't disposed to slice up Central America by the construction of canals just for the sake of spending money. It recognized the possibilities of the Nicaragua route when the Panama canal was built. It has witnessed a steady growth in the use of the canal, which at the present time has certain limitations. With the time coming when it must either be made larger so as to take care of a greater volume of traffic or a new canal constructed, it is apparent that due study must be given to the problem. It is one for engineers to pass upon. If it is found advisable to spend the necessary money for the changes in the Panama canal it will probably be done. If it is considered that better preparations for the future would be made by making a somewhat larger appropriation for the construction of a second canal that can be expected.

It will not surprise us if there are plenty of advocates of both courses, and yet it is evident that it would be most unwise to undertake both. A second canal would insure relief, would open up new territory, shorten the route from one coast to the other of this country and provide all transportation requirements for an indefinite period in the future. To say that it will not be built and that all talk about constructing it is rubbish is quite as much without justification as a similar opinion would have been previous to the building of the Panama canal.

OILED STREETS

It is the view of Superintendent of Streets Bradley of Waterbury that that city has been saved an expenditure of from $25,000 to $50,000 this week because of the practice that prevails there, as in other cities, of oiling the streets.

He reaches this conclusion because of the manner in which the streets of that city resisted the effects of the heavy downpour which Waterbury experienced this week and he is able to see, in contrast to experiences of other years, where the damage would have been greatly increased had the streets not been protected by the oiled surfaces.

It will not be surprising if this view is upheld by street commissioners in other cities. It is certain that the oiling of streets not only serves to keep down the dust but provides a surface that holds the roadbed in much better condition than would otherwise be the case. It doesn't always furnish a complete contrast to those which fail to get any attention.

The benefits of oiling are more than temporary, especially when the heavier oil, like tarvia, is used. It is what helps to maintain the surface of many waterbound macadam roads and when the state gets to the construction of gravel roads it will be one way of keeping such roads in the best of condition. The importance of keeping the roadbeds from blowing away and at the same time providing a surface that will shed the water and prevent washing away cannot be too carefully provided for, and Waterbury isn't the only city where oiling has been found to be of marked benefit in connection with the maintenance of streets as well as public comfort.

THE RIGHT DECISION

Secretary of Labor Davis has taken the expected view in regard to the case of Bernt Balchen who, because of the time that he spent with the Byrd expedition in the Antarctic, was threatened with the loss of two years' time in getting his citizenship in the United States.

Secretary Davis recognizes the provisions of the naturalization law which requires an applicant to start all over again if he is out of the country for a year after taking out his first papers. He appreciates that Balchen was out of continental United States while he was with the Byrd expedition, but practically all the time he was on that trip he was working under the United States flag and actually on territory which is considered or will be claimed as belonging to this country.

He gives due consideration to the fact that the Balchen case differs decidedly from one where an applicant had spent two years, for instance, in Continental Europe and he informs the naturalization bureau that the trip to the Antarctic with the Byrd party should not be allowed to interfere in any way with the earliest possible admission of Balchen to citizenship in this country.

This is not the only instance in which broad constructions have been given to the naturalization laws, but it will meet with general approval in view of the circumstances. To do otherwise would simply mean the penalization of Balchen after he had participated in a most courageous and daring accomplishment which has won worldwide recognition. Balchen has demonstrated on more than one occasion that he is of the kind which this country seeks as new citizens and it was only to be expected that common sense would be used in meeting such technicality as was raised regarding his naturalization petition. Secretary Davis has done that.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Ability is not always gauged by publicity any more than power is proclaimed by noise. The shallow brook does more in the way of self-announcement than does either the Mississippi or the Amazon. There have been, and still are, great men in our American life who have not been successful in "blowing their own horn" simply because they have never tried. They have been willing to do their work in their own way and let it stand solely on its own merit. Very likely the pupils in the higher grades of our public schools have some vague knowledge of Horace Mann and what he did. But ask them about Henry Barnard and they would be as helpless as before the names of Sennacherib or Genghis Kahn. And yet Henry Barnard did more than any other man, except Horace Mann, in putting the public schools of America on a permanent foundation. He is really the father of the high school and the normal school. As university president, as United States commissioner of education, as editor of The Journal of Education and as author of six volumes on education, the quiet Henry Barnard is entitled to the lasting gratitude of the American people.

It has been said, probably on the authority of experience, that "it is an ill wind that blows nobody any good." Things that once were attended with perplexity in these days have at least a gleam of joy. For instance, in past days when we figured up our income how pitifully small it seemed! But now when every year it comes to exactly $1,999.99 there is some little satisfaction. If it amounted to $2,000.01, 4 per cent of surplus above $2,000 (if one is married) would go to Uncle Sam. Again, is legitimate expense such a nightmare as it once was? How it has grown since the income tax was born!

God bless the laddies in the enjoyment of the present golden hours which the future will not duplicate. This is far from saying that all the pleasures of life are packed into the 'teen period. It is my firm conviction based both on observation and experience that when the balance between the joys and sorrows of life is correctly struck, we shall see that the joys vastly outweigh the sorrows. I saw two lads the other day on a grocery team trying to knock off one another's caps. It didn't seem to trouble the old horse that was driving itself. People smiled, which seemed to say: "Go to it, boys, while you are young!" If two Presbyterian divines riding down Fifth avenue should try to knock off each other's silk hats, New York "would sit up and take notice." William R. Hearst would weep. His papers would have the headline: "How are the mighty fallen!" The lads won't always do it. They will face wives some day. Their daughters will clamor for Smith (I mean the college) and their boys for Harvard; they themselves will puzzle over their incomes, and they will then be mighty glad if they even have hair on their heads that hasn't been knocked off.

The man who gets no pleasure in this life, excepting that all the joys of existence are in store for him in some distant heaven, is going to get badly left—in my humble judgment. Our enjoyment hereafter is going to depend on two things: 1. By the capacity we have for enjoyment here. 2. By the use we have made of it. Going from this world to heaven is very much like going from high school to college—a graduation. The pupil who has done good, honest work in the preparatory school is going to get into college without conditions. College life is but an expansion of high school life. The heavenly life is nothing more than the present life expanded. We are now projecting ourselves into heaven; we are creating the trends that will mark our future existence. The person whose life here is grouchy and discordant would have the finits under the strains of celestial music.

New England has always sustained the reputation for its beautiful natural scenery. Nature has marked out the great Mississippi valley as the agricultural backbone of the country. And as no one section can comprise the sum total of all the excellencies, the people of New England have been pacified with scenic beauty. As this beauty is in great danger of being marred by gross commercialism she ought to insist more earnestly on preservation. New Hampshire sternly refuses by legislative action to have he wonderful granite hills defaced by painted advertisements. Other states have followed in the line of modern progress in the preservation of the grand and beautiful in nature. It makes one's artistic temperament writhe to see bits of landscape polluted by references to chewing gum, or, worse still, to the compound of bromide that slaughter natural scenery and the constitutions of women. Why should this state submit to such gross commercialisms?

Pope in the exquisite little poem, The Quiet Life, expresses what the majority of people feel, that they want rather the real comforts, than the expensive luxuries, of life. It is the golden mean between the palace and the hut that will satisfy most of us. It is a nice thing to have two homes, or rather a regular one and one that is supplemental, either at the seashore or the mountains. It does one good to get back to the shore where he has sojourned many years, and made lasting friendships. As we are more or less vain mortals, it makes us feel good under the ribs when we walk along the familiar streets for the first time in the season, to have people that we have long known come down from their verandas to greet us: "How good it seems to see you again A. B. Hope you are down for the season!" It is much pleasanter than to see them rush into the kitchen and say to the maid: "Mary, look out for the silver, I see that A. B. and his wife have come."

Boys, what are you going to read during vacation? The text book is now laid aside; the examinations are over, and you have lifted up your Caruso voices in the songs of graduation day. Many of you are too young to work at steady employment. Of course there will be some light work for you to do about home. You will also have time for all the play you need. But in the time that remains—and there will be enough of it—why not learn to read good books? I beg of you not to smother your minds with blood and thunder slush! There are entertaining books galore that are also useful. Read books that will teach you how to make things. Learn about steam engines, automobiles, airplanes, submarines and wireless telegraphy! Read the lives of men who have done things in the past. If you do this you will understand why Carlyle once said: "Blessings be on the head of Cadmus or whoever it was that invented books."

There are not so many imps on thrones today as formerly simply because so many thrones, crowns and sceptres have gone to the junk heap. But the imp is with us and is likely to remain during the present season at least. There is one imp as supremely powerful today as in the day of superstition which has not entirely passed away, and that is the imp whose name is Fear. His throne is a mighty one and he does more damage than the czar and kaiser united and boiled down. Some of our fears will very likely come to pass, while others, and by far the majority, are next door to the impossible. The student fears that he will not pass the examination; the soldier that he will not survive the battle; the laddie that he will get the "cold stony" gaze when he proposes the supremely important question. There may be the bare glint of reason back of these fears, but they are few compared with those of another stripe. I once knew a mother who feared that her baby, bitten by a mosquito, would die of blood poisoning. It may still be true that faith and "perfect love will cast out fear."

Monument Is Proposed to Gen. Lyon, Ashford Man Who Saved Missouri For the Union

It was 69 years ago this month, on Aug. 10, 1861, that Brig.-Gen. Nathaniel Lyon, a native of the town of Eastford, was killed in battle near Wilson's creek, Mo. In the history of his country, this eastern Connecticut man has a double distinction. He kept Missouri in the union; and in doing so he was the first general officer to make the supreme sacrifice for the preservation of the union.

Gen. Lyon's body now rests beneath a modest shaft just below Phoenixville; but there is a bill before congress calling for an appropriation of $30,000 to be devoted to erecting a suitable memorial in his memory. This sum, it is interesting to note, is just equal to the amount which the general bequeathed to the federal government for the defense of the union.

Gained Distinction in Mexican War

Nathaniel Lyon was born at Ashford on July 14, 1818. He was graduated at the United States military academy in 1841, assigned to the 2d infantry and served in Florida during the latter part of the Seminole war. In the war with Mexico he received the brevet of captain for gallantry.

While listening to the debates in congress over the Kansas-Nebraska bill his sympathies were engaged in behalf of the Negro, although he had been hitherto an earnest democrat. He was on duty in Kansas in 1859, and was with Gen. William S. Harney in December, 1860, when the governor of Missouri sent a brigade of militia to co-operate with the national troops in arresting James Montgomery. He was left by Harney at Fort Scott, but wished to be nearer the scene of the impending conflict, in which, he wrote on Jan. 27, 1861, "I certainly expect to expose, and very likely shall lose, my life."

In the beginning of February he was ordered to St. Louis while Governor Claiborne F. Jackson was promoting the organization of secessionist militia, and after he had placed the police of St. Louis under the control of Basil W. Duke, the leader of the minute men, and after the municipal election of April 1, 1861, had transferred the city government into the hands of secessionists, General Harney gave Lyon entire charge of the arsenal, arms and stores. Before the bombardment of Fort Sumter, Lyon had strengthened the fortifications and mounted heavy siege guns and mortars that commanded the city and its river approaches.

Rallies Illinois to the Defense

On the president's call for troops Governor Jackson prepared to plant batteries on the hills overlooking the arsenal. Lyon at once communicated with Governor Richard Yates, who, by the president's orders, sent three regiments of the Illinois quota to support the garrison in St. Louis. Lyon was at the same time commanded, according to his own suggestion, to turn over 10,000 stand of arms to the Illinois state authorities.

An order from Washington authorized Captain Lyon to issue 5,000 stand of arms for arming loyal citizens. Harney interfered to prevent the arming of volunteers, and ordered Lyon, who had placed guards in the streets in violation of the city ordinances, to withdraw his men within the arsenal, but for this was removed from the command of the department of April 21st.

On the same day Captain Lyon was ordered to muster into the service the four regiments, constituting Missouri's quota which the governor had refused to furnish. Without regard to seniority he assumed command on the departure of Harney, and from that time was recognized by the government as commanding the department.

On the night of April 26th he secretly sent away to Illinois all the munitions of war that were not needed for the four regiments, which were speedily organized and equipped. Although the removal of the arms from the arsenal frustrated the governor's object in ordering the militia into camp at St. Louis, it was decided to hold the encampment nevertheless. Daniel M. Frost's brigade, numbering now, after all the union men had withdrawn, about 700 men went into camp on May 6 in a grove in the western part of the city, which they called Camp Jackson.

Organized the Home Guards

Having been authorized by a despatch from the secretary of war, Lyon in May mustered in five regiments, called the home guards or United States reserve corps, in addition to five regiments of Missouro volunteers that had been organized in April. The volunteers were recruited almost entirely from the German population, as the native-born and the Irish were secessionists.

On May 10 he surrounded Camp Jackson and made prisoners of war of the entire corps of militia. In the camp were siege guns that Jefferson Davis had sent from New Orleans at the request of Governor Jackson. When Gen. Harney resumed command he approved the capture of Camp Jackson but refused to carry out Lyon's plan for immediate operations against the hostile forces that the governor was organizing in pursuance of an act of the legislature.

On May 31, in accordance with an order that Blair had obtained from the president, Lyon, who had been commissioned as brigadier-general of volunteers on May 17 and appointed to the command of a brigade of German recruits, relieved General Harney of the command of the department of the west. The governor and General Sterling Price, in an interview with General Lyon, sought to obtain from him a renewal of the agreement General Harney had made to respect the neutrality of the state; but Lyon insisted on the right of the United States government to enlist men in Missouri, and to move its troops within or across the state.

Takes the Offensive

Open hostilities followed. Lyon sent troops to the southwestern part of the state in order to meet an apprehended advance of Confederate troops from Arkansas, and to cut off the retreat of the governor and the state troops, while with another force he advanced on Jefferson City, of which he took possession on June 15, the state forces having evacuated it two days before, and then on the enemy's new headquarters at Booneville, where he routed Colonel John S. Marmaduke's force on June 17. His sudden movement placed him in command of the entire state except the southwestern corner.

On July 3d he left Booneville to continue the pursuit of Price; but when he learned that the Missourians had defeated Sigel at Carthage and effected a junction with the Confederate troops under General Ben McCulloch, he halted at Springfield to await re-enforcements. On learning that the Confederates were marching on his position, he advanced to meet them, although he supposed that they outnumbered his force four to one, but, after a skirmish at Dug Spring, he retreated to Springfield again when he found that their three columns had joined.

On August 9th, considering a retreat more hazardous than a battle, he decided to surprise the Confederates in their camp on Wilson's creek at daybreak the next morning. He turned their position and attacked their rear, while General Franz Sigel, at the head of another column, assailed their right flank. Sigel, after driving back the enemy, was defeated through mistaking one of their regiments for Iowa troops.

Dies Rallying the Line

Lyon, perceiving new troops coming to the support of Price, brought all his men to the front for a final effort. His horse was killed and he was wounded in the head and leg, but, mounting another horse, he dashed to the front to rally his wavering line, and was shot through the breast, expiring almost instantly. Major Samuel D. Sturgis, who was left in command, soon afterward ordered a retreat.

Of the 5,00 national troops 1,317 were killed, wounded or taken prisoner, while of the Confederates, who were 10,000 strong, 1,230 were killed or wounded.

The national forces fell back on Springfield in good order and retreated thence to Rolla, while General McCulloch, the Confederate commander, refused to pursue. Lyon's movement, though resulting in defeat, had enabled the union men in Missouri to organize a government and array the power of the state on the national side.

General Lyon bequeathed $30,000, constituting nearly his entire property, to the government to aid in the preservation of the union.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—The death in California of former Senator James Phelan of San Francisco ended the career of one of the very few democrats California has sent to the senate since the civil war.

He was the only California democrat to reach the senate in the last 30 years. His last party predecessor was Stephen White of Los Angeles, 1893-99; and the other three post-civil war democrats were George Hearst, father of William Randolph Hearst, 1886-91; Farley, 1875-85, and Casserly, 1869-73.

Early Democrats

Before the crisis of the '60's California was wholly represented by democrats in the senate. Even John C. Fremont, who later was to be the first presidential candidate of the new-born republican party, was a "free soil democrat" in the senate.

He was a Georgian by birth while his colleague of that original California senate pair of forty-niners, Gwin, was a Mississippian.

Gwin went with his state into the southern confederacy and later was connected with the Maximilian government in Mexico.

California's first republican senator was John Conness, 1863-69. Her next was Cornelius Cole, probably the longest-lived federal legislator of the whole lot, for he lived to be 102.

Three months before his 100th birthday he returned to Washington as a tourist and on June 26, 1922, addressed the house in recess, being introduced by "Uncle Joe" Cannon, a mere boy in years beside Cole.

And at 100, Cole still was looking eagerly toward an America waxing ever greater.

Thrice Mayor

Phelan's political career began in a mayoralty fight in San Francisco that made him mayor three terms. Until James Rolph came along to eclipse all known municipal records for holding the office of mayor, Phelan was the record-holder for the city of the Golden Gate.

And there have been many San Francisco senators. Of all the 28 California senators on the rolls, more than two-thirds were from San Francisco. Only three came from Los Angeles, White, Flint and Works.

Virtually the central part of the golden states always has held on to the senatorships.

Phelan loved to gather convivial folk about him in his home. When prohibition came, he was greatly concerned about how a man might move about with him legally acquired stocks of drinkables he might have.

He feared he told the senate while the Volstead act was in the making, that a senator, say, could do that only by providing a "senatorial container" as means of transport.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Reddy Fox Looks for Impy

Be patient, if you have the will;
You may perchance your stomach fill.
—Reddy Fox.

That which is unusual is a matter of news, and news always travels fast and far. This is just as true among the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows as in our own human world. Impy, the black Chipmunk, was unusual; he was very unusual. So, as soon as he showed himself outside the home and the secret was thus out, the news of it traveled fast. It reached the Old Pasture, where lives Reddy Fox.

"So Striped Chipmunk has a black-coated son," said Reddy. "If I had not had a black-coated son myself once, I would not have believed this. However, as I know that Red Foxes sometimes do have black coats, I see no reason why a Chipmunk should not have a black coat instead of a striped one. I must see this little fellow. He probably will be just as good eating as if he had a striped coat." Reddy looked at Mrs. Reddy and grinned when he said this.

"Do you think, my dear, that it is wise to be seen so near Farmer Brown's in broad daylight?" inquired Mrs. Reddy.

Reddy chuckled. "I propose to see and not be seen," said he. "I shall go over there when I know that Farmer Brown and Farmer Brown's Boy are not at home."

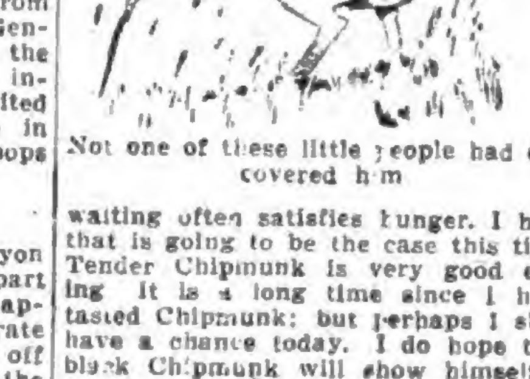
The very next morning Farmer Brown and Farmer Brown's Boy drove to the village. Reddy saw them go. At once he thought of Impy, the black Chipmunk, and started straight for the old stone wall along one side of the Old Orchard. He approached it from the end nearest the Green Forest. By keeping close to the old wall, along both sides of which grew bushes, he had no trouble in keeping out of sight from Farmer Brown's house. Of course, he didn't know exactly where Impy lived, but he did know that Striped Chipmunk was Impy's father and he felt sure that that would be the most likely place to find Impy.

Now, Reddy was rather fortunate. He had escaped the sharp eyes of all the feathered folk who live in the Old Orchard. Not one of these little people had discovered him. So there was no one to give warning that he was about. This was an excellent thing for Reddy. He had feared that Sammy Jay or some other sharp-eyed feathered person would see him and give the alarm. He knew that in that case all the Chipmunks within hearing would become very, very watchful and careful.

Reddy made his way along beside the old stone wall until he reached a place where some stones had fallen from the wall. A Chipmunk running along the old wall would have to jump down at this point; and that meant that there would be an excellent chance for a smart Fox.

"I'll wait right here behind one of these big stones," thought Reddy, and at once proceeded the largest of the stones. He was where he could watch the old stone wall in both directions.

"Patience does it," muttered Reddy. "If when I was young, I had not learned the value of patience, I should have gone hungry many more times than I have. There are times when you cannot go to things, but things may come to you. A little patient waiting often satisfies hunger. I hope that is going to be the case this time. Tender Chipmunk is very good eating. It is a long time since I have tasted Chipmunk; but perhaps I shall have a chance today. I do hope that black Chipmunk will show himself. I wonder if he is as black as they say he is."



Not one of these little people had discovered him

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

The Joy of Heart Service

Show me an effective Christian, and I will show you one whose whole heart is in love with Jesus, and with doing good. The will to serve the Master is at no loss to find the way; He is always abounding in the work of the Lord. His most loved task is telling others of the Saviour who means so much to him. No effort or sacrifice is too great to lead another to the Christ. No other effort brings such joy and peace. At the time of church service He consults his heart rather than the barometer and is storm-proof on prayer-meeting evening. The services of the church are a source of great joy and strength. If compelled to be absent by illness, it causes disappointment and a service of loss.

When the evening of the prayer meeting comes it often finds Him weary after a long day's work, but He says, "I can not afford to miss my Master tonight." So the thought of the spiritual strength and to be gained overcomes the physical weariness; and after the service He returns to His home refreshed and rested, rejoicing in the strength and inspiration always received by the communion with the Master and the fellowship with those who love and serve the same Master.

Martha is there after her domestic toils and Mary is sure to be there also, hungering for a word from her Lord, does a lover ever find a night too cold, too dark or too stormy for Him to venture out to see her whom He loves? So we, if we love our Saviour, count no effort too great, but glory in the privilege.

YOUR HEALTH

Hot Weather Psychology

By Seale Harris, M. D., Professor Emeritus of Medicine, University of Alabama, Birmingham, Alabama. (From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Today we continue our discussion of the value of certain psychology in hot weather.

Serenity adds to the joys of living in summer as at all times of the year. When one gets mad "he gets hot under the collar." This slang phrase is literally true, and anger, fear, or other emotional disturbance is depressing in hot weather. It is well not to talk hard times, however much poverty or stock market losses may pinch; but let the mind dwell on the pleasures of life, as the love of a devoted wife, or of a loyal husband and other relatives and friends, which overbalance any financial difficulty that one may have. Look forward to, and prepare, for the good times that always follow panics, without complaining of the hard luck, or the bad business judgment that brought on financial disaster. There are a thousand things that one can enjoy that do not cost money. Verily, "a merry heart doeth good like medicine" in the "good old summer time."

Sleep. It is perhaps more important to have sufficient sleep, or at least rest in bed more, during the summer than in winter. A mistake that many make in hot weather is in sitting up late at night when it is cool, and in arising too early in the morning, thus not getting sufficient sleep. Eight hours sleep, or at least that much rest in bed is needed for the adult, and nine hours is better during the summer. Even if one cannot sleep he should rest in bed, because after all, the difference between lying in bed awake and lying in bed asleep, is not so great as is generally supposed when one is getting physical rest.

A thirty minutes siesta, after the noon meal, during the summer, if it can be arranged without interfering with work, is most helpful. The French and the Germans take two hours off in the middle of the day, both in winter and summer and many of them get their siesta; and likewise in Latin-American countries two hours rest from business at the noon hour, with a siesta after dinner, is "an old Spanish custom" that may be followed with comfort during the summer by those who can arrange their daily regimen with that in view. Mothers and housekeepers and others who work long hours may adopt the two hour noon rest period with profit. Certainly sufficient sleep and rest in summer promotes the serenity which adds much to the enjoyment of the hot months of the year.

Stories That Recall Others

No Matter.

A friend of Betty's mother was visiting them one week-end and she and Betty became fast friends. One evening, on attempting to raise a window shade in her room the friend tore it completely in two.

Betty, noticing her dismay, remarked comfortingly: "Don't worry about that Alice, we're going to move soon, anyway."

"Yes."

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

Overemphasis of "Saving" at This Time Not Within the Meaning of True Thrift

By S. W. Straus,

President American Society for Thrift

There is a difference between "thrift" and "saving" and to overemphasize and exaggerate the importance of the latter just now is not within the meaning of true thrift.

It should be borne in mind that no man or woman can be considered thrifty who does not save money. This is a fundamental concerning which there can be no argument but to say that you are thrifty simply because you save money would be as ridiculous as to say that you have a fine home because you have built a good foundation for it.

Let us understand then that after we have saved our money we are by no means through with the obligation we owe to our own self-interest. We must study how to employ that money so that it will mean the most for us and we must study also how to improve our minds, conserve our physical strength master the tasks that lie before us, adapt ourselves to our surroundings, and, in short, keep ourselves ever moving along the pathway of progress.

Let us cease confounding "saving" and "thrift" because in so doing we are very apt to create a misleading impression. Save, yes; but when you have done that you have only begun to be thrifty.

This is particularly true just at this time when there may be a tendency on the part of some to lean over backwards in saving and thus interfere with the return of general business activity.

It is well to understand that the phrases "to save" and "to be thrifty" do not denote synonymous conditions. If they did mean the same thing, all that any of us would need do to make personal advancement would be to save our money. We should need give no thought to matters of health, the efficient employment of time, education, travel, recreation and various other points that must constantly be kept in mind by those who are truly thrifty.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut.

Sperry and Barnes Company, New Haven.

The Sperry and Barnes company located on Long wharf, represents the meat packing industry in New Haven, in fact the only large packing house in Connecticut. Their business goes back more than half a century as it was in 1869 that the company was organized.

Mr. Sperry brought with him the secret formula from his grandfather's farm in Bethany, where hams and bacon had been cured in a different and better manner since 1844.

The same method of curing and smoking meats is still used; of course, modern methods have made the handling of the products more efficient, but on the whole they are just as good as ever.

The slogan "Taste the Difference" applies to all Sperry and Barnes products, but especially to New England dressed fresh pork. The porkers used by Sperry and Barnes are raised in the great corn belt of the middlewest, carried here by train loads, fed and watered on the way, dressed right here and delivered to the dealer within 24 hours afterward.

A full line of delicatessen, pickled and salt pork, lard, and fancy products in glass and tin are also manufactured at this plant, which is a model in cleanliness and efficiency. You are invited to visit the plant at any time to see just how your pork products are prepared.

POETRY

I Am the Mountainy Singer

I am the mountainy singer—
The voice of the peasant's dream,
The cry of the wind on the wooded hill,
The leap of the fish in the stream.

Quiet and love I sing—
The carn on the mountain crest,
The cailin in her lover's arms,
The child at its mother's breast.

Beauty and peace I sing—
The fire on the open hearth,
The cailleach spinning at her wheel,
The plough in the broken earth.

Travail and pain I sing—
The bride on the childing bed,
The dark man laboring at his rhymes
The ewe in the lambing shed.

Sorrow and death I sing—
The canker come on the corn,
The fisher lost in the mountain loch,
The cry at the mouth of morn.

No other life I sing—
For I am sprung of the stock
That broke the hilly land for bread,
And built the nest in the rock.
—Joseph Campbell.

Middle O' The Road

Middle of the road I've always traveled;
It sho' seems safer to me.
I never had no dream
Of either extreme—
All I ask is jes' me be.
All I want is right
To farm that land.
An' I sho' kin do it
To beat the band.

Middle o' the road an' take it easy
Ain't no use fo' to strain.
It's a long hard time
Ef you' want to climb
Ambition's a ladder o' [illegible]
So I'll jes' keep up
Like I've allers done,
An' take my share
O' sorrow an' fun.

Peshawar In Peace Times.

Peshawar, frontier city of India, ward by the mouth of the world-famous Khyber Pass, where British forces have been attacked by large groups of half-wild Afridis, is the subject of a communication to the National Geographic society from Maynard Owen Williams. Describing the town in peace times, Mr. Williams writes:

"Peshawar, like many another city in India, is a combination of native city and cantonment—the former closely packed and interesting, the latter widely sprawled and as deadly dull to the casual visitor as the outside of an exclusive club.

"There is tennis on excellent courts, sensational polo by military men mounted on splendid ponies, with white-leggined grooms lined up behind the goals, and the side lines a sandwich of attractive Europeans wedged in between the less attractive and more interesting natives, to whom polo seems aristocratic and exotic, although this most ancient of hockey games came overland from Persia through Turkestan hundreds of years ago and was played in India long before the English, smashing the Spanish Armada which barred the water-gate to the opulent east, founded the East India company.

"The cantonment is the place where the visitor sleeps and eats, and where he obtains permission to traverse the Khyber Pass, that gash in the barren hills through which the central Asian commerce ebbs and flows. But for interest he drives or, better, plods along the two-mile dusty road which leads to the native city, composed, like its central Asian counterparts, of mud walls and mud houses, with an added story, which is often nothing more than a wattle fence plastered with mud, on the roof. Here live the women-folk, and hither the natives climb when the hot breathlessness of the dark rooms below drives them to a summer refuge beneath the stars.

"Peshawar's streets are always of interest. One's eyes are entranced by rich carpets from Bokhara and Mery and Afghanistan, bright copper trays, the high color of geometrically piled fruit, the white veils, shaped like collapsed circular tents, beneath which the Moslem women seem struggling to extricate themselves; the Navajo savagery of the painted pottery and the silken sheen of the bright-colored lungis, which bound round a pointed red or gold skull-cap, transform ordinary-looking Punjabis or Pathans into supermen.

"The turbans of India, like the sheepskin shakos of Turkestan and the sombrero of the cowboy west, are magical headgear which make heroic figures of commonplace men. After these sturdy men of the frontier hills, the fat Bengali will be a comic figure.

"The grain market in Peshawar is like the one in Samarkand, although it has less color. The beautiful lungis, or turbans, of soft tones, with bright bands of a contrasting hue across the free end, alternate with solid-colored ones of yellow, lemon, pink or white. The coats still reveal much of the khaki of war times, although many a Pathan wears a foreign-style vest over a long white shirt hanging outside full trousers, which are gathered up on the inside of the leg so that they hang in concentric folds looped downward from the knee."

VALUE OF SCOUT TRAINING TOLD EXECUTIVE IN LETTER

In a letter received recently by Scout Executive John L. Sellman, from Bob Davis, of New York, the latter relates a true story of the value of Boy Scout training. Last spring Mr. Davis says, in the cabin of a tugboat tied up to a dock at the entrance of the Oregon inlet, Pamlico bay, North Carolina, a group of serious-faced individuals were discussing, without much progress, the best emergency treatment for a man who was stretched on the cabin floor suffering from an internally shattered knee swelling rapidly under the pressure of arterial blood. In the midst of the profoundly ignorant clinic there suddenly stepped an alert, sun-burned young man in his early twenties. He began to ask direct questions, examined the limb and swiftly came to a decision.

"Gentlemen," said he, "a subcutaneous rupture accompanied by hemorrhage calls for either a hot or cold compress, preferably the latter. Liniments, bandages, massage and alcoholic stimulants are worthless. Give me all the ice you have in the refrigerator and I will apply ice packs every half hour until we can get to a surgeon. This is a bad rupture. Surply me with a piece of sheet rubber and I'll make an ice pack."

About 4 o'clock the next morning, forty hours after the accident, a surgeon in a New York hospital ran his hand over the surface of the ruptured knee, swollen and purple with congestion. "How did you keep that cool?" he asked. "Ice pack, applied by a Boy Scout," replied the patient. "Umph," mumbled the surgeon. "Boy Scout, did you say? You'll know some day what he's done for you. I will operate immediately."

Two weeks later the patient, propped up on a cot, after having just escaped the loss of his left leg above the knee, received a visit from the Scout. Nothing could possibly have been more dramatic. The youthful minister of first aid, buoyant and vibrating, offered his hand. The former patient was quite serious. "You are not aware of it," said he, pressing the young palm tightly, "but your ice-pack treatment saved my leg from amputation."

For the information of those readers who have a penchant for names, dates and place, said Mr. Davis, mine was the knee that was kept chilled until I could reach a surgeon, and Edrington Penn, 775 Park avenue, New York, was the Boy Scout who prescribed the treatment, made the ice pack and stood by like the soldier that he is.

NEW HAVEN ROAD CUTS NUMBER OF LOCOMOTIVES

Among the numerous items pointing definitely to the increased efficiency of railroad operation on the New Haven railroad's system during the decade of 1920-1930 is the fact that the number of locomotives, both steam and electric, required in passenger and freight service during that ten years has been reduced by more than one-third and also the fact that the number of engine houses required to service the locomotives has been reduced by almost thirty per cent.

In 1920, although carrying a considerably less volume of freight and passenger traffic, the New Haven system required the use of 1,018 locomotives of all types. This number has today been reduced to 670, a definite proof that the modern locomotive, due to improved modern facilities, is spending more time on the road and far less time in the engine house undergoing repairs. Within this same period, the number of engine houses has been cut from 78 to 55, the smaller, less efficient houses having been eliminated and improved servicing stations having been created.

Exclusive of the many important factors relating to the design of buildings, the engine house development has related principally to the introduction of devices and methods for the economical and expeditious handling of locomotives. Water treating plants, boiler washing equipment, turntables, coal and ash handling equipment have also been improved. Especially important has been the great improvement of engine house and yard lighting equipment.

DRIVE IN GROTON TO COLLECT TAXES

By means of the alias tax warrant, unpaid taxes of long standing are being collected in Groton, and within the last few weeks hundreds of dollars have been turned into the town treasury. Tax Collector Carlos W. Allyn being assisted in his efforts by William Smith of the municipal tax division of the state tax department.

The tax books of Groton with its many taxing districts have been in a bad condition for years, and no definite plan had been made for the collection of the taxes, many of them having been unpaid for twenty years or more. Mr. Smith has been in Groton several times for conferences with the tax collector and to offer suggestions as to the best methods to be employed in the collection of these taxes.

The sixteen taxing districts of the town present a real problem in checking back to ascertain just what taxes have been paid and what taxes as yet remain unpaid. To do this properly, it is understood, the town officials may have to provide adequate clerical assistance for the tax collector to check back on the books of the various collectors for the several districts and prepare tax bills covering a period of years, indicating on the bills which particular assessments have not been paid.

The situation in Groton is considered serious from a tax collection viewpoint and Groton residents have requested State Tax Commissioner William H. Blodgett to take some action to bring about the collection of back taxes. Mr. Blodgett is proceeding with the apparent object in mind of aiding the town to work out its own salvation. Meanwhile the town is seething because of the efforts being made to collect the taxes, some of the more persistent offenders in the non-payment of taxes being prominent residents, and they consider the efforts made to collect the taxes more or less a personal affront.

MAYS DECISIVELY OUTPOINTS RICHARDS IN NEW LONDON BOUT

NEW LONDON, Aug. 22—Before a crowd of 1400 Bobby Mays, state lightweight champion, decisively outpointed Phil Richards of London, England, in the main bout of the first card of the recently organized Thames Arena Boxing club at the arena here tonight. Richards showed well in the early rounds of the bout and at the end of the fourth was leading on points. After the fourth Mays opened with a right hand jab that sat Richards on his heels time and again and from then on the local boy piled up sufficient points to decisively win the victory.

In the semi-final Al Gillette of New Bedford won a very unpopular verdict over Al Mathews of New York in eight rounds. To the customers there was no doubt that Mathews was far ahead on points at the end of the session.

Billy Eule of Westerly took the verdict over Jimmy Kearns of New York in a slam-bang bout that had the fans in an uproar. Eule weighed 141 and Kearns tipped the scares at the same figure.

Jimmy Quinn of Norwich jabbed out a decision over Buster Ellis of New Bedford in four rounds. Quinn looked better than he has in some time and hit with considerably more power.

In the last minute of a slugging match between Young Lizzio of Westerly and Johnny Bedell of New London the Westerly boy slipped over a knockout. The fight had been on even terms up to the last minute when Lizzio found his opening.

THANKSGIVING

Thanksgiving dinner tomorrow with Violet; Edward Thorpe smiled, a rueful, cynical smile. At last he was at the eve of this great day—the day on which, his bank accounted swelled by recent earnings in the stock market, he was to have asked Violet Manning to give up her position and marry him. Alas, how different this Thanksgiving dinner was to be—how utterly different from his expectations. Thanksgiving? Empty word. What had he to be thankful for?

For the last year, bit by bit, as he accumulated the savings, he had bought stocks and had joyously watched them rise until he apparently had more than sufficient to provide a nice home for Violet. Day by day he had watched the fluctuations of the market and always he was the winner. He had spent all his noon hours at his broker's office studying the ticker and as his stocks showed increasing profits his anticipation of all he expected to do with his earnings increased proportionately.

They would have an apartment on the drive and a maid and an automobile. And instead of taking dictation all day long Violet would drive her own car and spend her days in happy shopping trips and bridge parties. Edward had fallen in love with Violet almost the moment they met in Mr. Fernald's office, where she was private secretary. Edward, who had charge of the company's suburban office, had been summoned by Mr. Fernald one morning and appointed assistant regional supervisor, with offices downtown. It was a fine promotion, but much as Edward had looked forward to an adequate increase in pay, it had not been forthcoming.

And then he had discovered in the stock market a way to earn the extra money that he needed in order to ask Violet the all-important question.

Edward had been paralyzed by the big crash in the market. So this was the bitter end of all his dreams? For days Edward went about in a sort of daze. He felt crushed, as though life held no promise for him. And now tomorrow, Thanksgiving day, the day he had selected as most appropriate of all the days of the year to ask Violet to marry him, was to prove the most unhappy of his life. He would meet her, they would have dinner together, just as on so many occasions, and then they would part and it would all be over.

Edward met Violet at 6 next evening and took her to the little restaurant where they frequently dined for the special Thanksgiving feast. Violet was radiantly lovely. And her eyes! How they danced as she looked at him, as though she expected any minute to hear the words he would never utter. And then:

"Edward!" she burst out as soon as they were seated at the little table in the soft glow of the rose-shaded lamp. "This Thanksgiving day is the most marvelous one of my life!" Edward nodded, his thoughts far away.

"I could hardly wait to tell you the exciting news," she went on a trifle breathlessly. "I've been just aching to tell you all the way down here. I'm as happy over it as though it actually concerned me—you certainly are a fortunate boy." Edward looked at her questioningly. Whatever was on her mind? Could she possibly not have heard that he was wiped out—penniless?

"The regional supervisor has been transferred and you are to have his place——"

"What?" Edward almost screamed. "Where did you hear that?"

"Keep calm," said Violet, laughing, "and I'll tell you everything. Mr. Fernald dictated a letter to me at 5 o'clock last night summoning you to the office tomorrow. And Edward, guess what he said."

"Tell me," Edward begged. "You can't know what it means to me—to us."

"He said," quoted Violet: "'Now that young Thorpe's got his mind off the stock market he'll be able to think more sanely about his work again. He's been no good for the last year, constantly running to his broker's and watching the stock ticker. He's lost his money and we've won a darn good executive. From now on he'll get double his former salary.'"

Edward's eyes were misty as he looked straight into Violet's dancing ones.

"My darling," he said softly, "please say we can enjoy this good fortune together?" And as Violet nodded an eager consent he murmured, "And I thought I was the one person in the world to whom Thanksgiving day didn't mean a thing."—Chicago News.

U. S. FARM MACHINES ADOPTED IN FRANCE

PARIS (P)—At last the French farmer has hung up his scythe in favor of the American mode of cutting grain.

Wheat "lots," far smaller than the vast tracts cultivated in the United States, now are being cut by American harvesting machines. Small towns in French wheat sectors have binders used by the entire population.

For years the French farmer has preferred his time-worn, rusty scythe to modern harvesting machinery.

EDITOR WHITE'S SON WINS NOMINATION "ON HIS OWN"

EMPORIA, Kas. (P)—"Young Bill" White, 30 years old and not so long out of Harvard, has set a precedent for the William Allen White family by launching a political career.

And he was successful in his first start despite the fact nothing favorable to his candidacy appeared in the Emporia Gazette, his father's famous newspaper, of which he is associate editor.

"Young Bill" defeated W. A. Gladfelter, Kansas master farmer and president of the Lyons County Farm bureau, in the race for nomination as state representative from the east side of Lyons county on the republican ticket.

In November he will be opposed at the polls by T. R. Evans, democratic candidate. Lyons county is strongly republican.

Six years ago "Young Bill's" father was a candidate for governor on an independent ticket in the general election.

William Allen White did not contemplate a political career, however, and he didn't want the job, his candidacy being merely a protest against the Ku Klux Klan, which then was strong in Kansas. He was beaten by Ben S. Paulen of Fredonia.

When "Young Bill" announced his campaign he hoped he would be unopposed. When opposition developed, however, he made a spirited fight for the nomination, part of which was a house to house canvass.

Young White—who signs his letters W. L. White—attended the Emporia schools, graduating from high school in 1918. He was a student at the University of Kansas for one year and then went to Harvard, where he received an A. B. degree.

He has held nearly every job on the Gazette from carrierboy on up and January 1, 1928, became associate editor. He is unmarried.

CAROLINA FARMERS FIND RELIEF IN CREDIT UNIONS

RALEIGH, N. C. (P)—North Carolina farmers are not depending on the government for their farm relief.

They are setting up individual financial organizations under a law passed 15 years ago by the state legislature, providing for the establishment of savings and loan associations or credit unions, similar to those in operation in Europe for nearly a century.

Fifty-eight credit unions are now in operation in 26 counties, and more applications have been received for permits to organize in the last 60 days than in the history of the credit union in America.

The credit union is operated under the supervision of the department of agriculture and is similar to the building and loan association. Members control and operate the union themselves.

RARE SWEET POTATO SEED MAY HELP IMPROVE PLANT

WASHINGTON— (P) —Bigger and better sweet potatoes may have been made possible by the government's acquisition of seed for experimental breeding.

Rarely, except in tropical and subtropical regions, does the sweet potato produce viable seed. It is propagated in the United States by draws or slips, the seed-producing habits having disappeared before the plant was adopted for cultivation.

Seeds for the experiments were obtained in Hawaii and the Virgin Islands. In one generation of breeding vast changes in type may take place whereas only slight changes can be made in many decades through selection and vegetative reproduction.

HONEY CO-OP IN FLORIDA SEEKS BIGGER PRODUCTION

TAMPA, Fla.—(P)—One hundred and fifty tons of honey has been set as the production goal for this year by Florida beekeepers, who have formed a cooperative marketing association.

In addition to providing better marketing facilities for the honey crop, efforts are being directed toward improvement of the product.

Tupelo and gallberry honey are almost the only kinds produced in the state that contain enough levulose sugar to prevent granulation. It is believed that by mixing these varities with the orange and other honeys that granulation my be prevented.

SHEEP NOW TRUCKED TO PASTURES IN WEST

SPOKANE, Wash.—(P)—The spectacle of highways filled with sheep being trailed to pastures may be passing in the west.

Many Washington flockmasters are experimenting with truck transportation, as new roads now pierce much of the timber country.

If the experiment is successful, motor transportation may be used to take millions of sheep to high, timbered ranges. Sheep flockmasters say hauling by truck to terminal points would reduce the present loss of lambs en route.

Sugar Production Above Average

BATON ROUGE, La.—(P)—With a sugar cane crop 74 per cent of normal August 1, Louisiana has an indicated production of 183,482 short tons of sugar in 1930. This will be about 10,000 tons below the 1929 crop, but 27,000 tons above the average for ten years.

Peshawar in Peace Times.

Peshawar, frontier city of India, hard by the mouth of the world-famous Khyber Pass, where British forces have been attacked by large groups of half-wild Afridis, is the subject of a communication to the National Geographic society from Maynard Owen Williams, Describing the town in peace times, Mr. Williams writes:

"Peshawar, like many another city in India, is a combination of native city and cantonment—the former closely packed and interesting, the latter widely sprawled and as deadly dull to the casual visitor as the outside of an exclusive club.

"There is tennis on excellent courts, sensational polo by military men mounted on splendid ponies, with white-legginged grooms lined up behind the goals, and the side lines a sandwich of attractive Europeans wedged in between the less attractive and more interesting natives, to whom polo seems aristocratic and exotic, although this most ancient of hockey games came overland from Persia through Turkestan hundreds of years ago and was played in India long before the English, smashing the Spanish Armada which barred the water-gate to the opulent east, founded the East India company.

"The cantonment is the place where the visitor sleeps and eats, and where he obtains permission to traverse the Khyber Pass, that gash in the barren hills through which the central Asian commerce ebbs and flows. But for interest he drives or, better, plods along the two-mile dusty road which leads to the native city, composed, like its central Asian counterparts, of mud walls and mud houses, with an added story, which is often nothing more than a wattle fence plastered with mud, on the roof. Here live the women-folk, and hither the natives climb when the hot breathlessness of the dark rooms below drives them to a summer refuge beneath the stars.

"Peshawar's streets are always of interest. One's eyes are entranced by rich carpets from Bokhara and Mery and Afghanistan, bright copper trays, the high color of geometrically piled fruit, the white veils, shaped like collapsed circular tents, beneath which the Moslem women seem struggling to extricate themselves; the Navajo savagery of the painted pottery and the silken sheen of the bright-colored lungis, which bound round a pointed red or gold skull-cap, transform ordinary-looking Punjabis or Pathans into supermen.

"The turbans of India, like the sheepskin shakos of Turkestan and the sombrero of the cowboy west, are magical headgear which make heroic figures of commonplace men. After these sturdy men of the frontier hills, the fat Bengali will be a comic figure.

"The grain market in Peshawar is like the one in Samarkand, although it has less color. The beautiful lungis, or turbans, of soft tones, with bright bands of a contrasting hue across the free end, alternate with solid-colored ones of yellow, lemon, pink or white. The coats still reveal much of the khaki of war times, although many a Pathan wears a foreign-style vest over a long white shirt hanging outside full trousers, which are gathered up on the inside of the leg so that they hang in concentric folds looped downward from the knee."

VALUE OF SCOUT TRAINING TOLD EXECUTIVE IN LETTER

In a letter received recently by Scout Executive John L. Sellman, from Bob Davis, of New York, the latter relates a true story of the value of Boy Scout training. Last spring Mr. Davis says, in the cabin of a tugboat tied up to a dock at the entrance of the Oregon inlet, Pamlico bay, North Carolina, a group of serious-faced individuals were discussing, without much progress, the best emergency treatment for a man who was stretched on the cabin floor suffering from an internally shattered knee swelling rapidly under the pressure of arterial blood. In the midst of the profoundly ignorant clinic there suddenly stepped an alert, sun-burned young man in his early twenties. He began to ask direct questions, examined the limb and swiftly came to a decision.

"Gentlemen," said he, "a subcutaneous rupture accompanied by hemorrhage calls for either a hot or cold compress, preferably the latter. Liniments, bandages, massage and alcoholic stimulants are worthless. Give me all the ice you have in the refrigerator and I will apply ice packs every half hour until we can get to to a surgeon. This is a bad rupture. Supply me with a piece of sheet rubber and I'll make an ice pack."

About 8 o'clock the next morning, forty hours after the accident, a surgeon in a New York hospital ran his hand over the surface of the ruptured knee, swollen and purple with congestion. "How did you keep that cool?" he asked. "Ice pack, applied by a Boy Scout," replied the patient. "Umph," mumbled the surgeon. "Boy Scout, did you say? Youll know some day what he's done for you. I will operate immediately."

Two weeks later the patient, propped up on a cot, after having just escaped the loss of his left leg above the knee, received a visit from the Scout. Nothing could possibly have been more dramatic. The youthful minister of first aid, buoyant and vibrating, offered his hand. The former patient was quite serious. "You are not aware of it," said he, pressing the young palm tightly, "but your ice-pack treatment saved my leg from amputation."

For the information of those readers who have a penchant for names, dates and place, said Mr. Davis, mine was the knee that was kept chilled until I could reach a surgeon, and Edrinton Penn, 275 Park avenue, New York, was the Boy Scout who prescribed the treatment, made the ice pack and stood by like the soldier that he is.

NEW HAVEN ROAD CUTS NUMBER OF LOCOMOTIVES

Among the numerous items pointing definitely to the increased efficiency of railroad operation on the New Haven railroad's system during the decade of 1920-1930 is the fact that the number of locomotives, both steam and electric, required in passenger and freight service during that ten years has been reduced by more than one-third and also the fact that the number of engine houses required to service the locomotives has been reduced by almost thirty per cent.

In 1920, although carrying a considerably less volume of freight and passenger traffic, the New Haven system required the use of 1,018 locomtives of all types. This number has today been reduced to 670, a definite proof that the modern locomotive, due to improved modern facilities, is spending more time on the road and far less time in the engine house undergoing repairs. Within this same period, the number of engine houses has been cut from 78 to 55, the smaller, less efficient houses having been eliminated and improved servicing stations having been created.

Exclusive of the many important factors relating to the design of buildings, the engine house development has related principally to the introduction of devices and methods for the economical and expeditious handling of locomotives. Water treating plants, boiler washing equipment, turntables, coal and ash handling equipment have also been improved. Especially important has been the great improvement of engine house and yard lighting equipment.

DRIVE IN GROTON TO COLLECT TAXES

By means of the alias tax warrant, unpaid taxes of long standing are being collected in Groton, and within the last few weeks hundreds of dollars have been turned into the town treasury, Tax Collector Carlos W. Allyn being assisted in his efforts by Wm. Smith of the municipal tax division of the state tax department.

The tax books of Groton with its many taxing districts have been in a bad condition for years, and no definite plan had been made for the collection of the taxes, many of them having been unpaid for twenty years or more. Mr. Smith has been in Groton on several times for conferences with the tax collector and to offer suggestions as to the best methods to be employed in the collection of these taxes.

The sixteen taxing districts of the town present a real problem in checking back to ascertain just what taxes have been paid and what taxes as yet remain unpaid. To do this properly, it is understood, the town officials may have to provide adequate clerical assistance for the tax collector to check back on the books of the various collectors for the several districts and prepare tax bills covering a period of years, indicating on the bills which particular assessments have not been paid.

The situation in Groton is considered serious from a tax collection viewpoint and Groton residents have requested State Tax Commissioner William H. Blodgett to take some action to bring about the collection of back taxes. Mr. Blodgett it proceeding with the apparent object in mind of aiding the town to work out its own salvation. Meanwhile the town is seething because of the efforts being made to collect the taxes, some of the more persistent offenders in the non-payment of taxes being prominent residents, and they consider the efforts made to collect the taxes more or less a personal affront

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 22—Before a crowd of 1400 Bobby Mays, state lightweight champion, decisively outpointed Phil Richards of London, England, in the main bout of the first card of the recently organized Thames Arena Boxing club at the arena here tonight. After the fourth Mays opened with a right hand jab that set Richards on his heels time and again and from then on the local boy piled up sufficient points to decisively win the victory.

In the semi-final Al Gillette of New Bedford won a very unpopular verdict over Al Mathews of New York in eight rounds. To the customers there was no doubt that Mathews was far ahead on points at the end of the session.

Jimmy Quinn of Norwich jabbed out a decision over Buster Ellis of New Bedford in four rounds. Quinn looked better than he has in some time and hit with considerably more power.

THANKSGIVING

Thanksgiving dinner tomorrow with Violet; Edward Thorpe smiled, a rueful, cynical smile. At last he was at the eve of this great day—the day on which his bank accounted swelled by recent earnings in the stock market, he was to have asked Violet Manning to give up her position and marry him. Alas, how different this Thanksgiving dinner was to be—how utterly different from his expectations. Thanksgiving? Empty word. What had he to be thankful for?

For the last year, bit by bit, as he accumulated the savings, he had bought stocks and had joyously watched them rise until he apparently had more than sufficient to provide a nice home for Violet. Day by day he had watched the fluctuations of the market and always he was the winner. He had spent all his noon hours at his broker's office studying the ticker and as his stocks showed increasing profits his anticipation of all he expected to do with his earnings increased proportionately.

They would have an apartment on the drive and a maid and an automobile. And instead of taking dictation all day long Violet would drive her own car and spend her days in happy shopping trips and bridge parties. Edward had fallen in love with Violet almost the moment they met in Mr. Fernald's office, where she was private secretary. Edward, who had charge of the company's suburban office, had been summoned by Mr. Fernald one morning and appointed assistant regional supervisor, with offices downtown. It was a fine promotion, but much as Edward had looked forward to an adequate increase in pay, it had not been forthcoming.

And then he had discovered in the stock market a way to earn the extra money that he needed in order to ask Violet the all-important question.

Edward had been paralyzed by the big crash in the market. So this was the bitter end of all his dreams? For days Edward went about in a sort of daze. He felt crushed, as though life held no promise for him. And now tomorrow, Thanksgiving day, the day he had selected as most appropriate of all the days of the year to ask Violet to marry him, was to prove the most unhappy of his life. He would meet her, they would have dinner together, just as on so many occasions, and then they would part and it would all be over.

Edward met Violet at 6 next evening and took her to the little restaurant where they frequently dined for the special Thanksgiving feast. Violet was radiantly lovely. And her eyes! How they danced as she looked at him, as though she expected any minute to hear the words he would never utter. And then:

"Edward!" she burst out as soon as they were seated at the little table in the soft glow of the rose-shaded lamp. "This Thanksgiving day is the most marvelous one of my life!" Edward nodded, his thoughts far away.

"I could hardly wait to tell you the exciting news," she went on a trifle breathlessly. "I've been just aching to tell you all the way down here. I'm as happy over it as though it actually concerned me—you certainly are a fortunate boy." Edward looked at her questioningly. Whatever was on her mind? Could she possibly not have heard that he was wiped out—penniless?

"The regional supervisor has been transferred and you are to have his place——"

"What?" Edward almost screamed. "Where did you hear that?"

"Keep calm," said Violet, laughing, "and I'll tell you everything. Mr. Fernald dictated a letter to me at 5 o'clock last night summoning you to the office tomorrow. And Edward, guess what he said."

"Tell me," Edward begged. "You can't know what it means to me—to us."

"He said," quoted Violet: "'Now that young Thorpe's got his mind off the stock market he'll be able to think more sanely about his work again. He's been no good for the last year, constantly running to his broker's and watching the stock ticker. He's lost his money and we've won a darn good executive. From now on he'll get double his former salary.'"

Edward's eyes were misty as he looked straight into Violet's dancing ones.

"My darling," he said softly, "please say we can enjoy this good fortune together?" And as Violet nodded an eager consent he murmured, "And I thought I was the one person in the world to whom Thanksgiving day didn't mean a thing."—Chicago News.

U. S. FARM MACHINES ADOPTED IN FRANCE

PARIS (AP)—At last the French farmer has hung up his scythe in favor of the American mode of cutting grain.

Wheat "lots," far smaller than the vast tracts cultivated in the United States, now are being cut by American harvesting machines. Small towns in French wheat sectors have binders used by the entire population.

For years the French farmer has preferred his time-worn, rusty scythe to modern harvesting machinery.

EDITOR WHITE'S SON WINS NOMINATION "ON HIS OWN"

EMPORIA, Kas. (AP)—"Young Bill" White, 30 years old and not so long out of Harvard, has set a precedent for the William Allen White family by launching a political career.

And he was successful in his first start despite the fact nothing favorable to his candidacy appeared in the Emporia Gazette, his father's famous newspaper, of which he is associate editor.

"Young Bill" defeated W. A. Gladfelter, Kansas master farmer and president of the Lyons County Farm bureau, in the race for nomination as state representative from the east side of Lyons county on the republican ticket.

In November he will be opposed at the polls by T. R. Evans, democratic candidate. Lyons county is strongly republican.

Six years ago "Young Bill's" father was a candidate for governor on an independent ticket in the general election.

William Allen White did not contemplate a political career, however, and he didn't want the job, his candidacy being merely a protest against the Ku Klux Klan, which then was strong in Kansas. He was beaten by Ben S. Paulen of Fredonia.

When "Young Bill" announced his campaign he hoped he would be unopposed. When opposition developed, however, he made a spirited fight for the nomination, part of which was a house to house canvass.

Young White—who signs his letters W. L. White—attended the Emporia schools, graduating from high school in 1918. He was a student at the University of Kansas for one year and then went to Harvard, where he received an A. B. degree.

He has held nearly every job on the Gazette from carrierboy on up, and January 1, 1928, became associate editor. He is unmarried.

CAROLINA FARMERS FIND RELIEF IN CREDIT UNIONS

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP)—North Carolina farmers are not depending on the government for their farm relief.

They are setting up individual financial organizations under a law passed 15 years ago by the state legislature, providing for the establishment of savings and loan associations or credit unions, similar to those in operation in Europe for nearly a century.

Fifty-eight credit unions are now in operation in 26 counties, and more applications have been received for permits to organize in the last 60 days than in the history of the credit union in America.

The credit union is operated under the supervision of the department of agriculture and is similar to the building and loan association. Members control and operate the union themselves.

RARE SWEET POTATO SEED MAY HELP IMPROVE PLANT

WASHINGTON— (AP) —Bigger and better sweet potatoes may have been made possible by the government's acquisition of seed for experimental breeding.

Rarely, except in tropical and subtropical regions, does the sweet potato produce viable seed. It is propagated in the United States by draws or slips, the seed-producing habits having disappeared before the plant was adopted for cultivation.

Seeds for the experiments were obtained in Hawaii and the Virgin Islands. In one generation of breeding vast changes in type may take place whereas only slight changes can be made in many decades through selection and vegetative reproduction.

TAMPA, Fla.—(AP)—One hundred and fifty tons of honey has been set as the production goal for this year by Florida beekeepers, who have formed a cooperative marketing association.

In addition to providing better marketing facilities for the honey crop, efforts are being directed toward improvement of the product.

Tupelo and gallberry honey are almost the only kinds produced in the state that contain enough levulose sugar to prevent granulation. It is believed that by mixing these varities with the orange and other honeys that granulation my be prevented.

SHEEP NOW TRUCKED TO PASTURES IN WEST

SPOKANE, Wash.—(AP)—The spectacle of highways filled with sheep being trailed to pastures may be passing in the west.

Many Washington flockmasters are experimenting with truck transportation, as new roads now pierce much of the timber country.

If the experiment is successful, motor transportation may be used to take millions of sheep to high, timbered ranges. Sheep flockmasters say hauling by truck to terminal points would reduce the present loss of lambs en route.

BATON ROUGE, La.,—(AP)—With a sugar cane crop 74 per cent of normal August 1, Louisiana has an indicated production of 189,482 short tons of sugar in 1930. This will be about 10,000 tons below the 1929 crop, but 37,000 tons above the average for ten years.

INTENTIONAL SECOND EXPOSURE

SEVERITY OF NORTHEAST GALE HAMPERS SHIPPING AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug. 22.—The severe northeast gale that has prevailed for several days, particularly today, caused somewhat of an interruption to marine traffic. Steamer Shinnecock, running between this port and Greenport, encountered such severe gales after leaving New London at 11:30 this morning that the afternoon trip of the boat was omitted. Yesterday, during the height of the gale, the steamer grounded on Orient Point and did not arrive here on the last trip until 6:30 in the evening.

Patrolman Ernest Opperman, who reported off duty two days ago, is still confined to his home, having contracted a severe cold.

CHRISTENSEN AND HATHAWAY TO BE GIVEN A HEARING

The trial of Henry Christensen and Robert Hathaway, young men residing in Camden, N. J., is scheduled for tomorrow morning in the police court, the accused being charged technically with breach of the peace. As Christensen is wanted for conversion in his home state, there is a probability that the charges against the pair will be nolled in the New London court and that Christensen and Hathaway will be taken back to Camden. Christensen and Hathaway came to New London earlier in the week in an automobile which the former hired of a Camden dealer. Once in New London the youths sought and obtained liquor from Bank street speakeasies. Wednesday night Christensen and Hathaway formed the acquaintance of two girls and a ride was started with Sound View as the objective. En route, Hathaway produced a loaded revolver from the sidepocket of the auto and intimidated the girls. As the easiest way out of their predicament, one of the girls requested that the car be driven to New London because she had forgotten to perform some errand. The trip back here was made and the auto was driven to Ocean Beach, but en route the girl had slipped the revolver from the sidepocket and hurled it to the side of the highway. Arriving at Ocean Beach, the girl alighted on the pretense of doing the errand, but her mission was to report her experience to Patrolman William Graham. The officer turned the information over to Sergeant John Courtney and together with his superior officer and an automobile patrol officer, the youths and girls were taken to Waterford where the revolver was recovered. The youths were locked up, but because of their stunts having been enacted in Waterford, there is little likelihood that they will be penalized in court tomorrow.

JOSEPH MARTIN, PICKPOCKET, ABLE TO SECURE $3000 BAIL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Aug 22.— Joseph Martin, one of two pickpockets arrested a week ago, and who is being held in bail of $3,000 for his trial at the September term of the superior court, was released from the Franklin street jail last night when Samuel Solomon, of New York, came to New London and qualified on Martin's bond. Martin's confederate, John F. Ryan, of New York, who is a prisoner at the jail in default of bail of the same amount, is anticipating friends coming to his rescue by providing a cash or real estate bond. PATROLMAN SHEEHAN HEARING GOES OVER TO TUESDAY

Patrolman Patrick Sheehan, complained against yesterday by Frank Storey and Leland Flanagan, members of U. S. navy stationed at the submarine base, who said that the officer had brutally attacked them without provocation the night before when the officer wielded a blackjack on them at a time when the patrolman was off duty, was arrested this morning on a charge of breach of the peace. When his case was called in the police court, Attorney Morris Lubchansky, counsel for the officer, requested that the case be continued to Tuesday next to permit the attorney to interrogate Sheehan's witnesses, four or five young men, including Councilor James A. May. The request was granted. Sheehan is confident of being acquitted for he has said that his testimony as well as the evidence to be submitted by his witnesses should clearly show that the sailors were guilty of misconduct and provoked the clash. Storey was not in court today for he is at the sick bay, receiving treatment for injuries to his scalp. He with Flanagan, however, will be in court next Tuesday. City Manager William A. Holt today notified Capt. Charles A. Pinney of the reception of the latter's communication telling of the temporary suspension of Sheehan. City Manager Holt approved the suspension and made it known that when the trial of the officer has been concluded in the police court Sheehan will be given a hearing before the city manager.

CITY COURT SKIMS OFF BOOTLEGGING PROFITS

Two continued liquor cases were disposed of in the police court this morning when a man and woman, who conduct speakeasies were penalized by Judge Daniel M. Cronin. Mrs. Josephine Stamion, residing at 76 Potter street, was charged with 2 violations, actual sale and illegal possession. She pleaded not guilty, but the stool pigeons, employed by a Boston detective agency who supplied the police with evidence against the woman, testified to making purchases of liquor from Mrs Stamion. The woman was fined $200 and costs on each count.

Ignatz Dombroski, 72 Shaw street, charged with two violations, pleaded guilty, being fined $200 and costs on each count, but on the second charge, that of illegal possession, Judge Cronin ordered the fine remitted. In imposing the penalty, Judge Cronin informed Dombroski that if the latter was arrested again the fine suspended today would be put into effect and if it was not paid the speakeasy proprietor would be committed to jail. Mrs. Stamion and Dombroski were arrested several days ago when the police raided 11 speakeasies.

Waterford Garage Burned.

Fire from an undetermined cause completely destroyed a two-car garage on Bank street extension, Waterford, together with two automobiles early today. The garage was owned by Ralph Staplins an aged cripple, an the cars were owned by Staplin's son, Kenneth. The fire was discovered about 2:15 by a passing motorist, who caused Waterford and New London fire headquarters to be notified. The Waterford apparatus was sent to the burning building and one company from this city was dispatched to give assistance. When the firemen arrived at the garage it was doomed so the companies diverted their efforts to save any part of the garage and wet down the residence adjoining, which is occupied by Staplins and his son. Both men were asleep and were aroused by the firemen, the elder Staplins being carried from the house by firemen. The house escaped damage except from being scorched in several places. One of the destroyed cars was in the garage and the other was just outside the entrance so that it quickly ignited when the flames broke through the building and before the fire was discovered by the motorist.

..Charles Pubenbick, of Chatham, Mass., reported to the police today that the launch, "Old Town," tender of the Sarzen III, which was moored to the wharf at Burr Brothers, Pequot avenue, last night had been stolen. NOTED RACE DRIVER TO GIVE DEMONSTRATION TODAY

Ralph Hepburn, one of the aces of the roaring road, will be at the wheel of the new Studebaker President Eight in a hill climbing demonstration on Jail Hill this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Hepburn, who has whirled with death around all the important brick and board tracks from coast to coast, will attempt to take the new free-wheeling model Studebaker President over the top of Jail Hill in high gear with five passengers aboard. He will start on School street and will shoot into the right angle turn in the middle of the hill and proceed up Cedar street and over the top. The sharp turn in the middle of the hill is where Hepburn's driving skill will be called upon.

A word about the driver. Hepburn has always been connected with the racing game and motors have held a fascination for him since early childhood. About 13 years ago Hepburn sprung into prominence as a motorcycle racer and he blazed around the dirt tracks to many records. In 1922 he hung up seven dirt track records which stand after eight years of battering by other speedsters. Driving a 61 cu. in. displacement motor he captured the one mile title, the five mile, 10-mile, 25-mile, 200-mile, 300-mile and the five-mile sidecar event. In 1924 he gave up the two-wheelers for the four-wheel racing and has shown well at Indianapolis and Altoona tracks against the cream of the automobile racing world.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

Some persons support musical comedies, they are called "angels"; other support prize fights, they are called promoters; some support doctors, and one of the most famous of these is Joe E. Brown.

JOE BROWN

During the filming of "Top Speed," First National's musical comedy which opens at Warner's Broadway today, Joe E. Brown had the following injuries to prove that being funny was no fun at all.

A scraped nose, chin, and forehead for diving deep in shallow water in a motorboat sequence.

A turned ankle for jumping from a balustrade 20 feet above ground to get away from the amorous advances of Laura Lee.

Two square inches of necessary and important skin torn from his right shoulder during a shot depicting him fixing an automobile that's supposed to run away while he's still under it.

A bleeding nose from a higher dive than he'd like to have taken.

A strained back from being folded up in the hood of a motorboat, a trouble he could have avoided if he knew Director Mervyn LeRoy was going to cut that scene out anyway.

And a tiny bit of a stomachache from eating location food.

All of which tends to prove, as Joe E. Brown claims, that the A in S. P. C. A. stands for Actors.

Palace Theatre.

Ronald Colman is cast in the part of Raffles, the amateur cracksman, while Kay Francis plays opposite him. The rest of the cast includes a number of brilliant stars, all of whom lend luster to the great plot.

Almost everybody knows the story of this most famous of gentlemen burglars, the inimitable Raffles. Raffles plays cricket, he is well educated and has a splendid social position, but he must live by his wits. He has no money hence bank vaults, jewelry safes and the treasures of private mansions are his field of action.

Raffles first made his appearance in Hornung's stories early in this century and at once the public went wild about him. He represented in the crook world what the great Sherlock Holmes did in the detective field. How marvelous if Raffles and Holmes could have matched wits in some daring adventure.

Altogether, Raffles will provide Norwich with some of the most exciting evenings that the theatre has yet afforded. Nobody will want to miss it.

Today for the last times the Palace presents Richard Dix in that he-man, two-fisted drama, "Shooting Straight" and Sue Carol and Grant Withers in "Dancing Sweeties."

The King Decides

DREAMS OF ROMANCE FADE WHEN GINEVRA DOES A BIT OF EAVESDROPPING AND LEARNS OF A SWEDISH COUNTESS

IF a man named Shakespeare had never written a play called "Romeo and Juliet," and if the star's wife hadn't run a temperature, and if the skylight hadn't stuck—

But let's start at the beginning:

Ginevra Lacy stretched her very lithe and very young body luxuriously and peeled off her clinging bathrobe. Drops of water from the shower still clung bead-like to her hair, which was the color of polished ashwood. Then she put on a bathing suit which was none too ample and gripped firmly the dog-eared sheaf of her "part."

Ginevra had to be a Juliet Wednesday afternoon and night, not to say Thursday afternoon and night, not to say Friday afternoon and night night and twice on Saturday—all (thank goodness for the chance) because the great Valentine's wife was running to bursts of temperature that seemed nine parts temperatment.

But when a girl's been brought up on the Bard of Avon and had him for breakfast, dinner and supper all her years, one does get a bit fed up, and the lines do have a tendency to shuffle themselves and pop up in the wrong places.

And if you happen to be Ginevra Lacy, daughter of the once great Lacy, and you are playing opposite the now great Valentine—you simply can't ad lib. Shakespeare.

So Ginevra had to know her Juliet. She cast an appraising eye upward and began to climb the splashy pile of her modernistic bookcase. By standing on the top deck, so to speak, she could unlatch and push up the half skylight which centered the ceiling of her top-floor nest.

She knew just how it was done because she'd utilized it before as a route to and from the saggy roof where, thanks to the plateau-like structure of Greenwich Village housetops, one could have a sunbath in almost utter privacy.

The ancient frame creaked protestingly upward. Through the gap she pushed a canvas deckchair, neatly collapsed; her Juliet part and a stick—to keep the glass from falling back and trapping her aloft.

Before she pulled herself upward she ducked and peered at the clock on her mantel. It was 10 o'clock.

For two hours she toasted in the late summer sun and took young Miss Capulet straight from balcony to bier. Then she sighed with relief, gathered up her paraphernalia and prepared to exit laughingly.

But there wasn't any exit. The stick had fallen out and the skylight stuck fast and there wasn't anything to get hold to pull it up.

She was a little annoyed, of course, because now she'd have to walk down the stairs by way of the trapdoor at the other end of the roof and probably meet that bearded person who had the rear apartment, or a butcher's boy or some one else who'd stare at her practically undraped form—which is no way for a Shakespearean actress to be stared at.

She pulled at the trapdoor. Then she tugged. Then she struggled with it. It was latched from below.

By that time she was mad enough to play Ophelia without a make-up. But there was still a chance. The other half of her skylight folded over and ran across the rear apartment. She could see that the end was raised.

If that mysterious-looking person with the beard was out, she could drop down and get out in the hallway and yell for the janitor to bring his spare keys to let her in. It was all pretty terrible, but she couldn't stay on the roof forever.

Ginevra approached the rear skylight cautiously and squinted through the opening. She could see a plain oak table, a typewriter, a sheaf of scattered papers, some books, a pipe. But no man.

She heaved at the glassed frame, it rose and she swung herself over the edge, looking for a soft place on the stained floor.

"WELL," said a very masculine voice from out of nowhere, and she gasped, let go and fell in a heap.

It seemed the bearded person was at home.

He materialized out of the shadows of the dressing alcove and, thank heaven, he, at least, was fully clothed. Ginevra made futile motions of gathering a nonexistent robe about her, but there was simply nothing but bare floor and that skimpy little silk sunbath suit to cover her confusion.

And he was probably staring his eyes out—

She looked up to see.

Two astonishingly sharp and icily blue dots were squinting with what certainly looked like anger straight into her own eyes.

An unruly hedge of whiskers that grew from ear to ear and nose to Adam's apple failed utterly to mask the grim tightness of his lips.

"What," he demanded brusquely, "are you doing?"

For an instant Ginevra was too dumfounded to answer at all. Then she thought of any number of snappy comebacks, such as "Picking strawberries" or "Hunting for edelweiss"—but why, she thought, dignify this oaf with wisecracks?

"Can't I have any privacy?" he went on.

Of course, she decided immediately what to say when he talked that way.

"Stop mouthing insulting questions and get me a robe," she flared.

It was ludicrous the way his mouth fell open at that. He stopped talking as though he'd been shot and one of the arms he'd been fingering crazily aloft stuck there in the most absurd posture.

But he didn't move and it made her furious, because now he really did seem to be staring.

"Will you do as I tell you, or shall I scream?" she demanded.

Which was easily as silly as anything he'd said, but she was pretty cross about things by this time. And it certainly produced action.

"Heaven forbid!" he said and dived into the dressing room, to reappear a split second later with a Turkish toweling creation that unquestionably had seen better days.

"Take this," he said, "and for heaven's sake get out quietly."

For answer Ginevra wrapped the over-sized robe primly about her, walked out of his door to the hall balustrade and yelled at the top of her lungs:

"Jackson," she called. "Ooooh, Jackson!"

Behind her she heard a not-so-muffled curse and the door to the rear flat slammed mightily.

She almost laughed. "Jackson," she called again, but not so loud, "please bring your keys; I'm locked out."

Twenty minutes later, home, clothed and in her right mind, she began to experience a strange stirring of curiosity. Obviously the young man had acted very badly. It was not at all the thing one would have expected. And that made her laugh. She had been all prepared to be insulted by his too familiar gaze or what not, and instead he'd been perfectly boorish about her dropping in, so to speak.

BUT why? She wondered vaguely if he'd been disappointed in love and gone misogynist, or if he was a criminal or just plain crazy. That latter seemed rather to cover the case.

A rap on the door interrupted her. "Come in," she called.

It was the bearded man.

"I'm frightfully sorry," he began diffidently, "I didn't know——"

So she hadn't been mistaken, after all—he would be the kind that try to take advantage.

"Can't I have any privacy?" she demanded haughtily. She picked up the Turkish-toweling dressing gown and tossed it at him.

"Take this," she said sweetly, "and for heaven's sake get out quietly."

It was after midnight before she got back from the theatre and the hallways were dark, so she almost stepped on him before she saw him. He awakened with a start, and she could see in the pale glow from the bulb above that he was smiling.

But he sat stock still on the top step of the top flight—and there was no way to detour in ladylike fashion.

"Please don't scream," he said pleasantly (his voice, she realized, had a very fine quality), "but I must apologize. You see, I didn't know you lived here or that you'd had an accident. I thought ——"

He waved his arms expressively and stopped.

Well, what on earth had he thought? She waited resignedly, but he still seemed to be floundering for words.

"I've been worried a lot lately," he began again, lamely, and stopped once more. The sad little light threw an eerie beam across his upturned face and she could see that he did look worn and ill.

HER mind flashed back to the bare room and the typewriter. A starving writer in his garret. Perhaps he was hungry. She felt suddenly very sorry for him.

"It's quite all right," she assured him, "but this isn't a very comfortable place to talk. I'm famished, so let's go into my place and toast some muffins and have tea."

With a start like that she fell in love with him, of course. Not at once. It didn't pop up and smite her suddenly. Rather it infiltrated, or, speaking the manner of battle, enfiladed her marshaled defenses and came on from the blind side—and then quite suddenly it was there—and that's all there was to it.

But even that first evening over tea and toast and jam and scrambled eggs covered with a strange filip of the something did happen. Ginevra disheart that he was undeniably handsome in spite of the whisker hedge, and that his voice was really fine, particularly in his naive moments, which occurred often.

His name, he told her, was Bill King, and he wanted to write a drama—and to play Hamlet.

And she found, without realizing it, that she was being drawn out at great length about her own hopes and fears and ambitions. She even told him she didn't care a hang for the Bard, preferring the movies if that way led to success—but what she really wanted was to settle down with some good soul who labored under the undying delusion that she was the little woman who hung out the moon.

Which, indubitably, was a fast-moving first meeting.

She thought about it the next morning and was smitten with remorse. But nevertheless, she thumped on his door. He wasn't in. It worried her when she didn't see him all that day or the next.

But she thrilled with pleasure when the whiskers bobbed up in the audience the third night—and the fourth and fifth.

The morning of the sixth day he awakened her by beating a tattoo on the wall and shouting: "Breakfast's ready—come and get it."

After that they were virtually inseparable—for ten days. Then he announced out of a clear sky that he had to go away over the week-end. And that Saturday night the great Valentine decided Broadway couldn't appreciate Shakespeare—and posted two-week notices.

Which left Ginevra disolved in tears by Monday night. Bewhiskered Bill King found her sitting in a disconsolate heap when he came back from his week-end.

"I'm lower than a snake," she admitted in answer to his question.

Surprisingly, it seemed to make him glad. At any rate, he smiled broadly.

"About ready to settle down to the love of a good man and forget Broadway?" he suggested.

"There aren't any good men," she snapped, and then swallowed a sob abruptly; "besides, I'm not going to settle down until I've seen the Lacy name in lights again."

"In lights?"

"You know what I mean. I want people to hear about me, talk about me. I want to be a success at something."

He grinned at that. "And then?"

She couldn't help smiling a little. "And then," she sighed, "I'd be perfectly willing to rest on my laurels."

He walked quickly across the floor and lifted her to her feet.

"Good," he said matter-of-factly, "because I came in to ask you to marry me."

He sat her down carefully in a big chair while she struggled for speech.

"But I just said—" she began.

He waved an arm deprecatingly.

"I know—the lights. Well, you can still use the name Lacy—and there's the lead in my play—"

He stopped and looked at her quizzically over the hedge-beard ends.

"—which I'm saving for my wife."

"The play's not even finished," she countered. He nodded.

"And you haven't got a producer," she continued.

He nodded again. "No," he said airily, "but I will."

She felt herself slipping. Something had to be done. She reached for the biggest straw and clung.

"And, Bill—I don't know a thing about you. I don't even know who you are."

"That's funny," he said quickly. "I'm the fellow who thinks you hung out the moon."

"You're impossible," she laughed.

"You're wonderful," he answered, and that clinched things.

But she refused to be hurried into an out-and-out "Yes."

"Go home," she said, "and let me think it over. I'll tell you tomorrow morning."

Then she undressed ever so slowly, pausing after each discard to gaze (slightly misty of eye) at herself in the pier glass and make faces at the flushed image that laughed back at her and repeated over and over again: "I'm in love. I'm in love."

She went to bed, and to sleep, knowing perfectly well that there wasn't any necessity for thinking it over. It was all settled—as sure as fate. The answer was yes, capital Y—I—love—you—s—s.

It must have been hours later that she awakened with a start. There were voices in the other room—in Bill King's—and they were angry voices.

She sat bolt upright. His voice rose above the others.

"No," he was saying, "no," I won't go back. I'm sick of it."

Another voice interposed.

"You must. We've traveled halfway around the world hunting you. Everything's waiting. You've got to see it through."

GINEVRA slipped out of bed and kneeled with her ear against the partition. What on earth did they mean? If she could hear more, piece the thing together.

She picked out a third voice, now, placating:

"But it's your duty. You owe it to millions of people. They expect to see you, hear you again. You can't drop everything, run away, leave them in the lurch—"

That voice trailed off and the heavier one broke in again.

"The coronation's all set—everything's set. They've even picked the little Swedish Countess for your Queen—"

Ginevra Lacy, kneeling on the board floor beyond the partition, bit her tongue and sat down abruptly on her hard little heels.

What could it mean? Duty? Coronation? Queen? The realization welled up and flooded her.

A runaway Prince!

That was it. She could see how so many things she hadn't seen before—his slight accent, his manerisms, his evident fear of being pursued and caught.

She heard his voice now quite plainly.

"All right," he said, "you win, and I'll go back."

He'd go back!

She got up. There was more talk. But Ginevra didn't wait to hear. She was on her feet striding across the room, running almost, although not knowing why, or where to.

She stumbled over her pumps and stopped running, staring at them. Dress, she told herself. Dress and get out until he's gone—back to his coronation and his Queen.

She scooped up the heap of little silky things that only a few hours ago she'd taken off so slowly in front of the pier glass and thrust arms and legs into them, willy-nilly, till she was ready for the street.

Then she crept noiselessly down the hall, past his door, past the sound of the voices saying, "We knew you wouldn't fail us," past the top step where he'd slept waiting for her and on down the stairs they'd laughed away together—and into the pale approaching dawn.

She didn't know where to go. She didn't care, so long as it led away and she could keep moving. The faster she moved the easier it was to keep back the tears.

She was hungry and homeless, too, until the Bill King person went away. She couldn't see him again. It would be too awful to have to listen to his excuses. She wondered what he would say. Something about another trip. And the promise to come back soon—and then the not coming back at all. And finally the reading in all the papers of the wedding of the Prince of Herzegovina or some such place and the little Swedish Countess.

She shrudered and suddenly she realized that perhaps he didn't want to go after all. Perhaps he had meant what he said. But there was such a thing as duty. He'd run away from it all—and now he had to go back. A Prince can't marry for love. That was an old line she'd read in books and comic operas.

Not so comic, after all. She stopped being sorry for herself and began to feel sorry for him. And then the sun came out and quite suddenly the way opened very clearly and she saw the thing to do.

It was up to her to share his duty. To go back and tell him she loved him, and that it had all been the most wonderful experience of her life, but that she must release him— send him back to his destiny and his throne.

And only the last part would be a lie.

A TALL, paunchy man was striding up and down the top hall when she got home. The door to the rear apartment was open and another man was sitting at the telephone, talking very rapidly into the transmitter.

The big man stopped his furious pace and saw her.

"Right here, madame," he called. He moved to the stairhead and gripped her elbow.

"You're the first one," he said. "Come right in."

Ginevra drew back. "There must be some mistake," she said.

The big man mopped his brow. "It's terrible," he answered.

He steered her quickly within the room and picked up a large photograph from the litter on the table. Across the top was printed, "Orville Gordon, the Great Lover of the Screen."

"That's him," he said. "We're getting some of her as quickly as possible, but maybe you have some in your files."

Ginevra disengaged her elbow.

"What are you talking about?" she demanded.

The paunchy one stopped in amazement. "Good heavens," he said, "don't you know? I thought your city editor told you." He motioned toward the front apartment.

"Ginevra Lacy, the Shakespearean star, has disappeared."

"Well," said Ginevra, "what of it?"

The man at the telephone hung up and crossed to her side.

"Don't misunderstand," he said soothingly. "This is not a press-agent stunt."

"Heavens, no," moaned the big one.

The smaller man went on, his voice taking on a very confidential tone.

"You see, Orville Gordon—and this is not for publication—decided to retire. He even ran away and hid. This morning he was to have married Miss Lacy and returned to make one more picture. But when we called for her she had vanished. Mr. Gordon is almost mad with worry. So we've called the police and all you reporters to help—"

THE big man moved suddenly and caught her arm.

"Hey," he demanded, "what's the matter?"

But Ginevra couldn't answer. She was laughing. Or crying. Or both.

There was a clatter of feet on the stairs. Some one burst into the room. Some one took her by the shoulders and twisted her around and held her tight. She could feel the ends of a great many whiskers against her cheek.

"We thought she was a reporter," said the big and little ones.

"She's no reporter," said the Bill King voice. "She's the bride."

Through a gap in the hedge she could see, full length, the photograph on the desk. Beneath the printed line at the top was a face, a very handsome face, and undeniably it was the Bill King face bereft of the Russian dressing.

And at the bottom another printed line, "In his newest picture, 'The King of Broken Hearts.'"

"Oh, Bill," she said, "why did you hide and why didn't you tell me?"

But not even the beard that grew from one Bill King ear to the other and from the Bill King nose to Adam's apple could mask the smile of his lips.

"Because," he said solemnly, "I was tired of being the great lover who'd never been in love—till now."

So she turned the picture over on its face and kissed him through the beard.

SEVERAL DRAW FINES IN THIRD DISTRICT COURT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, Aug. 22.—A morning and afternoon session was held on Friday by Judge Oliver H. Williams in regular session of third district court when court matters were disposed of as follows:

On the complaint and warrant, search for and seizure of liquors and a second count for the possession of same, Paul Schmeller, Hope Valley, through his attorney, M. Walter Flynn, entered a plea of nolo. Prosecutor Ferguson told the court that the complainant, Chief of Police Frank H. Brown, of Hopkinton, who raided the premises with state police officers found 107 bottles of beer, showing 2.3 per cent by analysis. Mr. Flynn asked for probation for Mr. Schmeller, saying that he was out of work, having been formerly employed at the Regina Spinning Co., and had previously lived in North Providence, Carolina, Wyoming and Hope Valley. Judge Williams, in admitting the accused to probation, said he could depart the court to return when summoned and would not be taxed for court costs at this time, the final disposition of the case being an honest attempt to secure work.

Stanley Beraski, of the town of Hopkinton, through his attorney, George J. West, entered a plea of not guilty when the reading of complaints by Chief of Police Frank Brown was waived charging possession of intoxicating liquors. A move was made and denied to quash the complaint in that certain constitutional requirements alleged omitted were not included. The first state witness was Chief Frank Brown, who testified to going with state police officers into the kitchen of the house on this, a second offense, and to the finding in an adjoining room 55 quart bottles of beer and 3 quart bottles of whiskey, taken to the state barracks and samples taken which showed more than a legal percentage of alcohol.

In the course of the raid Chief Brown testified that the defendant's wife cried: "Shoot the——" and her husband started for an adjoining room to secure a gun. In cross-examination, Mr. West asked Chief Brown if anyone was shot that day; on receiving the reply "not any that I know of" observed then there was no crime committed. In view of the character of the testimony Judge Williams said that he had changed his mind on making a disposition similar to the previous case and finding the accused guilty sentenced him to a fine of $50 and costs. Notice was given and the accused was held in $300 bonds on the appeal of the case.

In the following two cases of speeding on Atlantic avenue, Misquamicut, the accused were found guilty and sentenced to pay fines of $25 and costs, each.

William G. Sweenor, of West Springfield, Mass., who was arrested on the night of August 16, by Officer Charles Button, when he was coming along the road from Atlantic Beach casino, where he had been attending the dance, according to the officer's testimony, was making 40 miles an hour. He pleaded guilty.

Martin Platt, a chauffeur for a Misquamicut family, who was arrested on Aug. 16th by Officer George Madison, stated to the court that he had been sent for some medicine for a child who was sick in his employer's household and was hurrying back with it when the officer halted him. He pleaded guilty to exceeding the speed limit for that section and paid his $25 fine.

Four other speeders who had been summoned by the R. I. state police to appear in court failed to put in an appearance and warrants for their arrests were issued.

These were: State Police Officer Sherwood F. Healey vs John J. Lyman; Sherwood F. Healey vs. Howard K. Simmons; Albert L. Taylor vs. Harry L. Gessler and John F. Kennedy vs. Arthur Richard Misca.

Robert Kamm, airplane pilot of Charlestown, R. I., on complaint of Sheriff Frederick T. Mitchell, was before the court, charged with a violent assault upon Humbert S. Cortellesse, the manager of the Atlantic Airport, Inc., of Charlestown.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY

Mrs. Brayton's Choice

The ladies at the sewin' bee were telling what they'd take
To make 'em just as satisfied as anything could make.
Said Mrs. Kahn: "Some tiamonds mit sparkles like the sun,
And each one twice as pig at least as every other one
Vould suit my taste." But I sewed on, a-thinkin' I would tell
My husband John of Mrs. Kahn, when up spoke Mrs. Pell.

Says she: "Give me a marble house upon Fifth avenue,
And means enough to keep it up, and I guess that'll do."
A number thought that suited them; but Mrs. Banker said
She'd always had a hankerin' for travel, in HER head.
Miss Call decided all she'd want would be a "little fame;"
But I sewed on, and thinkin' John would think HER choice a shame.

And so it went, till all had said what they would take but me;
I kept a-sewin' on until Miss Call, she says, says she:
"Well, Mrs. Brayton, it's YOUR turn; now what would YOU prefer
The best of all?" I dropped my thread and looked across at her,
And then I says, says I: "My John!" Well, how them wimmin screamed!
But poor Miss Call got up and left, a-feeling hurt, it seemed.

The Smaller Joys.

Give me the simple joys; the wild bird's song,
A rose or two to cherish as my own,
A dwelling small where constant love is known,
And I'll not murmur that life's way is long.

Give me a sheltering tree, a patch of lawn,
A few good friends to share my merry hours,
To walk with me and bend above my flowers
And I'll rejoice to greet the coming dawn.

Give me some tasks to do; not leadership,
Nor brilliant effort with its larger gain,
But tasks which serve a need and soften pain,
And I can face the world with smiling lip.

Give me this small success to play the friend,
To hold my post with courage, and to be Free from the chains of pomp and luxury
And I can walk glad-hearted, to the end.

ANSWERS AND INQUIRIES

MELKSHAM AND PEDESTRIAN: Letters sent as requested.

BUSY CANNING

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Just a short letter this time as it is after 10 p. m. and I want to retire for the night as I've got a busy day ahead of me tomorrow. I've just finished fixing some corrot marmalade to cook tomorrow and send my recipe.

Watermelon Rind Pickle: I had 8 lbs. of watermelon rind after it was peeled and cut up. Soak over night in a weak brine of 2 tablespoons of salt to enough cold water to cover. In morning drain and to the watermelon add 4 lbs. of granulated sugar

Carrot Marmalade: Four pounds carrots, three lemons, four pounds sugar, two cups of crushed pineapple. Wash and scrape carrots and put through food chopper. I put the lemons through the food chopper, too. I cut them lengthwise four times, remove seeds and mix in with carrots and put hand over top to prevent the lemon juice from flying all over. I used a can of crushed pineapple juice and it made just two cups. Mix all together, add sugar and mix good and let stand over night. In morning cook until clear. Pour into sterilized glasses and seal.

To the sister who asked for a recipe for watermelon rind pickle, here's how I made some last week.

Watermelon Rind Pickle: I had three pounds of watermelon rind after it was peeled and cut up. Soak over night in a weak brine of two tablespoons of salt to enough cold water to cover. In morning drain and to the watermelon add four pounds of granulated sugar and three or four lemons sliced thin with seeds removed, one ounce of cloves, a little stick cinnamon and two ounces of whole mace. I couldn't get any mace, so used a little ground nutmeg. Tie these spices in a bag and boil about a half hour or so with the melon, a pint of cider vinegar thinned with a pint or a little more of water if the vinegar is pretty strong. Cook all together for one to one and one-half hours till rind is soft enough to pierce with a fork. Do not cook too fast and stir once in a while to prevent burning. Put in hot sterilized jars and seal at once. I have several other watermelon rind recipes if anyone would care for them, also plainer carrot marmalade recipes.

I have been very busy canning all week. I've made some blackberry and rhubarb jam, blackberry and blueberry jelly, some apple jelly and canned one bushel string beans and seven quarts blueberries so far this year.

Now I want to can a bushel of peaches and one of tomatoes also some quince and cranberries, if I'm lucky enough to get some.

Best wishes to all.

LADY SLIPPER

ABOUT MY PRESSURE COOKER

Dear Social Corner Editor: I am not a Social Corner member but always interested in the letters. I was especially interested in Sister Rhody's letter of August 2 telling about her pressure cooker. I read her letter over twice and decided to have one so I looked over my catalogues and decided on one I thought would be all right and sent for it. I selected a nine quart one as my family is small and it cost me less than $9. I had it in my kitchen in less than a week's time using it. After I sent for it I was afraid I would not understand how to use it but when it came the instructions and recipes came with it, so I found it very easy to understand.

The first I cooked in mine were potatoes and summer squash. It was the first time I ever cooked them in 12 minutes. While I was taking the cover off I was wondering if they would be done and sure enough they were all right. I find it saves times and fuel and besides the food is much better cooked. We have been feasting on green corn cooked in my cooker which we thought was so much sweeter.

SOCIAL CORNER EVENTS.

Aug. 27—Picnic at home of Tuny Aim in North Windham.

Aug. 28—Picnic at home of Biddy at Mansfield Center. Next day if stormy.

Of course, I haven't had the experience that Sister Rhody has had, but have had enough to know the pressure cooker is O. K.

I do not think that E. L. M. would make a mistake if she invests in one.

I will close my letter with many thanks to Sister Rhody.

JOLLY TIME AT ARIES' HOME.

Dear Editor and Social Corner: I've been wanting to write and tell you that my garden looks better in print than in reality. I feared some one might come to look at it, so thought I better tell you. And sure enough, the other day a large auto stopped at our place and as they had to let the bar down I had time to slip on a cover-all apron over my costume I wear when I milk the cow. Well, sir, there were several S. C. members and families and they said, "We have come to see your garden and as it is Fred's birthday we thought we'd make it a picnic. Well, sir, will you believe me, when I saw they unloaded boxes and mysterious looking bundles which later proved to be three kinds of sandwiches, six kinds of cake and cookies, frankforts, ham, ice cream and a watermelon, milk and spring water, as they knew my well has been dry a long time. There were 11 at the table and we all had a jolly time and forgot all about looking at the garden.

I presume most of you have found one or more four-leaved clovers this summer. I always admired the clover blossoms, white, red or sweet clover, and it seems such a thrilling thing to see a four-leaf clover smiling at one. I found one early in April and two in July and four in August. Charles Springfield of Hearst, California, fashioned a large picture of a clover leaf and shield composed entirely of four, five, six, seven and one eight leaved clovers. There were 500 in all and when the picture was framed he sent it to President Hoover on his inauguration day.

Green Hollow asks what is the cause of so much industrial depression and unrest. It is not because of any particular political party or religious creed. It is just simply because there is too much machinery. Machines now do the work that used to require man power. The machines produce more than we can possibly use, hence we have over four million unemployed in the U. S. A. and Germany has five million out of work reported at the present time.

Some one asked where Jane of R. I. is. She wrote me that she would be too busy this summer to write for our page and I read a letter in a Boston paper saying she was thinking of taking a trip to Alaska and she described some of the wonders and beauty of Alaska.

Comfort: Happy birthday on 27th. Better go to Tuny Ann's S. C. picnic and celebrate on that day.

My asters open nicely but there is a bug of some sort that eats off the petals. My straw flowers and blue lace flower are pretty. Must can peas and use the elderberries. Those were orders from the good man, as he departed on his trip to Canada the other day. "Make those elderberries into "katchup" before I get back from God's country, where they don't have bootleggers, as I shall need it in my system," he said. And I got to house clean, so I shall be busy. ARIES.

THE DENISON REUNION

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I feel sure I am called a slacker for not writing, but I can make up for it in interest in reading other letters.

How much I have enjoyed Tusanna's letters and will be glad to see her home. Surely the letters have many helpful suggestions and all kinds of subjects are discussed.

I regret we have no leader here to carry on the meetings for I can get to them when at home. No doubt many have read about the Denison reunion held last Saturday and probably you don't know the description of the Denison house and furnishings was written by our B Natural also the meeting of Saturday. If you failed to read it just look up Friday's paper and Monday and see what a wonderful place it is and the town of Stonington, as a whole, can feel proud of it.

The idea of Mrs. Gates perpetuating her ancestors' memory meets with approval by so many of us who are Capt. George Denison's descendants and we feel proud we bore that name if it was changed by marriage.

Now, we all look forward to next year when they meet again, but we can't expect them to come from such distant places as this year. Best wishes to all the sisters and the editor. MUSICIAN.

MUST MAKE GOOD TO LIVE

Dear Social Corner Members: Can you hear the thud of the pickaxe and the click of my shovel these days? I am getting ready for another year! For if this season has been a failure, all the more reason why next year should bring success. So I'm trying hard to help it along.

Over the wall with the dead plants, the weeds; they are hindering progress—out with them! Out with the grass sods, on with the grass sods, on with the rotten manure and humus. All this work now will mean so much less labor early next spring for plant beds need but little attention then if they are cleaned up now.

The calendulas started the season in fine shape but dry weather hurt them cruelly. They have had but few blooms and those have been woefully small, many of them not worth the picking. I have kept the seeds picked off, however, and now I am being rewarded with finer, larger blooms for they are "coming back" wonderfully well. I have just picked a large bouquet of them for the house. The Chinese forget-me-nots are lovely with them. I am partial to combinations of blue and yellow anyway.

The portulacca on the cemetery wall curled up and threatened to die during the dry weather, but they are beginning to grow again now. There were about 60 blooms of many shades there this morning and if the frost holds off another month there will be a wide ribbon of brightly colored flowers each morning.

The petunias were slow in coming up, slow in growing and even slower about putting out buds. Yesterday, I dug them up, ten of them, and potted them in fairly rich dirt. If they want to bloom in the house they can; if they don't, then out they go. And if the blooms are mediocre they'll get walking orders. They've simply got to make good if they want to live.

I guess Sister Rhody forgot the ironweed that grows down near the river. It is very beautiful this year. The willows near it are splendid specimens, there are tall oaks and poplars in the background, a maple tree near by has turned to a dull red, the goldenrod is opening and the dusky pink of Joe Pye weed, the white of thoroughwort and tall grasses complete the picture. No, there is an occasional clump of cardinal flower for added brightness. If we were to combine these colors in our gardens the effect would be hideous, for the colors would clash but in the wild garden there is such a depth of background that the whole affect is wonderful.

I wonder if you can tell me who wrote this verse?

Not God! in Gardens? When the eve is cool?
Nay, but I have a sign
'Tis very sure God walks in mine.

Till Jack Frost nips my fingers.

PERNICKETY.

REPORT OF PICNIC OF CLUB 6

Dear Social Corner Members, Friends and Neighbors: I must not let another day pass without writing a letter of appreciation to you all.

As you all know there was no picnic in July, it being a very busy month and no one felt able to arrange for it, so this month I volunteered to be hostess. But only for the hard work, good management and hospitality on the part of our sisters, Wheeler, We Us and Yellow Jacket, was the picnic a huge success.

Many times I heard exclamations of praise and gratitude, but believe me, friends, the pleasure was not all yours, because I know that my hostess who worked with me took just as much pleasure getting ready for this day as you.

Not only did the sisters work but the men folk, too, did their share. Let us give them the credit due them, also the children; even the smallest members were happy gathering goldenrod for decoration.

About one o'clock, dinner was served on the spacious lawn over which beautiful old trees (a stately elm in the center, on either side a lovely maple) spread wide their branches as if to welcome us 'neath their shade.

Did I say dinner? No, that is putting it too mild altogether. It was a grand feast. To be exact 93 partook of the many different kinds of food. The big surprise for us was the corn chowder prepared by those wonderful cooks in Yellow Jacket's family. The coffee, made by We Us, touched the right spot.

The members and guests were so generous with their donations, too. Salads of all kinds, baked beans, meat loaf, crackers, cheese, pickles, several different kinds of pies, cookies, cakes and bananas were brought in abundance.

Just before sitting down to the feast, the Doxology was sung, led by Meadow Lark.

Wheeler, We Us and Yellow Jacket, join with me in the great pleasure you gave us in responding to my invitation. We knew it was a great effort for many to come especially those who live so far away as Southington, Jewett City, Providence and other distant places. For those who have children, I realize it meant a responsibility. I believe each club was represented. It was a great privilege to our club to meet new people. Sisters we never met before I trust on that day made new friends. Possibly friendships formed at that picnic will last to the end of life's chapter and may we all meet again at our next gathering.

Now, I have another invitation to give in these columns, and I do hope you will accept with just as much enthusiasm, weather permitting.

As our regular minister is away on his vacation through July and August, a substitute has been sent to take his place. I have been invited to attend services a couple of times, so last Sunday my mother, son and myself accepted the invitation. As we walked in, to our amazement we did see, standing in the pulpit, not an aged minister as we expected, but a mere boy, not yet 20. You cannot imagine the impression he gave us. I knew at that moment he had prepared for us a sermon worth while.

This young man is a student from Dudley institute, studying to be a missionary. He has chosen India for his field. He reminded me of the young carpenter who tarried a while so many, many centuries ago and spoke those promising words to the people in the synagogue.

His theme Sunday was "Joy in Religion." The solo he gave was entitled "Redeemed by Grace Divine." His voice needed no accompaniment as it was music itself.

Never before have I had the privilege of listening to a sermon delivered by one so young and so intensely interesting.

Now that I have been and heard this very intelligent young man I wish friends, you might have the same opportunity. He will come just two more Sundays to the North Stonington Baptist church and it would give him great pleasure and encouragement if you could come in and give him your attention between 11 and 12, daylight saving time.

Please try and come, all that are able.

The 19th was a red letter day for me, a day long to be remembered. Long live the Social Corner.

PRAIRIE CHICKEN

WHIPPED BY A GANDER

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: As summer vacation days are nearly over and as I have been reading the Social Corner page with much interest about picnics, auto pleasure trips and also the letters from stay-at-home writers, it has brought to mind other vacations of long ago. Especially the one spent at grandmother's home on the farm.

On that vacation is where I met with a peculiar experience so vividly recalled that I am compelled to write a few lines about it. In the beginning, the outdoor games were played and many other good times enjoyed. When the pleasures of the day were over and the curtain of night hid the peaceful farm scene wrapped in slumber I slept in a trundel bed. In the days that followed there was much of rural life to attract and interest the young mind but with the pleasures I was much annoyed by an old cross gander very large in size that would trail my steps causing many detours to be made to avoid a collision. The precaution was all in vain for unexpectedly I was caught and received a whipping from those bony wings that I have never forgotten. The blows fell quick and fast. When help came, his hold on my skirt was released and I was rescued from the cruel treatment. When the conflict was over the gander in squawking buoyancy glided from the scene and I returned to the house where the painful bruises were attended to, but as the summer was waning, I left the farm returning home to get ready for school and later to relate to my schoolmates my trying experience with a gander's wings.

BIDDY INVITES ALL TO PICNIC ON AUG. 28

Dear Social Corner Friends: Now don't make a mistake and about to load when you read this letter, but the long and short of it is, I am giving a general invitation to all six clubs to come to my house for a picnic, Thursday, Aug. 24, or Friday, August 29, if it should rain Thursday.

We have a lovely place here and we can have a nice old time. Bring dishes and food as usual. Now, for those who know not where to come, would say get onto Jackson street, in Willimantic, and take the road to the Conn. Agricultural college in Storrs, keep on and watch for the Mansfield Center sign on the right. Take the left hand turn from the church coming from Willimantic. If anyone comes in on the trolley, walk to the depot and sit down and wait for a jitney driver to come for you. He will ask you if you are coming to my house. If you get in Willimantic around 10 o'clock and want to come up on the Storrs bus, you can; it leaves at 10:10. The same to those who come on the bus from Norwich. The fare is small, so come. Hope to see a big crowd for it has been a good many years since I started the picnic ball a rolling and also a good many years since I had one. So I am anxious to see all the old ones and new ones also friends. Come one, come all! BIDDY.

MEMORIES OF YESTERDAY

Dear Social Corner Editor and Readers: "The plowman homeward plods his weary way." The sun was nearing the western horizon when the farmer, wearied from toil of the day, entered the kitchen where the good housewife was placing the evening meal on the table. He, like a tired plowman, sat down heavily in the very old splint-bottomed chair. Hanging his straw hat on the crank of the coffee mill, where it had done duty since the year 1800, he says: "Well, mother, I have finished plowing the six-acre corn field of last year, and tomorrow I shall sow it with oats. If it is the 15th of April, I find the ground in fine condition for seeding. The boys will have a chance to get good exercise in harrowing and bushing the ground. One will use one yoke of oxen on the harrow and the other will follow with the brush. I must make a note of the day and year that I sowed that field of oats. Yes, this is April 15th, 1858. It will be the earliest I ever sowed oats and I guess it will be sooner than any of the neighbors have sown theirs."

"Come, father, the boys have finished the chores and have brought in the milk, and a nice lot of it, too. I think that young cow is going to be a prize, for the boys say she gave that 12-quart pail swimming full. Come, wash now, and get ready for supper, it's already on the table. I have put the wash bench out by the well, as it is warm enough to wash out doors. It will give me more room in the dairy room. I must have it to do my dairy work in. With the milk that is coming in I shall soon be making butter and a little later, cheese."

Supper eaten, the boys turn to and wash the dishes for their mother.

"If you are but ten and 12 years old, you are two nice boys to wash the dishes for mother. You are as handy as many girls that are older. I am very tired for I have made the big five pail kettle full of soap, besides putting many pails of water into the lye leach to keep it running, for I have another kettle of soap to make tomorrow."

The farmer reads the Norwich Courier! Yes, and nods awhile, and then to bed. One of the boys reads some humorous stories from the "Boston True Flag" to mother, while the other reads one of Mary J. Holmes' interesting stories.

As the old tall clock that stands near one of the sleeping rooms strikes the hour of nine, the boys retire for the night, for a hard day's work is before them tomorrow.

They soon hear their mother pulling down the cords that raises the weights to keep the old clock marking time and to move the heavenly bodies that are a mechanical part of the old clock; made in the year 1768.

Up in the morning at the first break of day, chores done, breakfast eaten, and away to the field. The farmer says: "Boys, we have got a good start on our spring work; the corn ground is plowed; the acre of early potatoes is planted (the silverlakes); and if it don't storm Saturday, we will take a ride up among the Brooklyn and Canterbury farmers and see how they are getting along with their work, for there are many prosperous farmers in those two towns and their farms are kept up in the best of condition and productiveness. They believe as I do: not to let their farms run down and become unattractive by letting a hedgerow of bushes grow along the walls and fences, or rob the stock of good feed by converting the pastures into a tangle of briars and bushes. Clean of bushes in the pastures, we see the cattle on the many hills; so are the sheep, which are counted by the 30's, 40's and 50's and some in a flock of 100, and the lambs as they gambol with the ewes—some the mother of two and three. A leaky roof, a loose board, a broken down farm gate or bars, is the mark of a careless and untidy farmer, but in our drive Saturday we won't see many of that kind. I want to add another good cow or two to our herd, and I may find them on our travels. Albert Day, up on the church road in Brooklyn, has fine stock; so do the Browns and Spauldings. Olney Tanner has a nice herd and so have the Scarboroughs, Kendals, Arby Allen, Elisha Adams and William Putnam. (His grandfather was General Israel Putnam.) I shall find what I want among those prosperous farmers. I will buy two if they are young and promising."

Saturday morning the farmer and his two boys started on their trip. On the way they found the farmers all busy and well along with spring work. Some are repairing the pasture fences, some are planting potatoes, some are drawing manure to the field, others plowing and sowing. No drones among these farmers.

"Isn't that a fine farm?" says one of the boys as they drove up to Edwin Scarborough's home and saw the many acres of clean, well-tilled, productive land. Fine large well arranged barns, models of convenience and in perfect repair, as was the house, even though it was one of the oldest in the country. The whole farm consisted of 260 acres as does the Perrin Scarborough farm, adjoining.

Asking if Mr. Scarborough was home, the farmer was told by Mrs. Scarborough that he, with Arby Allen, had gone to Providence; each with a two-horse load of cheese, butter, eggs and potatoes. The cheese was of last season's make. "I had to make room," she said, "as I shall soon commence making, this season. Farm and dairy products are bringing a little better price than they were a while ago. Potatoes are bringing 30 cents per bushel, cheeses and butter 14 cents per pound and eggs eight cents per dozen."

They arrived home at sundown, finding the chores neatly done by the faithful hired man, Warren Bingham.

After supper they told the good housewife how prosperous the countryside looked and how happy and contented all were with their labor and well kept farms. The farmer kept well abreast of his work and on schedule as the season advanced. Corn was planted in due time and hoeing done in time to not interfere with haying. The first of July was the time for sowing buckwheat—most farmers sowing many acres.

The last Saturday in June the farmer (speaking collectively) hies to Beach pond, to get rifle sand with which to make his sythe rifle. General good times were had, trading horses, wagons, harnesses, jack knives, etc. Each trader got the best of the other fellow, as he will tell you. It is a well known fact that prohibition was not rigidly observed. John Barleycorn was the inspirer of some rough talk and amusement.

The hand scythe and rake were brought into use the first week day after the Fourth to gather the many acres of sweet smelling hay. Oats are soon ripe, calling for the grain cradle, and the golden rye is nodding its head for the use of the cradle and sickle.

Haying done, harvesting of other early crops and fruits of several varieties, call the farmer's attention. The sweet smelling buckwheat has been made very attractive by the warm August sun to the busy bees which are now storing up their winter's supply of sweets in the old box-like hive of which we see many, in a row on the sunny side of the farmer's garden wall, or in a shed-like covering, to protect them from the cold storms of winter.

No prosperous farmer neglects to sow and harvest acres of buckwheat. September sees it brown and ready for the cradle; and soon you will hear the thud of the hand flail in the barn as the farmer boys with blow on blow, sends the three-cornered brown berry flying from the straw. Often at night you hear the clatter of the winnowing mill as it separates the grain from the chaff.

The old tin lantern, suspended on the pitch fork, run into the hay mow, is the guiding light that faintly illuminates the spacious barn often until the hour of nine. Harvesting the corn, of which the farmer has many acres, is soon to be followed by husking bees, and the finding of red ears marks the end of the grain harvest.

Does the farmer liberally patronize the butcher cart or market? I should say not. A fat lamb or calf is to be slaughtered and dealt out by a quarter to Messrs. Jones, Smith and Allen, the farmer keeping his choice of a quarter, the neighbor paying back, quarter for quarter (not counting for weight) when he butchers. Some are lean and some fat, but are accepted as a fair exchange and all are satisfied.

Fall work is nearly finished; bushes that have grown up in the pasture and around the walls have been cut and burned.

A ditch through the wet meadow has been dug to drain it, that it may produce more and sweeter hay. The dirt thrown out has been carted into the barn yard to be composted with the stable manure.

Apples of the jilly flower, greening, russet, baldwin and pearmain varieties are soon to be picked, assorted and stored away for winter use. The small and unsaleable are made into cider for drink and vinegar. A portion that is made of sweet apples, the farmer's wife will boil down and with nice sun-dried apples and quinces added to it, and cooked well together. This will make cider apple sauce and can you imagine a more appetizing condiment?

All products of the field are now gathered and stored except the common field, and rock turnips. After a few slight freezings they are pulled and stored for the house and for stock. They are mixed with meal and the golden pumpkins and fed to the cows to increase their flow of milk and to fat the steer that is to be slaughtered the week before Christmas for family use.

Turkeys in flocks of 50 or more are seen on nearly every farm and with geese, ducks and chickens killed and sold at Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's, help to swell the farmer's bank account, pay taxes and buy necessities for the family.

The good wife is usually the Shepherdess of the poultry family and she comes in for a share of the poultry revenue; she sees that the dressing of the poultry is neatly and properly done. The old maple tree by the farm gate; set out by the farmer in the year 1818, is the roosting, or anchoring place for the turkeys. No matter how severe the storm and wind, they are never dislodged from their roosts. Like a careful sailor when anchored to ride out a storm, they turn their prow o rheads to the wind.

Those two men who are canvassing the farming districts are Captain Daniel Lovett and Asher P. Brown; they are bargaining for the farmer's poultry for the Boston market for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's. They will pay the market price at that time. The poultry is to be fat and full dressed. They call for the poultry at a given time and they are weighed, paid for, parkedin large shoeboxes and then away to market. From ten to 12 cents per pound is the usual price for marketable turkeys. These two men also go into Ohio and buy up herds of young cattle, and drive to the east to replenish the farmer's herds. The sheep raisers of Rutland county, Vermont, come in the late fall with droves of sheep to sell to the farmers, to replace the old and slaughtered sheep and lambs, or to increase their usual flock.

Late December is now here and butchering is the order of the day; the farmer helps the farmer in such work. Mr. A has a fat cow or steer and some five or six fat hogs to slaughter. Mr. B., C. and others have about the same number. The family larder is supplied with the fresh pork, sausage, hams and bacon from one or more of the hogs.

The pork and beef barrels stand side by side in the cellar, filled with choice meat. Lockers of the beef, salted and dried; along with the cured hams and bacon, are put away to be used as required; the balance not needed by the family is sold to the city market man.

A prime turkey for Thanksgiving, a nice fat gosling for Christmas, ducks and chickens are for the family whenever wanted.

Who can be more independent and contented than the farmer of 1858? This is a story of yesterday; facts written from memory. Do you want to hear the story of today, in contrast?

Thanks for the prize slip.

FINE TIME AT PICNIC

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: What a wonderful day for Club No 6's picnic at Wheeler's, We Us', and Yellow Jacket's, who with Prairie Chicken proved to be very fine hostesses. We had a nice dinner and just about enough to go around. I was glad to see so many and some came a long way, especially Foxglove who has good courage to drive so far, and the road men were kind enough to oil the road. If we had walked home "we would have been some tar babies."

Scottie: Was glad you had a chance to ride home.

E L M.: Can you still use the box? I have been having ants for the first time and someone told me to wash shelves with kerosene. I did and they have disappeared. With good wishes to the Corner.

A GRAND TIME AT NORTH STONINGTON

Dear Social Corner Editor and Friends: Seated under a mammoth white pine tree on Willimantic camp ground, Wednesday morning, August 20th, I venture to fulfill my promise and write to the Corner about the grand picnic Tuesday, the 19th, at the beautiful farm of Wheeler, near Pendleton Hill, North Stonington. Here, under lovely shade trees on the spacious lawn where long tables, also chairs, had been arranged for the comfort of Cornerites and guests, 101 in all, including many from Shore Line club, No. 6, four of its members served a bountiful dinner. Prairie Chicken had the honor of being general hostess. She had as assistant hostesses, Wheeler, Yellow Jacket and We Us. Of course those attending brought the customary sandwiches, salads, baked beans, relishes, rolls, pickles, all kinds of cakes and pies to help fill the inner man, while Wheeler made and served a nice hot corn chowder and coffee. The hospitality, the comfortable and attractive farm homestead, with all doors leading to comfortable rooms where one might rest and relax from continuous conversation (there being much sociability among friends who had not met for some time) made the day a pleasant one for all. The setting of the well kept grounds was a bower of beauty, with flower beds galore, numerous potted plants on the wide veranda as well as large ferns, etc., inside; all were greatly admired, especially by those interested in flowers. Among the decorations on the long tables where dinner was served, also on the front steps, were huge bouquets of golden-glow and goldenrod. After leaving the main state highway at North Stonington, when proceeding past Grange hall and up the long hill to the destination, automobile parties, several in number, were guided by yellow bows which, with the floral decorations, were all indicative of the Corner color. Cities and towns represented included Worcester, Mass., Southington, Plainfield, Franklin, Norwich, Norwich Town, Poquetanuck, Stonington, North Stonington, and Westerly. A picturesque view was also afforded from this high altitude New York, Providence and other large cities being pointed out miles distant.

At this point I would like to mention the modern and very large stock barn on this farm where are housed at night and in bad weather, about 60 head of fine cattle, six plump horses, one pony, a pet of the family, as well as six goats. Other pets that mingled among the company present were a pretty collie dog and of course the family cat.

Some of those present whose pen names represented a living creature were Hoot Owl, Prairie Chicken, Meadow Lark, Yellow Jacket and a Miller, the last named, a guest.

Speaking of the dinner I should have made reference to the helpers who so kindly did their part, E. L. M., Cosmos and others, also meant to state that the singing of the Doxology led by Meadow Lark, preceded the dinner, which would not have been quite complete, without giving praise to God from whom all blessings flow.

Would very much like to mention what a delightful time we have had at the camp ground this day. Following luncheon Meadow Lark and I called at two places where Norwich Town friends have a cottage, and lastly paid a visit to a very nice person whom by chance we happened to meet at this location in September, 1929. This lady owns and occupies the oldest cottage there, situated on Church Circle. Since our first meeting I feel and trust a lasting friendship has been cultivated between us, though, until the date referred to, perfect strangers.

Bonnie Bell, Prairie Chicken and Topsy: We thank you much for your nice compliment.

Georgette: Picture received all O. K. but fail to see much of either one of us, yet we are there some where in the background. If not mistaken, I believe all roads lead to North Windham, Wednesday next. Best wishes from LOWTHORPE.

VISIT TO THE PASSION PLAY

Dear Social Corner: At each city, Bergen, Oslo, Stockholm, Berlin, Prague and Vienna, I have wanted to write, but there were so many things to tell I gave it up.

After our visit at the "Passion Play," I cannot give you a faint idea of it, but I am going to try. The little town reminds me of a dish with irregular sides with little toy houses put into it. It is surrounded with mountains and looking up you see no way to get out, but the roads winding around through a wonderful country are as fine as our state roads. I wonder why a handful of people settled in this mountain valley so far away. The play since 1634 to the community has been a holy obligation, fulfillment of a vow made after a terrible plague in 1632, when many people died. In Garmish there is an inscription telling us in 1633 only two married couples remained of the people, and no end to the pestilence. At Garmish there is a plague cross and chapel built to St. Sebastian. Rohigrib has a church erected at the Plague cemetery, and Oberammergau has its "Holy Play." The council met in their village church and made the vow to hold the Passion Play every ten years. From then on not another died from the plague, those sick recovered and it was sure death before.

The first play was in 1634. The text of the play dates back to the 15th century, but was revised by Darsenberger, who spent his life making it realistic and putting the crude things aside. With 1930 the community have joyfully kept the promise for three hundred years. For over two hundred years the play brought great losses and hardships as there was a war that took the "Christos" away, but all expense has been shared by church and community. Even today the greatest sacrifices are made for fulfillment of the vow. Thirty years ago the government made them build a new theatre and now Oberammergau stands behind the great expense. They do not seek honor or undue gain. It's a mission, and fulfillment of a vow made by their forefathers, and leads the world under the cross of Jesus. The play is beautiful. I, who did not want to see it, and have thought it was not right to do it, will never again think so. The people themselves make you feel they have something no others possess. They are happy, greeting outsiders yet keeping it their own. The men with long haid and unshaven faces have the strong, independent look of men of the mountains. They not only play but work. Many are carvers of wood. The prologue is recited by Anton Lang, the "Christos" for many years. All the world knows and lives him. He talked with every one, wrote his name and took us through his pretty home. I wish I could take every Sister to the play, I can not describe it. The music is delightful, actors wonderful, and then to meet them as table waiters. And when you think of them it's just as loveable people.

I think there is only one way to know them, see and be with them. There were 5,000 people at the play the day we were there, and as there were so many more, they held a council and decided to repeat it the next day also, and the house was again full, people going and coming all the time, many of us Americans. The band and village people paraded to tell everyone the play would be held tomorrow and the boys with long hair parted in the middle, girls with bright dresses and long braids down their back, and Tyrolese mountaineers in their short embroidered pants, hats with an artist badger blender I called it as big as a feather duster or a turkey feather. That tells you they are mountaineers and one of the most respect-worthy of the human race. Also some of the Americans joined in the singing and laughing, but when the bells swing out in the upper air the "Angelus" every hat is raised and all remain bareheaded until the bells cease to peal. They have along the public road wherever accidents have happened a shrine. Ettal used to be a famous place for pilgrimage and even now its Madonna is an object of reverence of all the country side. The Benedictine monks bought back the monastery that had been sold for a brewery. The story goes that the image of the Madonna is invisible to a reprobate. These shrines, some small and others larger than life, are at homes, roadsides and back in the fields. The whole of Oberammergau is not over 1,600 people. It seems an ideal picture with its clean white walls of houses, green window shutters, with sometimes pictures of Bible stories painted and mosque like minaret flowers and shrines and high over head a white cross on lofty Rofel mountain crag that seems to guard the valley

Ramsay MacDonald, England's premier, was at the play, came late in the morning with his daughter and was on the back row. Some recognized him, but no one said a word, but after the intermission at 11:30, the play begins at two hours intermission, again at 2 until 6, before all were seated all stood and faced the premier and he had to get up and acknowledge it. That was the only noise the whole day through, except now and then a woman sobbed, but every one had a handkerchief and perfect silence prevailed. We came and went silently.

I wonder if that could ever happen in America, where even in church we stop and talk. Well I have not told you of the play, just the place. Hope I have not tried your patience.

We had a ride at Inbrick on the "Cable Railroad," where a car takes you over a rope way up 7,000 feet to a mountain top with snow. There we had lunch, waited for the sunset, and saw the city with its lights way below. It was rather scarey but grand.

Tomorrow we go from here (Zurich, Switzerland) to Paris in airplane, six hour ride, but stop at Basle one hour for lunch. I may write about it but airplanes are now like autoes, everybody's doing it.

Love to you all.

SUSANNA.

CUBS TEAR INTO GIANTS TO EVEN SERIES AS ROOT PITCHES BRILLIANT GAME

CHICAGO, Aug. 22—(AP)—Joe McCarthy's Cubs, battling to keep the lead in the National league championship race, threw the New York Giants into reverse today, winning by 12 to 4 and evening up their important series.

The general outline of the game was about the same as yesterday when the Giants trounced the Cubs 13 to 6—but with everything in reverse.

A rousing first inning which was worth five runs to the Cubs, started the National league champions, and a big eighth frame, in which five more Cubs crossed the plate, soldered the position. The Giants won by about the same procedure yesterday, scoring six in the first and five in the eighth.

Charley Root was just as good a pitcher today as he was against Brooklyn last week. He held the Manhattan maulers to nine hits, and was in trouble only in the eighth when the Giants scored twice. Freddie Lindstrom, a Chicago boy, playing third base for the Giants, cracked a home run off Root in the first inning, but the blow was a mild affair compared to Gabby Hartnett's twenty-seventh of the season in the eighth, with the bases full.

Davy Bancroft, in charge of the Giants during the absence in New York of Manager John McGraw, started Pete Donohue as his pitcher. It took the Cubs about five minutes to drive Donohue to cover. The first four men to face him—Blair, English, Cuyler and Hack Wilson—singled, accounting for two runs, and Donohue was pulled and Hub Pruett, who finished for the Giants yesterday was sent in. Dan Taylor popped out, but Kelly and Hartnett walked, the latter's pass forcing in Cuyler. Bell finished the scoring with a single that counted Wilson and Hartnett.

Pruett was removed for a pinch batsman in the seventh and Bug Parmalee went in. He got by the seventh in good shape, fanning two men, but was caught in the eighth inning Cub drive. He walked English, who was forced at second by Cuyler. Cuyler stole second and Wilson walked. Long George Kelly lashed a single off Parmalee's shins and Cuyler scored. With the bases filled Gabby Hartnett pounded the ball into the right field bleachers for his twenty-seventh homer and four more runs.

The Cubs filled the bases in the second without the aid of a hit but failed to score when Critz made a fine stop of Hartnett's drive to second. English accounted for the next two Cub runs. In the fourth he got a single and went to second on Jackson's bad throw to first and counted on Cuyler's single. In the sixth he slammed a home run into the right field stands.

The total of the Chicago attack was 12 hits, most of them clustered for runs.

The game was watched by another overflow crowd of 45,000 persons, including 17,500 ladies' day guests, which with 35,000 yesterday, made a total of 80,000 for the first half of the series.

Charles Evans Hughes, chief justice of the United States in Chicago for the American Bar association meeting, saw the game from the third inning to the finish, and saw the Cubs regain their margin of three games over the Giants and add a full game to their lead over Brooklyn, which lost to Cincinnati.

The victory was the Cub's seventh in 17 games against the Giants, and was New York's eighth setback in 20 games.

Pat Malone will pitch for Chicago tomorrow, and Carl Hubbell, another Giants southpaw ace, will be his adversary.

TRAYNOR STARS AS PIRATES WIN THEIR 5TH STRAIGHT

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 22—(AP)—Old Tom Zachary was hit freely in the pinches while Larry French kept Boston's nine hits scatered here today and Pittsburgh defeated Boston 10 to 3. The hitting of Pie Traynor, Pirate third baseman and captain, aided his club to run up the large score. He drove in four hits and made one himself.

It was the fourth straight victory for the Pirates.

CARDINALS POUND FOUR PHILLY PITCHERS FOR WIN

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 22—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals, pounding four Philadelphia pitchers, overcame an early lead to win their second straight from the Phillies here today 10 to 8. Thirty-two players took part in the game which lasted two hours and a half.

Chuck Klein hit his 31st home run of the season.

The heavy stick work for the Cardinals was done by Gus Mancuso who drove in four runs, three of which came in the eighth inning when the Cardinals were trailing 7 to 8. His double with the bases loaded gave the Cardinals the game.

Flint Rhem, who went to the hill for the Cardinals in the sixth, gained credit for the victory.

REDS DOWN ROBINS FOR THIRD TIME IN SERIES

CINCINNATI, Aug. 22—(AP)—Cincinnati's Reds handed Brooklyn its fifth straight defeat and its third of the series today by 4 to 1, dropping the third place Robins another game behind the Chicago Cubs.

Larry Benton and Dazzy Vance were about equally matched in the mound duel, Brooklyn getting seven hits and Cincinnati six, but the Robin defense wavered at times and the two runs the Reds scored in the eighth to clinch the victory were due to an error by Hendrick. He muffed Red Lucas' drive to left when the bases were full.

The Robins' only run, their third in their last four games, came in the seventh when Bissonette doubled and Ike Boone drove him in with a pinch single.

MISS NUTHALL MEETS MRS. HARPER IN FINALS

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Blond and blue-eyed Betty Nuthall, England's darling of tennis courts, will make her second bid for the American women's championship tomorrow.

The 21-year-old British girl enters the final round favored to beat Mrs Anna Harper, of San Francisco, fifth ranking American player, and carry to England for the first time the title forfeited by Helen Wills Moody, winner of six of the last seven tournaments.

Miss Nuthall furnished the only thrill of the semi-finals today by overcoming the spirited hard-hitting Marjorie Morrill of Dedham, Mass., to win in three sets, 6-8, 6-4, 6-2. Bounding Betty's superior experience, control and greater stamina saved the day for her after Miss Morrill, by the sheer force of her attack, had pulled out the first set and gained a 4-2 lead in the second.

Mrs. Harper, a left-hander, was offered no such keen opposition as she swept through the other semi-final match at the expense of the Baroness Maud Rosenbaum Levi of Rome, Italy. The Californian won 6-2, 6-3, easily outstroking the former Chicagoan as she came from behind in each set to run out six straight games.

H. N. S. Vs. Wauregan Indies Sunday

Sunday, the heavy slugging Holy Name team of Jewett City goes to Wauregan to play the fast stepping Wauregan Independents. The H. N. S. have been going great guns ever since Joe Gilbert took up the coaching reins. He has had the boys out for practice every night this week and feels that he has snapped the boys into winning form.

Vachon, the ace twirler of the Holy Name team, is expected to be Gilbert's choice for mound duty. He is especially noted for his ability to strike out opposing batters. He struck out as many as thirteen batters in seven innings. There is no doubt about Pizzo doing the catching.

The rest of the line-up includes Perry, 1b; Bush, 2b; Kusek, ss; Solenski, 3b; Sionski, lf; Gaska or Liberty, cf; Beaulieu, rf.

THAMESVILLE WINS PLAYGROUND TITLE

Thamesville playground took two tight games from Greeneville by the scores 5-3 and 5-3, to win the playgrounds baseball crown yesterday. The games were well played and many snappy plays were turned in by both teams.

The outstanding player of the afternoon was Perusnik, the Thamesville pitcher. After holding Greeneville to four hits and three runs in the first game he relieved Dynon, the starting pitcher of the second game in the second and proceeded to hold Greeneville to one hit and one run in the second game. Perringer won the first game with a double to right field which scored two runs.

J. Seneski caught two good games for Thamesville. The whole Thamesville team played great ball. Glowaki was the outstanding hitter of the second game.

Malogrides, Oulette, Quinn and Watters were outstanding for Greeneville. Much credit can be given to both playground instructors for the fine coached teams. John Greene umpired.

HENRY GROMKO WINS LOCAL CADDY TOURNEY

Henry Gromko, better known to the local golfers as "Snooky Jumbo," is king of the caddies at the Norwich Golf club by virtue of his 3 and 2 victory over Johnny Murphy on Friday morning. Snooky was something of a dark horse in the tournament and little attention was paid to him until he decisively defeated Shorty Gilman in the semi-finals. Murphy had been considered as the favorite and his defeat of Jack Skelly made him an almost sure bet to win the title. However Snooky upset all the dope when he played Murphy off his feet sewing up the match on the sixteenth hole. Snooky shot brilliant golf while Murphy was slightly off his game and did not play the same game that he did in eliminating Skelly.

CITY LEAGUE BANQUET OPEN TO THE PUBLIC

Announcement was made last night by the City league board of governors that there was a demand from the fans for tickets to the banquet to be held on September 2, with the close of the season. Everyone concerned is delighted to find such an interest among the fans. The directors requested that it be made known that anyone may come to the "blow-out" on the payment of actual costs. The price per ticket is $2 and tickets may be secured from any of the league governors. The banquet will be held at the Norwich inn.

JOHNNY GREENE SHUTS OUT ITALIANS TO KEEP CITIZENS AT TOP OF LEAGUE

Johnny Greene shut out the Italians 2 to 0, at the campus last night and won one of the sweetest pitching duels of the year from Lefty Lucier. Johnny won and deserves credit for the win but he won because the team that he had behind him is a better one than the Italians. True, Greene allowed but four hits while Lucier gave five but when one considers the flock of hitters Lefty worked against his performance is all the more impressive.

Lucier struck out eight men, Greene whiffed five and each ticketed three.

The game was one of the most well played of the season, seven innings being played in about an hour and a quarter. Both clubs contributed their share of fielding feats and but one slip was made during the entire evening, that being a wild heave in the third by T. Kegler, Italian third sacker. As it turned out the error had no effect on the score. The Citizen infield was exceptionally nice, the West, Jarvis, Cimmy and Finn combination working like a piece of well oiled machinery. Cimmy was probably the best of the bunch, handling nine chances without a miss.

The Cits scored their runs piecemeal, one in the first and the other in the fourth. In the opening frame, after Cimmy and Leo Jarvis had flied out, Charlie Lamory got a single and scored almost immediately on Tony West's three base rap into deep right. The second counter was the result of Gaudette's walk and steal and Cimmy's single smash into right.

In the fourth, the Italians put three men on bases but the hitting power was not there, the runners remaining stranded. After Pheno Tombari flied out to Cimmy, Yerrington got a long two-bagger into left. T. Kegler walked and Woodward popped to Leo Jarvis. F. Kegler filled the bags when his hit bounded out of Johnny Greene's glove. Dorsey, however, fanned.

West, with his triple, garnered the long distance hitting honors and Cimmy and Lamory led in quantity, with two singles each. The score:

SHYMAS CLASH TODAY WITH WILLIMANTIC STARS

The attraction this afternoon for the baseball lovers will be at the Providence street grounds, Taftville, where the Willimantic All Stars invade the village to do battle with the local Shymas in the third game of their five game series. Each team so far has one victory to its credit and this game is bound to be a hummer. There is plenty of rivalry between the two towns and the Thread City is sending down a big delegation to cheer their team to victory over the Shymas who are without a doubt the fastest amateur team in the state, barring none.

All the fans who have seen the Willimantic boys in action know that they have one of the best teams in this section of the state. All that was needed was a couple of good pitchers and it seems that they have got them in securing Butsy Weisgraber of last year's N. F. A. team, who pitched the only no-hit no-run game in the Dusty league this season, and Haggerty, a boy who has been performing at college the past season. These two, with Lefty Smith, the old Baltimore Oriole star, form one of the best hurling staffs in semi-pro ball. In their line-up are several former Windham High athletes who are now playing semi-pro baseball with the best in the state. Last Sunday the Willimantic boys defeated the Holy Name team of Hartford and feel sure that they will return home on the long end of the score. The All Stars will lineup as follows: Holden, lf; Nichols, former all around athlete at Windham, 2b; Meikle, who is batting for an average of .714 this season, ss; Peligar, 3b; Southward, 1b; Smith, c; Weisgraber, Haggerty or Lefty Smith, p; Bill Anderson, Stroka, and Kegler, utility; Wamer, rf.

The Shymas have also strengthened for the remainder of the season as Manager Phaneuf has signed two new players, namely, Pete Raymond, who has been performing with the Wauregan Grays and also pitched for the American Legions, who will bolster up the pitching staff, and Pete Finn, the heavy hitter of the Army-Navy team, who will play in left field. These two players will add much hitting power to the Shyma boys, who have quite an array of the slugger type. They will take the field in the following order: Plewicz, 3b; Pete Bunk, 2b; Wilke, 1b; N. Lemieux, of the Thermos team, ss; Jerry Raymond, cf; Pete Finn, lf; Burelle, c; Benoit or Dudeck, rf; Faucher, Pete Raymond or Sammy Raymond, pitch.

On Sunday the local team will travel to Willimantic when they will again clash with the All Stars in the fourth game of the series. The locals have high hopes of finishing up the series in this game. They will present their full strength and it is expected that either Faucher or Pete Raymond will do the hurling with Burelle on the receiving end.

INDIANS RUN WINNINGS TO SEVEN STRAIGHT

NEW YORK, Aug. 22—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians extended their winning streak to seven straight games today by winning a second clash from the Yankees, 5 to 4, despite the slugging of Lou Gehrig.

Gehrig set the pace as home runs played the major part in deciding the game. He clouted his 36th and 37th of the season to account for two Yankee runs and scored the fourth New York tally on Dickey's single. Earl Averill hit one for Cleveland with a man on base and Bib Falk connected for another.

Sherid's wildness finally cost the Yankees the game. He issued a pass with the bases full just before he was removed in the fifth inning and a sacrifice fly followed to give Cleveland the run needed to win the game.

MILLER IN FIRST 15 IN CAPE COD OPEN

CHATHAM, Mass., Aug. 22—(AP)—Long Jim Barnes, former U. S. and British open golf champion, led a field of more than 60 amateur and professional golfers in the opening round of the Cape Cod open championship at the Eastward Ho course here today with a 36 hole score of 149.

A strong northeast wind raised havoc with the players. Such low scorers as Jess Sweetser, Fred Wright, Jr., and Bobby Cruickshank were unable to get under the 80 mark. Barnes was a strong favorite to win the title in the final 36 hole play tomorrow.

Among the leading 15 entrants was Massie Miller, Norwich, Conn., 87-76—163.

TILDEN AND ALLISON TO MEET FOR TITLE TODAY

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 22.—(AP)—With the national tennis championships just around the corner, Big Bill Tilden, who has dominated the American game for the past decade or so, still appears to have a firm grip on the court situation.

The lanky national champion, despite his long years of service, today advanced into the two championship rounds of the important Newport Casino invitation tournament. He gained the title round of the singles play on what might be termed a fluke, advancing on the default of his intimate friend and doubles partner, Frank Hunter, of New Rochelle, N. Y. Both proved, however, that they were still important factors in the net game by gaining the last round of the doubles play with an impressive straight set victory over Jack Tidball and Gerald Bartosh, two steady Californian youngsters, who have been having their first fling at major tennis this season.

The veterans met the west coasters in the semi-finals match in the lower half of the draw and defeated them easily, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3. Tidball and Bartosh are a steady doubles team but their play indicated that they had several years to go before they acquire the experience and the strokes necessary to defeat such seasoned racqueteers as the former national champions.

Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., member of the Davis cup doubles team and co-holder of the Wimbledon team championship, won the right to meet Tilden in the singles final by defeating George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago, 2-6, 6-3, 7-5, 6-3, in the upper half semi-final.

COLD CASH WINS FEATURE RACE AT HARTFORD OVAL

HARTFORD, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Cold Cash, Blue Ridge colt, romped away with the big stake in the final day's program of "roaring grand" racing at the Charter Oak track this afternoon, when with Walter Breitenfield holding the reins, he captured the three-year-old trot for a purse of $1,500 in straight heats. Bob Galloway, owned by W. N. Reynolds, of Winston-Salem, N. C., scored a brilliant victory in the 2:14 trot, three times circling the oval at the top of a fast field. Harry Stokes kept him in front for most of the distance in every heat.

Harry Brusie brought Day Tide, owned by the Rainbow club, of Hartford, into first money in the 2:22 class trot with two first places and one third, and reined Peter McGowan, from his own stable, to victory in the special trot.

None of Cold Cash's brilliant finishes was closely contested. He took the first heat with a half length over Arthur Mower, driven by Dill, came under the wire with nearly two lengths over the same horse in the second, and had two lengths over Capital Stock, reined by Harry Brusie, in the third.

Bob Galloway had little opposition in the 2:14 trot, coasting in with nearly a length margin in every heat. Happy the Great, strong favorite, hit off his stride rounding the first turn in the opening heat and was distanced.

SARAZEN STEPS OUT IN FRONT IN WESTERN OPEN

INDIANWOOD CLUB, Orion, Mich., Aug. 22—(AP)—Gene Sarazen is out in front of another golf championship parade.

The stocky Italian professional from New York today bounded two strokes ahead of a deadlocked field in the drive for the western open golf championship with a par-breaking total of 142 for the first 36 holes of the 72 hole stretch.

Tied for fifth place yesterday with a 73, the former national open champion shot a 69 today that sent him ahead of the field and labelled him as the one man to beat in the 36 hole final tomorrow.

Tied for second place, two strokes behind Sarazen tonight, were Harry Hampton, Chicago professional, whose 69 topped the field yesterday, Chris Brinkle, Detroit amateur, who shot a record-equalling 67 for the best round of the day, Emerick Kocsis, young Detroit professional; Bob Shave, Cleveland professional, and the veteran Al Watrous of Detroit.

All of the favorites with the exception of the defending champion, Tommy Armour of Detroit, who has a 153, 11 strokes behind Sarazen and just three strokes away from the qualifying dead line of 156 which left 73 remain in the field for tomorrow's play.

Densmore Shute of Columbus, Ohio, and Abe Espinosa of Chicago, 1928 champion, had 146s; Horton Smith and "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn of New York, Ed Dudley of Wilmington, Del., and Charles Kocsis of Detroit, Mich., state amateur champion, trailed with 147s; Walter Hagen scored a par 72 today, for 149.

Henry Ciuci, Stratford, Conn., carded a 79 today which added to his 73 yesterday gave him a 152.

TIGERS POUND EARNSHAW FOR EASY VICTORY

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22—(AP)—The Detroit Tigers turned in their first triumph in three games with the Athletics here today, when they clubbed George Earnshaw out of the box in five innings and defeated the world's champions 7 to 1.

A wild throw by Bishop gave the Tigers two runs in the first inning, to which they added another pair in the fourth when Dale Alexander hit a homer behind Gehringer's triple. In the next inning four hits and a wild throw by Foxx helped Detroit to a cluster of three additional tallies.
